SUES 5 STATE TREASURERS

PARLEY SEEMS SURE TO BRING NAVAL HOLIDAY

Nations Will Unite to Aid China.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—As the second week of the international conference came to a close today there was a fairly well defined provision among the leading delegates of the character and extent of the eventual results of their labors.

The negotiations have progressed to a point which appears to justify the following forecast of the outcome:

1. An agreement on a naval holiday providing for the radical reduction and limitation of naval armament, to which not only the United States, Great Britain, and Japan, but the other powers represented, and eventually all other nations, will subscribe, thus constituting the association of nations for minimizing the possibility of war, which President Harding has long contemplated.

Agreement to Aid China.

2. An agreement of the powers on the general principles of a self-denying ordinance governing their relations with China, designed to put an end to aggressions upon the territorial and administrative integrity of the oriental republic and to assist the Chinese nation to regain unity and stability.

3. Application of these principles to existing conditions in such manner as to bring about the withdrawal by the powers of some of the restrictions upon the independent action of the Chinese government.

4. Postponement of the application of the principles to more difficult far eastern problems, and of consideration of further assistance to China to a subsequent conference of the powers to be held, possibly in Peking, in the course of the next two years.

Japan to Retain Manchuria.

5. Tacit approval of the Japanese retaining their interests in Manchuria, on the understanding that the open door or equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of the nations of all countries be maintained, and that the territorial and administrative integrity of China be respected.

6. Dissolution of the Anglo-Japanese alliance by the formal joint announcement of Great Britain and Japan that its purpose of stabilizing peace in the orient will be more adequately achieved under the changed conditions by the understanding reached by all the powers on far eastern questions.

The widespread popular sentiment in Great Britain, the United States, and Japan in favor of the reduction and limitation of naval armament has been the best guarantee from the start of the success of the conference as to its principal object. If the delegates should go home without achieving that aim they would be received with a howl of popular disapprobation. Consequently they will stick to the job till that task is accomplished.

U. S. Plan Forces Hands.

The factor of success next in importance was the presentation at the outset of a tangible, clear cut plan for naval reduction by the American government. Diplomatic jockeying at once became out of the question. The foreign delegations were compelled to meet the American suggestions with answers as definite as the proposal, and the result was an immediate start on the consideration of a concrete program. With differing views on details in process of adjustment, an agreement on the reduction of armament already is in sight.

The far eastern problem has proved tremendously more difficult, and the measure of success of that subsidiary aim of the conference cannot yet be definitely assayed.

Under the sagacious leadership of Secretary of State Hughes and Elihu Root, however, the conference, proceeding by the line of least resistance, has laid down the theory of a new deal for China which is to govern in the future, and is now involved in the mazes of consideration of the extent to which it is feasible to apply this theory to the reform of existing conditions and to the annulment of the aggressions of the past upon China.

Must Move Slowly with China.

To unshackle China all at once would be a vast undertaking. The more the situation is studied the more the delegates are convinced that it cannot be completely accomplished at this conference. For that reason the conviction is growing that many of the matters under examination must, of necessity, be postponed.

It has been suggested that with China encouraged by the action of this congress of the nations the holding of another conference in Peking in a year or two would do much to raise the prestige of the republic and to enable the government to stabilize internal conditions.

ARTICLE XV.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—In a previous paper I have set out the plain facts of the condition of central and eastern Europe. It is a breakup of the modern civilization system, due to the smashing up of money, without which organized town life, factory production, education, and systematic communications are unworkable.

If it goes on unchecked to its natural conclusion central and eastern Europe will follow Russia to a condition in which the towns will be dying or dead, empty and ruinous, the railroads passing out of use, and in which few people will be left alive except uneducated and degenerating peasants and farmers, growing their own food and keeping a rough order among themselves in their own fashion.

Sees Return to Barbarism.

We are faced, indeed, with a return to barbarism over all these areas. They are going back to the conditions of rural Asia Minor or the Balkans.

How far is this degeneration going to spread?

Let us recognize at once that it need spread no further. It is not an inevitable process. It could be arrested, it could be turned back and a rapid restoration of our shattered civilization could be set going right away if the leading powers of the world, sinking their political ambitions for a time, could meet frankly, to work out a bankruptcy arm that would release the impoverished nations from debt and give them again a valid money, a stable money, with a trustworthy exchange value, that could be accepted with confidence and saved without deterioration.

Upon that things could be set going again hopefully. Education has not degenerated as yet, habits of work and trading and intercourse are still strong enough to make such a recovery possible.

Russia the Exception.

Except perhaps in Russia. Russia, for all we know, may have sunken very deep. But if there is no vigorous world effort made soon, the trading class, the foreman class, the technically educated class, the professional class, the teachers, and so forth, will have been broken up and dispersed. These classes are comparatively easy to destroy; extremely hard to reconstruct. Modern civilization will really have been destroyed, if not for good, for a long period, over great areas if these classes go.

And the process is at present still spreading rapidly. If it gets Germany—and it seems to be getting Germany—then Italy may follow. Italy is linked very closely to Germany economically and financially. The death of Germany will chill the economic blood of Italy.

Italy is passionately anxious to disarm on land and sea. But Italy cannot disarm while France maintains a great army and makes great naval preparations. France's refusal to disarm prevents Italy from disarming.

Says Italy Is Near Crisis.

The lira sways and sinks; its value fluctuates not perhaps so widely as do marks and kronen, but much too widely for healthy industrial life and social security. And Italy is troubled by its restless Nationalists, a whooping, flag-waving crew without foresight or any genuine love of country. If nothing is done, I think I would give Germany about six months and north Italy two years before a revolutionary collapse occurs.

And France?

This new rhetorical France which remains heavily armed while no man threatens, which builds new ships to fight non-existent German armies and guards itself against the threats of long dead German generals; the renascent France which jostles against Italy and England and believes that it can humbug America for good and all while it does these things, will it achieve its manifest ambition and remain dominant in Europe, the dominance of the last survivor, the cock upon the dunghill of a general decay? I doubt it.

Presages Fall of Franc.

Watch the franc upon the exchange as the true meaning of the French search for "security" dawns upon the world. Watch the subscription to the next French loan to pay for more submarines and more Senegalese.

It may prove to be too difficult a feat

Lloyd George Sails for U. S. on Saturday

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Prime Minister Lloyd George is planning to sail for America next Saturday on the Aquitania. Nothing short of a British catastrophe will prevent him from carrying out his intention.

Premier Briand's New York speech, it is said, on top of all the other features of the French attitude at Washington, clinched his determination to go and convinced him of the necessity of his presence if the conference is not to be a failure.

Lloyd George Angry.

I am informed that the prime minister is bitterly angry at what some British circles call M. Briand's flippancy and he has expressed himself freely to his intimates about what he describes as French folly in antagonizing England.

He was disposed to overlook the earlier speeches, but it is said that he regards the New York utterance as a studied insult.

The Italians, too, are reported here to be deeply wounded by M. Briand's alleged insulting reference to their army.

"French Imperialism Bared."

In British diplomatic circles the opinion is held that the Irish did Great Britain a real service in preventing Mr. Lloyd George from attending the opening session of the conference. The basis of this theory is that if he had gone he would have kept M. Briand in order, but in the absence of his restraining wisdom the French premier lost his temper and exhibited what is called French imperialism and militarism in their nakedness to American eyes.

"BUM," KING OF CANINE HOBOS, QUITS THE ROAD

Clinton, Ia., Nov. 26.—"Bum," the Northwestern railway's renowned canine traveler, today sleeps his last long sleep within earshot of his old time friends, the main line trains.

His grave is beside the rails over which he made innumerable trips, asleep in way cars and even in passenger coaches. "Bum" had completed the lotted span of canine years and yesterday went into the "terminal" on time, a policeman's bullet ending his suffering due to old age and encroaching disease.

The dog had "adopted" the railroad and was as faithful as the most trusted employé. He spent his time entirely either "on the road," in the freight-yards, or at switch or signal shanties and was a favorite with the men.

Like Topsy, who "jes' grew," Bum's antecedents are unknown. Befriended one cold night by a signal shanty man, he just naturally "adopted" the railroad.

WIFE, HUSBAND FOUND DEAD IN FRONT OF HOME

Gallup, N. M., Nov. 26.—Mystery shrouds the double slaying here last night of J. W. Blackwell, Jr., a mine clerk, and his wife. They were shot to death in front of their home. An empty automatic cartridge shell was found between the bodies.

A dentist and his wife who passed the Blackwell residence said they saw a man and woman walking in the direction of the house. A few minutes later, two shots were heard and they returned to the Blackwell home. They saw a woman, alone, running down the street.

They notified the police, who searched the neighborhood with no results. Neighbors corroborated the dentist's story. One man said he saw a man with a leather coat running down the street.

Once a Pauper Girl, Now Claims $15,000,000 Estate

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Mrs. George F. Leahy, a Boston attorney. Mrs. Murray is the wife of an employé of the General Electric company. Her early years were spend in a home for destitute children.

UNION EXPELS HOWAT AND ALL HIS FOLLOWERS

Pittsburg, Kas., Nov. 26.—The final order expelling Alexander Howat and his followers in the Kansas miners' union for refusal to obey the orders of the international union was issued by that organization today.

Originally the international set Nov. 16 as the last day for idle miners to return to work to hold their membership in the union. On Nov. 17 the international announced that all miners who returned to work by Nov. 26 would be reinstated in the union without the payment of the $10 fee which the bylaws prescribe.

The expulsion order issued today states that the former officers of the union can be reinstated in the organization only by action of the international board.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 26.—[United Press.]—Customs inspectors in a new search of the oceanic steamer Sonoma, whose currency tanks were found to have been looted of $125,000 in English gold when she arrived here Tuesday, today discovered 450 bottles of whisky concealed in the provision compartments of the steamer's lifeboats.

YIELD MATERNITY OR BABIES, JUDGE ORDERS MOTHER

Must Go Under Knife or Lose Children.

Denver, Colo., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Judge Royal Graham, sitting in the Juvenile court today, established a precedent when he recommended that an operation be performed on Mrs. Clyde Cassidente, so that she will have no more children.

Mrs. Cassidente already has five young children, and evidence was introduced by social workers to show that they were undernourished and that the home was dirty.

Ray Sunderland, a medical student, testifying in behalf of the husband, who is a notary public, said he had attended the mother before the birth of one of the children.

Student Suggests Operation.

He said the home was not as clean as it might be and conditions were not ideal, but he believed the conditions were caused by Mrs. Cassidente's bearing children so fast.

Sunderland suggested that the mother be permitted to keep the five children, but she be operated upon so her flock would not increase.

Judge Graham announced that he would order the suggestion carried out. Social service workers had asked that the children be taken from the mother and put in better surroundings.

Judge Graham continued the case until Jan. 10 on condition that a committee composed of members of the Federated Charities and the Visiting Nurse association confer with Mr. and Mrs. Cassidente, suggesting that "sterilization" be performed. He said that both father and mother must consent before the operation actually is performed.

Husband Favors Step.

Sunderland said that he had made the suggestion to Cassidente and that he had looked on it with favor. It was indicated that the mother's desire to keep her five children with her might bring about her consent to the operation, since otherwise the social workers would continue their effort to have the children taken from her.

The Cassidentes live at 1039 Platte street. The evidence was to the effect that Cassidente was away from home much of the time and was unable to give his wife sufficient assistance to keep the home in good condition.

MOPLAHS DEFY BRITISH TO FIGHT WITHOUT CANNON

BY THOMAS RYAN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MADRAS, Nov. 26.—The Mallapuram drive south of the Beypore river is reaching the last stage, and the British hope that the Moplahs may take a stand, thus ensuring a decisive battle. They feel it is urgent to push this campaign to a successful conclusion because of the disturbances in other parts of India, especially in Bombay.

At present the Moplah resistance is weakening, many bands of Moplahs surrendering in groups of two or three hundred. The leaders are held for trial and the remainder are dismissed subject to a summons.

The troops have been pushing the band eastward towards the Silent valley, where leeches and bats have driven animal life into the heaviest jungles. The Moplahs have issued a challenge for a battle without cannons and armored cars, which they consider unfair.

BRUNDAGE ASKS ACCOUNTING ON INTEREST FUNDS

Charges Money of State Diverted.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Suits filed by Attorney General Brundage against five former state treasurers yesterday startled politicians and others who have been microscopically watching every move made in the criminal prosecution of Gov. Len Small and Lieut. Gov. Fred E. Sterling.

Two of the civil actions were instituted against those two officials as former treasurers, and the details of the charges made in the state bills were believed to disclose a hitherto unrevealed strength of the prosecution in the approaching trial at Waukegan.

The suits are for the recovery of interest on state funds which, it is alleged, has been withheld during the last twelve years—ever since the passage of the act of 1909 requiring state treasurers to deposit state funds in regularly established banks and to turn over all interest to the state.

Sue for Interest.

Two of the suits are directed at Andrew Russel, the present state auditor, who served two two year terms as state treasurer, having been elected to that office in 1908 and 1914. A third is against Edward E. Mitchell, who was elected in 1910, and a fourth against William Ryan, Jr., the only Democrat in the list, who was elected in 1912.

Charges against these men are based on estimates of the amount of interest they should have received if the funds in their hands, according to the record of their monthly balances on hand, had been deposited according to law. There, in they differ materially from the actions against Small and Sterling.

In these two instances detailed allegations are made concerning the modus operandi of the conspiracy alleged in the Sangamon county indictments. For the first time a complete official narration is given of the method by which the so-called Small-Curtis-Sterling combination is charged with pocketing the interest on $10,000,000 or more of state funds.

What State Seeks to Prove.

In this connection came the surprise for the close observers of the Small case. After reading the bills filed, they concluded that in the Waukegan trial the state is prepared to prove that:

Some of the interest withheld from the state during Sterling's term went directly to Small.

Supposed deposits in the Grant Park bank, a defunct institution, never were deposited there, even in form.

This money was invested in hitherto unmentioned securities in addition to the notes of Armour & Co. and Swift & Co.

A total largely in excess of the previously published figure of $10,000,000 was used in this way.

Interest payments on deposits in regular banks were not included in Sterling's returns to the state.

BASIS OF INDICTMENTS

As told in the bill filed in the Sterling case, the method used in the conspiracy, the story of the events upon which the pending indictments were based is as follows:

"Shortly after Small became treasurer he entered upon a plan whereby a large portion of the money in his possession was to be used for the personal benefit of himself, the late Secretator Curtis and the latter's brother, Verne S. Curtis.

"In furtherance of this plan he did not comply with the state law requiring him to deposit all state money in Illinois banks but turned over a large part of it to Senator Curtis and his brother. No report of this money was turned over to the auditor or the governor as required by law, but a large part of the interest upon it was retained by the Curtis brothers and converted to their own use and to the use of Small.

Millions to Curtis Brothers.

"At the expiration of Small's term there was under the control of the Curtis brothers a large sum of money believed to have been $10,000,000. This money was not turned over to his successor, Sterling, as required by law. Sterling became a party to the plan whereby this money remained in the control of the Curtis brothers and Sterling also was to turn over large additional sums of money in furtherance of the plan.

"Sterling appointed Small to a position in the treasurer's office as investigator and examiner of securities and he held that office for the next two years. Senator Curtis died March 4, 1920, and after that date the plan was carried along by Sterling, Small, and Verne S. Curtis.

"The money turned over in conformity with the plan was carried on Sterling's books as in the 'safe fund' and pretended certificates of deposit were issued purporting to be from the 'Grant Park bank.' There was no such bank.

Corporation Notes Purchased.

"The money turned over in this way was used in the purchase of notes of divers persons and corporatoins, a large part of it in the notes of Armour & Co. and Swift & Co. On the notes of these two companies it is believed approximately $2,000,000 was collected in interest and discounts.

"The only reports made by Sterling covering the interest he received show that he charged himself with $996,121, but it cannot be told from those reports how much of this amount, if any, was received from the money in the hands of the Curtis brothers.

"The state believes the amount of interest and profits for which Sterling failed to account is largely in excess of $1,000,000. The reports made by him are not itemized and it cannot be determined from the records what items he included in the aggregate amounts he reported as the interest he collected.

Interest Records Missing.

"There is no record of any interest paid on large deposits with Dunlap, Russel & Co. of Jacksonville, and many other items of interest collected by Sterling do not appear on the books now in the treasurer's office.

"The transaction by which the notes of Armour & Co. and Swift & Co. were purchased were very complicated. The notes were made payable to the order of the respective treasurers of the companies and by them indorsed in blank. The transactions include items on the books of the Fort Dearborn National bank, the Continental and Commercial National bank, the Live Stock Exchange bank, the Corn Exchange National bank, and the Grant Park Trust and Savings bank."

Defendants in Suit.

The defendants in this suit, in addition to Sterling, Small, and Verne S. Curtis, include Mrs. Etha G. Curtis, widow and administratrix of the estate of Senator Curtis, and the following bondsmen, their heirs, or executors:

Adolph E. Schmoldt, Beardstown.
John Schultz, Beardstown.
George H. Kuhlman, Beardstown.
Floyd M. Condit, Beardstown, and J. Sidney Condit, Chicago, executors of the estate of Thomas Condit.
Clarence J. White, Beardstown.
Edward E. Schultz, Beardstown.
Martin McDonough, Beardstown.
Otto F. Buffe, Jacksonville.
John Cherry, Jacksonville.
Allinson Thomason, Markham.
Andrew Russel, Springfield.
Peter Saup, Cairo.
Thomas J. Smyth, Cairo.
Reed Green, Cairo.
Otis B. Hastings, Cairo.
George W. Meyer, Edwardsville.
W. Lester Hadley, Edwardsville.
Henry Trares, Edwardsville.
William George, Aurora.
William F. Woodruff, Rockford.
Christian F. Henry, Rockford.

The lists of bondsmen in the other cases also are long. Many of the names are the same as on this list.

Charge $1,000,000 Unaccounted For.

The bill against Gov. Small contains many allegations similar to those in the Sterling bill. It charges that Small, while treasurer, collected from the packers more than $1,000,000, reported an unitemized total of $450,010, and that interest unaccounted for is approximately $1,000,000. His average monthly balance on hand was $14,000,000.

The bills against Ryan, Russel, and Mitchell contain substantially the same charges except as to amounts. It is set up that Russel in his first term collected $200,000 and reported only $90,866.42, and in his second term collected $800,000 and reported $142,883.39. He is charged that Ryan collected $300,000 and turned in only $180,953.92, and that Mitchell received $200,000 and paid over only $166,221.92.

Asks to See Records.

In this move Attorney General Brundage began action in chancery, which will leave the decisions in the hands of the court or courts hearing the cases without jury hearings. The bills are for a discovery and accounting and the courts are urged to order the defendants to produce their records.

The bills against Small, Sterling, and Russel were filed at Springfield in the Circuit court of Sangamon county, and those against Mitchell and Ryan in the Circuit court of Cook county because many of their bondsmen reside in Chicago.

MITCHELL DENIES CHARGE.

Carbondale, Ill., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Edward E. Mitchell, one of the five former state treasurers named in the suit entered by Attorney General Brundage, tonight said:

"I turned over every cent of interest to the state and left a list of all interest collected on file when I turned the office to my successor. I turned over a larger rate, according to the daily balance, than many of my predecessors. My record is absolutely clear, and I have no fears for any investigation.

"Brundage is shooting into the air, trying to make himself governor, but he will lose many more friends than he will make and injure himself seriously politically."

Mr. Mitchell said he was the first treasurer to distribute the money in various banks where the state could profit the most.

SILENT ON SMALL MOTIONS

Counsel for the state of Illinois in the criminal prosecutions brought against Gov. Small and Vernon Curtis are withholding any comment upon the motions that the lawyers for the defendants will make formally at Waukegan one week from tomorrow, notice of which was given to State's Attorney Mortimer at Springfield Friday.

These motions will allege that the indictments, on their face, charge the governor with no crime or offense against the state, and that they do not allege the governor ever received any money belonging to the state.

"There is nothing to say whatever," Mr. Mortimer said at the state capital, "except that the state is fully prepared to proceed at Waukegan Dec. 5."

The next technical move in the governor's case comes with the first day of the December term of court in Lake county. The motions, as submitted to Mr. Mortimer, will be filed by the attorneys for the defense.

At least one week, and possibly two, will be required for the arguments, it is now predicted, and the prevailing belief is that the decision of Judge Edwards as to the contested motions will not be given before Christmas week.

CONFESSES TO TRIPLE MURDER, THEN RECANTS

Gives $1,500 Theft as Motive.

Dowagiac, Mich., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Cyrus Ryther, 30 years old, and with a local reputation as a half-wit, today confessed to the murders two months ago of Mr. and Mrs. William Monroe and their daughter, Neva, of this city. Shortly after making the confession, he repudiated it, saying he "had talked too much."

Ryther had been arrested on suspicion and was having his finger prints taken when he voluntarily plunged into the confession. He at once was taken to the Monroe home, where he reenacted the crime. He told of entering the house early in the evening of being ordered out, and of returning later with a spiked club he had found on a nearby woodpile.

After killing the three and knocking Ardith, 8 years old, unconscious, he said he took a lamp and went into the basement to search for the $1,500 which Monroe had saved from his earnings. While in the basement the chimney of the lamp broke, he said. Pieces of the glass were found shortly after the killing were discovered. Ryther said that after the killing, he and a Polish boy and two negroes, Earl Cisco and Don Bass, had buried some of the money. He spent the rest, he declared. Bass, arrested, admitted he had met Ryther on the night of the killing. Cisco denied any knowledge of the affair. The Polish boy hasn't been found.

Police say Ryther has been arrested before and has made confessions of crimes which it was later discovered he had not committed. His peculiar knowledge of the present case is considered sufficient to hold him until a thorough check has been made.

TOKIO, Nov. 26.—Despite gloomy forebodings due to the incessant demand of the press for a seventy per cent ratio for Japanese naval strength, well informed persons are convinced the government is confident of a reasonable agreement being reached at Washington. This feeling applies not only to the cabinet, but to the advisers of the prince regent.

Much of the present agitation can be traced to the army and to a group in the house of peers. The latter go so far as to accuse America of a selfish attitude and in a declaration issued by the Kenseikai party, the opposition, it is declared if Washington fails to consider the seventy per cent ratio and the conference fails as a result, the responsibility will fall on America.

Sensing this attack and endeavoring to direct the Japanese mind to a closer study of the Hughes proposals, Ambassador Warren took occasion at the dinner of the American association at Yokahama to say that there was nothing unjust in the proposal coming from America—and when Secretary of State Hughes said to curtail he meant just that.

"Richest Can Build Biggest Navy."

"The stopping of building," added the ambassador, "means the continuation of the present relative strength of the navies of the principal powers. If we continue to build ships it will mean that the nations probably will remain in the same relative proportion except that the advantage will fall to the nation having superior resources."

Then the ambassador invited critics of the Hughes plan to examine the proposal from that standpoint. He has since had many words of commendation from leading Japanese who point out that the people of Japan have been led to believe by constant repetition of the 70 per cent ration that Admiral Kato suffered a defeat at Washington, whereas his speech showed that he mentioned a fleet slightly greater than 60 per cent of the British and American.

Manipulators Bunko Press.

Local papers published today state that the cabinet instructed Admiral Kato to insist on a 70 per cent ratio despite the fact that he made no such demand. The trouble seems to be that clever manipulators have got the press and public into believing that Japan is being unfairly treated.

Perhaps Admiral Kato will invite a closer reading of his speech on the part of the Japanese. In the meantime the papers are filled with stories about rushing the fleet into commission, but the government itself remains serene and hopeful.

ITALY STRIVES TO HALT RIOTING AGAINST FRENCH

Consulates Attacked in Several Cities.

ROME, Nov. 26.—[By United Press.]—The government tonight was ready to take quick and decisive action to prevent the spread of anti-French riots which occurred in several Italian cities today.

The smoldering anti-French feeling burst forth with the circulation of a report that Premier Briand of France had spoken slightingly of the Italian army during one of the sessions of the Washington arms limitation conference.

A quick official denial that any such incident occurred, coupled with the removal of a Turin official, who did not take proper steps to suppress a demonstration there, will head off any further rioting, government officials believe.

Attack French Consulate.

During the Turin riots, Italian students attacked the French consulate breaking windows and damaging furniture. Soon after the riots, Commissary Alivazzi, who permitted them, was ordered removed.

In Venice a cordon of troops was thrown about the French consulate. They dispersed a crowd which was shouting against the French.

In Naples cavalry was called to ride through the mob outside the French consulate. Demonstrations also took place in Genoa and Florence.

Schanzer Denies Clash.

Meanwhile a cablegram from Senator Schanzer, head of the Italian delegation at Washington, denying that he had clashed with Briand was received and made public.

The press, while deploring the anti-French riots and accepting Schanzer's denial, still seemed unconvinced that the report of Briand's remarks was a fabrication. Pointing out that two papers had published the same report, the Tribuna said the government should investigate how two correspondents could send the same alleged false dispatch.

"If the incident is groundless, the fact remains that Briand energetically opposed Schanzer's plans," the Giornale D'Italia said. Epoca blamed the misunderstanding on secret diplomacy, pointing out that if reports of the arms conference debates were made public such incidents would not happen.

VIVIANI GLAD ALL NATIONS ARE TO JOIN ASSOCIATION

Harding's League Given France's Approval.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—President Harding's suggestion for a continuation of international conferences to deal with world problems as a result of developments at the Washington conference was indorsed today by M. Viviani, head of the French delegation.

"First, the initiative of President Harding is of very considerable importance," M. Viviani said. "It is a high thought and, what is equally beautiful, a practical thought. This conference has already a great ideal for its aim.

Wide Remedies Needed.

"Second, humanity for its happiness must solve problems of a universal character. Consequently, universality of means must be used. If any great nation should be missing in the cohesion of ideas and in the examination of solutions, that would make them most difficult. The initiative of President Harding will allow the whole world to take part.

"Third, we have all to gain by these associations in which we continue to learn the law of equality among nations and we find what we are missing in offering to others that which we possess. No nation has the exclusive gift of intellectual and moral power.

"Fourth, what will people think in Europe of the President's new idea? Are they not going to think that it is in conflict with the league of nations? I answer, no. America has decided to ignore the league of nations. That was her right; she has no account to render to any one.

League Exists—but Alone.

The league of nations exists. What is to be deplored is that it should exist alone. America through these conferences will come into contact with the rest of the world. Let the world be united in one way or in another way. There is no special protocol for that.

"Fifth, I do not know if these conferences and the league of nations can associate their ends. It does not matter. It is only for mathematicians that parallel lines do not meet. I am sure that for all great problems we shall be together."

FAVORED BY OTHERS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—President Harding's proposal for a new association of nations as an outgrowth of the present conference was received with sympathy and, in some quarters, with enthusiasm today. With the action of America toward the league of nations in mind, however, the spokesman for the British delegation was somewhat moderate in approval.

"Great Britain is eager to participate in any movement which will tend to insure peace," he said. "Obviously, however, this is more or less of an American domestic question, in which it would not be proper for the delegates to express an opinion until details have been smoothed out and the president and congress have agreed on some stand which has the full authority of the people."

Diplomats are favorably impressed with the President's desire to include Germany in the new plan. Great Britain and Italy are in full accord with this.

At Japanese headquarters the Harding idea was welcomed. The spokesman there pointed out that problems change from year to year and it would be wise to have annual gatherings.

CHICAGOAN FAILS IN SETTLEMENT OF LOAN TO CHINESE

PEKING, Nov. 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—John J. Abbott, vice president of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings bank of Chicago, who came here as a result of the Chinese government's default on a loan of $5,500,000, will depart for the United States tomorrow.

He said there had been "no collection, no renewal or no immediate prospects of adjustment" of the loan during twenty-five days' stay here.

The Chicago bankers' loan to China fell due on Oct. 31. Early this month the American state department instructed the American minister in Peking to call the attention of the Chinese government to the seriousness of its failure to meet its indebtedness, especially with regard to the effect of such failure upon China's credit with other nations.

A loan to China of a similar amount, made by the Pacific Development company, will fall due on Dec. 1.

5-5-3 NAVIES TO BE ACCEPTED IN WEEK, FORECAST

Submarine Issue May Be Troublesome Yet.

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Final agreement will be reached next week on the naval ratio between the United States, Great Britain, and Japan, it was declared today in high conference circles. The prediction was confidently made that this agreement will be on the capital ship ratio of 5-5-3 originally proposed by Secretary Hughes.

There is agreement already on this basis between the United States and Great Britain, and Japan is said to be practically ready to yield to this ratio on the basis of certain modifications that may be made in that portion of the proposed naval agreement affecting auxiliary tonnage and replacements.

Submarine Causes Trouble.

But agreement on the capital ship ratio does not get the conference out of trouble on the naval program. It is not the adjustments relating to tonnage basis or of replacement detail during the proposed ten-year holiday that is creating trouble, but that wily instrument of warfare, the submarine, which is stirring up the conference waters.

Not only is the conference committee on naval armament divided on the question of submarine tonnage to be retained by the naval powers, but impressive propaganda is deluging the delegates for scrapping of all submarines, writing a death warrant for this weapon in the new code of international warfare.

Great Britain, in challenging the American proposal for the powers to retain 90,000 tons of submarines each, and suggesting this be reduced to 40,000 or 45,000 tons, also let leak out that she would not be averse to the abolition of the submarine as an instrument of warfare.

Talk of Open Session.

There was a good deal of discussion among delegates today of a suggestion that a plenary or open session of the conference be held, possibly next week, to debate the differences of opinion on submarines, replacements, and other features of the Hughes plan outside of capital ship limitation which so far have not yielded to adjustment.

An open discussion, it is held, would disclose in detail the attitude of the powers on these questions and subject their contentions to the test of a crystallised public opinion throughout the world.

This suggestion took like wild fire in the United States outside the conference. Several newspapers at once took up the slogan, "Down with all submarines," and public opinion of the subject has been rushing into the delegates in such floods that the American advisory committee, headed by former Senator Sutherland, directed its subcommittee on information to make a careful survey of American opinion on this subject for the official information of the American delegation.

Seek Opinion of Public.

William Boyce Thompson, chairman of this subcommittee, has organized a systematic collection agency to bring in this information from all parts of the country. Newspapers in all sections are to be asked to canvass the situation and to report to Mr. Thompson.

With the American delegation thus giving ear to this extreme view of the submarine situation, having originated the proposal for saving 90,000 submarine tonnage each for the "Big Three," and with France protesting loudly against any reduction in this amount, the conference has some more thinking to do before this phase of the naval agreement can be settled.

May Cut Down Program.

In responsible quarters today it was asserted that the United States is not irrevocably committed to its submarine proposal and intimated that if the sentiment of the country is strong enough a revision downward of the submarine program probably would eventuate, despite the panicky plea of Fiske for submarines to protect her from Germany.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR.

Beats Electric or Gas.

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the United States government and 38 leading universities and found to be superior to ten ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke, or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil). The inventor, L. P. Johnson, 609 West Lake street, Chicago, is offering to send a lamp on ten days' free trial, or even to give one to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.—Adv.

IT'S THE LEAGUE, DEMOCRATS SAY; NO, G.O.P. REPLY

Senators Partisan in View on Scheme.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—President Harding's proposition for an association of nations to come from the arms conference, was received with varying degrees of approval and disapproval in senate circles today.

Democratic senators who supported the league of nations welcomed the suggestion as meaning ultimately "the league under another name," while administration Republicans endorsed the proposition as involving "social harmony" among the nations, as a "gentlemen's agreement."

Senator Hitchcock, Nebraska, the ranking Democratic member of the senate committee on foreign relations, who led the fight for ratification of the treaty of Versailles enthusiastically endorsed the Harding proposition. In his view what the president suggests points straight in the direction of the league of nations.

Will Prevent Aggressive War.

Senator McCumber, North Dakota, the only Republican member of the committeee to support the treaty and the league, also approved the president's proposition as a "joint agreement" to prevent aggressive warfare, the seizure of territory, and to compel arbitration of disputes.

Senator Curtis, Kansas, acting Republican leader, in the absence of Senator Lodge on conference duties, also approved what he terms the President's plan to bring all the nations into "social harmony," while Senator Smoot, another of the administration leaders, insisted the proposition involves only a "gentlemen's agreement" that would be "nothing but a moral obligation and not binding."

Irreconcilables Are Away.

As to the views of the so-called "irreconcilables," that is a question that cannot be answered in full tonight because most of the senators numbered in that now famous group are not in Washington.

Senator Borah asked to be excused from expressing his views at this time.

Another of the "irreconcilables" is Senator Shields, Tennessee. "All that I care to say," he stated, "is that there will be great difficulty getting any entangling alliances through the senate."

NEGRO SLAYER GETS LIFE.

Valparaiso, Ind., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Leon Cole, Negro, who killed Policeman Guenther at Gary while resisting arrest, pleaded guilty today and got life imprisonment at Michigan City. Cole was captured in Chicago and brought here on a change of venue from Lake county.

LEADERS DUBIOUS OF OUTLAWING GAS AND OTHER NEW WEAPONS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Leaders of the arms conference admit there are great difficulties in attempting to reach any concrete agreement here relating to rules of warfare concerning the use of poison gas and new weapons of warfare.

The American delegation believes everything possible should be done to deal with this subject, but if it is not possible to do anything practicable, the conference should say so to the world and give the reasons.

It is the view of this government that, because of the novel methods introduced in the late war, some of which have been improved upon since, to increase their destructive character, there exists a situation the like of which never before confronted mankind. The real point is the exposure of millions of people, who are not engaged in the war and who are not related to it except that in modern wars nations fight as peoples.

MEXICAN REVOLT NOT SERIOUS, IS OBREGON'S VIEWS

Mexico City, Nov. 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—Revolutionary conditions reported recently in lower California are considered of small importance by President Obregon, who received the newspaper correspondents in his office today and dismissed questions relative to these reported disturbances with a laugh.

"There is no need for alarm," he said, "as the uprisings are minor and of no importance."

He dealt warily with the subject of the Washington conference, and when questioned whether Mexico would accept an invitation, if extended, to participate in later sessions of the conference, the executive answered that the "form of such invitation would determine Mexico's acceptance."

He intimated that extensive railroad improvements would be made by the republic, particularly in the west coast region. Gen. Goethals' recent visit to Mexico City was in that connection, he said.

Open Conference Session Unlikely Soon, Hughes Says

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[United Press.]—There is no prospect of another open session of the arms conference within the next few days, Secretary of State Hughes said today.

"We will not call another plenary session until there is something definite to come before it," said Mr. Hughes.

20 YANKS SUFFER IN SPANISH CAMP, BUDDIES CHARGE

Tell of Morocco Army Officers' Cruelty.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—Twenty Americans who joined the Spanish foreign legion last summer still remain in a Spanish camp near Ceuta, Morocco, suffering from dysentery, septic sores, and vermin, according to stories told today by two of their erstwhile comrades, members of the contingent of thirteen Americans and forty-three Britishers, who reached London yesterday after seven weeks of campaigning against the Moors on the Melilla front.

These stories of their stranded "buddies" were told by Charles W. Brown of 162 St. Anne's avenue, New York City, and Charles Stephenson, a native of New York, whose home now is in Toronto.

Among those left behind in the Spanish camp, they said, are C. B. Lloyd of 907 West Washington street, Petersburg, Va., a youngster under 17 years of age; Benjamin Margolis of Boston, Mass., who was wounded while on the Tetuan front, and George Corbett of 6509 Bay parkway, Brooklyn, N. Y., who paid his own fare from America when he joined the Spanish troops. They are all now destitute, according to Brown and Stephenson, and their sufferings are bound to become worse, with the rainy season in Morocco just beginning.

Tell of Cruel Treatment.

Brown and Stephenson confirmed earlier stories of hardships and cruel treatment at the hands of Spanish officers. They said they participated in eleven battles between Sept. 17 and Nov. 4, including those of Mount Gourougou, Nador, Zeluan, and Mount Arruit. Both having fought with the Canadian army during the world war, enlisted as British subjects with forty-five others, and sailed from Southampton, Sept. 1, on the steamship Almirante Lobo to Ceuta, whence they were sent to Melilla by way of Malaga.

Then after three days, during which time they caught snatches of sleep along the roadside, they said they were sent to the front, having been given a loaf of bread and a tin of sardines. Their personal property had been stolen.

4 Killed, 22 Wounded.

Of the group they said four had been killed and twenty-two wounded. Being unable to understand the Spanish commands led them to much ill treatment, they said. "On one occasion, they said, they were beaten and sentenced to the hard labor squad. At another time they were sent to the front with their arms tied behind their backs as punishment for trying to obtain medicine at Melilla.

They told the story of a Greek soldier in the legion who was sentenced to be executed, but they said the Americans in the firing squad purposely jammed their rifles.

Eventually the Americans were released, and they left the front Nov. 4, arriving back at Ceuta four days later, where they said they were well treated for the first time.

Unable to Forget '98 Defeat.

They described a dramatic scene at Ceuta, where Col. Millan Astray, himself wounded, harangued the Americans and Britishers, accusing them of cowardice, and appealed to them to stand by their chief.

"Will you fight one more battle and prove your pluck?" they quoted the colonel as asking. They consented to this request, they said, but were asked to sign a document which would have meant virtual reenlistment; and consequently they refused further service.

Brown and Stephenson declared there was still much bad feeling against America among the Spaniards, who were unable to forget the Spanish-American war.

The Americans here are being cared for by the British legion and the Y. M. C. A.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—[London Telegraph.]—The Telegraph's Allahanad correspondent cables that a Teheran messages states that a fifty year concession to exploit the oil fields in the northeast provinces—Azerbeidjan, Ghilan, Astrabad, Mazanderan, and Khprassan—has been granted to the Standard Oil Company of America by the Persian parliament on the proposal of the Persian premier.

SUE SUICIDE'S ESTATE.

Rockford, Ill., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Suit for $5,000 damages against the estate of Arthur Bausher, who shot and killed Mrs. Helen Widholm here last January, and then committed suicide, has been filed at Freeport by Fred Wilson, Mrs. Widholm's father.

BEG YOUR PARDON

On Nov. 13 THE TRIBUNE printed a survey of the employment situation in the central west in which it was stated that a large hotel costing more than a million dollars, a $200,000 theater, and a new publishing plant were being built in Rock Island, Ill. The hotel, theater, and publishing plant are being erected in Moline, Ill., not Rock Island. The information was supplied to this newspaper by the employment service of the United States Department of Labor.

PERMANENT BODY MAY SETTLE FAR EAST PROBLEMS

Too Complicated for One Conference to Solve.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—That some kind of a tribunal for settlement of Pacific and far eastern questions—possibly a branch of the President's proposed new association of nations—must grow out of this conference is practically made certain by developments in the committee dealings with China's future foreign relations.

The first breach in the wall of foreign interference which has been built around China was made today when the committee dealing with foreign postoffices in China agreed informally that "it was the sense of the committee that there should be a withdrawal of foreign postoffices in China as soon as it appeared that conditions warranted." A subcommittee, with Senator Lodge as chairman, was appointed to draw up a resolution to this effect for submission to the full committee Monday.

Territorial Problem Up.

Senator Lodge also was made chairman of a subcommittee to deal with the question of extra-territoriality in China. The question of an increase in Chinese tariff rates is in the hands of experts. These things cannot be decided upon at this conference, except in this general way.

Commissions must investigate and report to some international tribunal. Ten years is suggested as the time when foreign postoffices should be withdrawn. The Chinese themselves do not want extra-territoriality abolished at once.

These are oases in the desert of China, cities of refuge where Chinese officials themselves flee when in trouble with their countrymen. Chinese law and Chinese courts are not perfected and codified sufficiently for foreign nations to permit their nationals to submit causes to.

With America leading and forcing the way at every step, a start has been made in the right direction, and China will get substantial benefits from this conference which will enable her to strengthen her central government and which may eventually lead to unification of her conflicting political groups.

Subtlety in Tokio Move.

While in itself unimportant from the standpoint of world peace, it is significant that Japan is so sympathetic with China in the matter of extra-territoriality and that the Japanese delegates today agreed to withdraw their 124 postoffices from Chinese territory—as soon as practicable.

Of course this reservation carries a stinger, but the postoffice box has been a part of Japan's penetration into Shantung and Manchuria. Set up ostensibly for the use of Japanese, the postoffices have appeared, it is claimed by Chinese, in parts of China where there are few Japanese and where there is direct competition with the Chinese national postoffice.

This is a move for withdrawal, then, on the part of Japan, and leads directly to the next plea of the Chinese, which will come next week, that Japanese troops be withdrawn from Chinese soil.

Other Chinese Complaints.

The next violations of territorial and administrative integrity which China will bring up will be, according to the Chinese minister, Mr Sze, "the stationing of foreign troops and railway guards at various points, the installation of wire and wireless electrical communications, and the socalled police boxes."

On postoffices Mr. Sze's plea was as follows:

"China wishes to point out that, wholly apart from the financial loss suffered by her as a result of the existence of foreign postoffices on her soil and the obstacles thereby placed in the way of the development of her own postal system, the maintenance of such offices represents a most direct violation of her territorial and administrative integrity.

"It is one, moreover, that is peculiarly objectionable, since it is a constant visible reminder to the Chinese that they are not accorded the consideration given to other people. This necessarily has a tendency to lower the prestige of the Chinese government in the eyes of her people, and to make more difficult the already difficult problem of maintaining a government that will command the respect and ready obedience of her population."

HISTORIC SHIPS WILL BE SOLD AT AUCTION BY NAVY

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—Fifteen ships of the old navy will be put on the auction block soon, it was announced tonight by the navy department.

Several of them helped make American history, among them being the cruiser Brooklyn, flagship of Rear Admiral William S. Schley during the battle of Santiago.

Others are the cruiser Columbia, which in her prime was one of the fastest ships on the sea; the battleship Maine which replaced the battleship of that name destroyed in Havana harbor; the battleship Missouri, launched in 1901; the cruiser Memphis, now a wreck on the San Dominican coast, and the torpedo boat Dale.

Four monitors on the list are the Minatonomah, built in 1862; the Ozark, formerly the Arkansas, and the Puritan, both of which have served as naval militia ships at Washington, and the Tonopah.

STABLE MONEY EUROPE'S ONLY HOPE—WELLS

Urges Wiping Out of All War Debts.

after all for France to wreck the rest of Europe, to destroy her commerce by destroying her customers, and yet to save herself.

When France begins to break, she may break very quickly. Under the surface of this exuberant French patriotism runs a deep tide of communism, raw and red and insanely logical.

We talk of the saner, graver France, the substantial France, that is masked by the rhetoric of M. Briand and the flag waving French Nationalists, of a France generous enough to help a fallen foe and great enough to think of the welfare of mankind.

I wish we could hear more of that saner France, and soon. I can see nothing but a warlike orator, empty and mischievous, leading France and all Europe to destruction. I do not see that it is possible for a France of armaments and adventurers to dance along the edge of the abyss without falling in.

Turns to Case of Britain.

When we pass out of the continental to the Atlantic system and consider the case of Britain we find a country with a stabler exchange and a tradition of social give and take stronger and deeper than that of any other country in Europe.

But she is not a self-maintaining country. Her millions live very largely on overseas trade. She is helplessly dependent upon the prosperity of other countries and particularly of Europe; the ebb of prosperity abroad means ebb for her at home.

No other country feels so acutely the economic prostration of Germany, no other country suffers so greatly from the restless activities of France. She is struggling along now with unprecedented masses of unemployed and the state of affairs abroad offers no hope of diminution.

The housing of her population has degenerated greatly since the war began; she cannot continue to feed, clothe, nor educate her people as she used to unless the decay of continental Europe is arrested. I do not know what political form of expression a great distress in Britain might take.

The tendency towards revolutionary violence is not very evident in the British temperament, but people who are slow to move are often slow to stop.

Uncertain of Britain's Fate.

The slow violence of the English might not find expression in revolution and might not expend itself internally. They might get resentful about France—and perhaps Germany might be feeling resentful about France, too. But I will confess that I cannot yet imagine what an acutely distressed Britain might or might not do. Yet it is plain to me that the shadow that lies so dark over Petersburg stretches as far as London.

Such, compactly, is the condition of Europe today. I submit to the reader that it is a fair statement of facts in common knowledge. This is not the Europe of the diplomatists and publicists; it is the Europe of reality and the common man. It is a process of decline and fall, going on under our eyes, swifter and more extensive than the decline and fall of the Roman empire in the fourth and fifth centuries.

Its immediate cause is destruction of the monetary system under the burden of war expenditure and war debts. And the only possible hope that it may be arrested lies in a prompt and vigorous world conference to put an end to war expenditures, to extinguish debts and reinstate stable and trustworthy money in the world.

There is no evidence yet that the Washington conference will take up this task, or will ever complete this task. I find myself in the trough of the waves today and less confident of the outcome, even the limited outcome, of things here. I am increasingly doubtful whether the conference will get as far in the direction of a stabilized Pacific as I hoped a few days ago.

Charles T. Trego, 84 years old, who owns the oldest membership on the Chicago Board of Trade, has just returned from a five weeks' hunting trip in Wisconsin.

Mr. Trego has gone annually for the last thirty-two years to hunt ducks in Wisconsin. He says he enjoyed the trip as much as usual even though the warm weather spoiled the hunting.

Mr. Trego has been a member of the Board of Trade for fifty-nine years and has occupied the same office for thirty-seven years.

WOMEN MUST GO ON WITH HEROES' WORK, U. S. VIEW

Write to Lady Astor That New Day Is Here.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[By the Associated Press.] — Conviction that the Washington conference "has marked a new era in diplomacy" is expressed by the four women members of the advisory committee to the American delegation in a letter addressed to Lady Astor, member of the British house of commons, made public tonight.

The letter, signed by Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Mrs. Katherine Philips Edson, Mrs. Eleanor Franklin Egan, and Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, is in reply to a letter from Lady Astor transmitting the views of the women of England, as expressed through eighty-seven national organizations, with respect to the armament conference.

New Era in Diplomacy.

"This conference has marked a new era in diplomacy," the letter says. "We now realize that here in America, as in other countries, public opinion has found its new way to power and is affecting the course of statesmen who once could settle everything behind closed doors.

"We do not agree with these people who have little faith in the outcome of this conference; who believe that nations, having been selfish and having settled their disputes by war, must therefore continue to do so. These people are filled with suspicions, and call for more armaments and increasing preparations for war, begetting a spirit of fear and distrust.

Next War Would Be Awful.

"We believe with you that the great war has taught us the need of peace, and that no nation can stand by itself. Another world war would be more swift, more extensive, more destructive than the last, and might well be the beginning of the degeneration of our race.

"A concrete, far reaching proposal for immediate limitation of naval armaments has been advanced by the United States and accepted in principle by England and Japan. Now must come the vast and stupendous work of adjusting the details of these principles, of little by little removing the suspicions, the hatreds, the fears of ageiong existence. Nearly a million of the best of your young manhood, as 50,000 of ours, fell fighting. It is for us to see that the task is finished."

COAL DEMANDS LESS AS STRIKE DANGER IS OVER

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Production of bituminous coal slumped during the week ended Nov. 19, according to the weekly report of the Geological Survey.

"Production returns during the week ended Nov. 19 show that with the stimulus of possible railroad and mine strikes withdrawn for the present, the market will no longer absorb as much as 9,000,000 tons a week," says the Geological Survey. "Because of the successive holidays of All Saints day, election day, and Armistice day, the two weeks immediately preceding had afforded no real test of demand.

"The total output of soft coal in the week of Nov. 19 is estimated at 8,343,000 net tons. In comparison with the high point reached just before the news was received that a railroad strike had been averted, this was a decrease of 2,296,000 tons."

DENIES FRENCH IMPERIALISM, AS WELLS CHARGES

Sorbonne Man Replies to Noted Writer.

Prof. A. Aulard has written for The Tribune a refutation of the charges of imperialism, chauvinism, and militarism brought against France by H. G. Wells. Prof. Aulard is the head of the department of revolutionary history at the Sorbonne, which post was recently created for him in recognition of his years of research. Prof. Aulard is one of the most liberal members of the Radical Socialist party, an internationalist and a pacifist, and, as such, approaches the problems of world peace from the same point of departure as Mr. Wells.

BY PROF. A. AULARD.

[Written Especially for The Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Nov. 26.—I have almost as much sympathy for Mr. Wells' ideas as I have admiration for his talent. I always find it unpleasant to disagree with him. I have experienced this disagreement two or three times when reading his excellent articles published by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE on the Washington conference.

I do not differ from him in principle nor on essential things and I am, like him, a man of peace. The feeling of economic solidarity should be cultivated by the French and Germans alike.

Strengthening of a friendship between France and Germany, when Germany shall have accomplished its duties as to reparations, will be capital for the peace of the world. To my mind this opinion is that of the greater part of the best people of France and I hope in the legislative elections in 1923 that it will be seen that this is the opinion of the mas sof the French people. We do not want to found hate for the future.

Denies French Imperialism.

Mr. Wells is not right when he advances the theory that France wants to keep Germany in a state of feebleness and exhaustion to assure the success of its own imperialism.

Mr. Wells' mistake is that he says France when he should say such a political party, such a journal, or such an individual.

Mr. Wells generalizes abusively.

A spiritual iconoclast, he mocks France because it has always the word security on its lips, and he thinks that on this pretext of security France seeks to dominate the world.

French Peasants Want Peace.

I should like to know if Mr. Wells speaks or understands French well. If he does I should like to have him come to France and talk with French people who are representative of France. They will not be those persons who receive distinguished foreigners; they are not always journalists and politicians.

France is a peasant country. It was the French peasant who saved France. The French peasant has been enlightened during the last half century by primary education. Mr. Wells should speak with the peasant, or with his teacher, and with the workers in the towns, if he wants to know the sentiment of democracy. I do not think Mr. Wells will find in our fields or in our factories a single French citizen who desires French predominance to be founded on arms.

Praises the Senegalese.

Everywhere, yes, everywhere in the real France, the France which works, the French want peace.

During the revolution Danton said:

"Daring, more daring, daring always."

We say:

"Peace, more peace, always peace."

This does not mean that we have less courage than our ancestors or that we cannot defend ourselves terribly if attacked.

Mr. Wells grows ironical again on the subject of our Senegalese troops, our black soldiers. They are French citizens, who merit that name by their courage and their discipline. I could cite a large city on the Rhineland where the mayor, without being asked gave testimony as to the perfect conduct of these black troops.

Not an Enemy of Britain.

But the greatest error of Mr. Wells, one which alone would justify a Frenchman in taking up his pen in reply, is when he says, or leaves to be understood, that if France is opposing a reduction of the number of submarines at Washington, it is doing so because it wants one day to attack England. I leave aside the fact that he attributes this policy to the French senate, of which, to my personal knowledge, there is not one indication. A notable thing, according to Mr. Wells is that there is a strong movement in France against England, a movement of hate, which goes as far as a desire for war, and which will seek satisfaction when France is strong enough to do so.

Decidedly Mr. Wells has too much spirit and too much imagination.

I have an absolute conviction that there is not a single Frenchman who has this thought, even in the farthest recess of his brain, if he is in good mental health.

Such a War Fratricide.

A war between France and England! That would be civil war—fratricide. The idea could not come into our heads even as a hypothesis. War between France and England! Among all of Mr. Wells' fancies this is the only one that will never have the least chance of being fulfilled, of that I am convinced.

Mr. Wells no doubt has seen extracts from French papers which oppose certain British policies and where Mr. Lloyd George is discussed without much friendliness. But there is no French peasant or workingman who does not distinguish between the British people and the British government.

Since British soldiers fought on the soil of France side by side with the French against the kaiser Anglophobia has been banished forever from the hearts of the French people.

Briand Is for Peace.

In his articles Mr. Wells makes it clear that he does not like M. Briand. Does this mean that he does not like he French people?

In this connection I should like to say that if the French premier holds a good place in the opinion of the French people it is because he is, above all—to the very marrow—for peace. In this, through his desire for peace, he well represents the French people—the people who wanted war to a finish and now want peace to a finish.

I wish that Mr. Wells would come to France and spend some time here. I wish that he would mingle with the people in our villages and in our fields, for with his good observing eyes and ears he would judge France better, and France would like to be judged by his fine reason and beautiful imagination

THE PRICE OF SPEED

The Rolls-Royce touring car, driven by Richard Travers, as it appeared after crashing into a Lake Shore safety island and then into a concrete light pole, causing the death of a passenger in a taxicab.

Miss Florence Oakley, cut and bruised in collision.

PUNISHMENT OF DRIVER OF DEATH AUTO DEMANDED

The Yellow Cab company will push the prosecution of Richard Travers, 561 Surf street, a salesman for the Rolls-Royce company, to the fullest extent.

This statement was made yesterday by Charles W. Gray, vice president of the cab company, following the death early Saturday morning of Max Dezettal, 1225 East 44th street, managing editor of the Chicago Labor News.

Dezettal was riding south in a Yellow cab on Lake Shore drive at Fullerton avenue. The chauffeur, Louis Kahn, 638 South Hamlin avenue, observed a touring car approaching from the south. It was traveling at a tremendous rate of speed, swaying from side to side of the street, he said.

Hits Safety Island.

Kahn drove to the side of the street, fearing a collision. As the touring car approached it swerved into a safety island, catapulting the heavy cement post in front of the Yellow cab. The impact with the post pitched Dezettal forward into the mileage meter, crushing his head.

Travers' car caromed from the safety island into a pole supporting a boulevard light. His woman companion, Miss Florence Oakley, 4130 Sheridan road, was thrown from the car, suffering internal injuries. Travers was injured internally. His car was wrecked. The Yellow cab chauffeur escaped with a few bruises. Miss Oakley and Travers were taken to the Columbus hospital.

Unable to Attend Inquest.

Travers' condition made it impossible for him to appear at the inquest yesterday, which was therefore continued indefinitely.

In his statement Mr. Gray said the irresponsibility of intoxicated chauffeurs and drivers is a constant menace which should be remedied by law. It is impossible, Mr. Gray said, to protect oneself from the carelessness of such drivers.

W. H. Fishback, a druggist living at 6130 Kenwood avenue, was seriously injured yesterday when he was struck by a taxicab at 63d street and Kenwood avenue. Fishback walked around the rear of a street car into the path of the approaching cab. David Shapiro of 1250 South Troy strteet, the driver, was not held.

PERMIT FOR FLAT WORRIES OWNERS OF COSTLY HOMES

A request for a permit for the construction of a huge apartment building on Sheridan road between Rosemont and Thorndale avenues is worrying owners of the north side's most exclusive homes.

The district along Sheridan road from Bryn Mawr to Devon avenue has long been considered inviolable as far as apartment buildings are concerned. It is known as the show place of the most costly homes in the city.

The name of the applicant for the permit is being kept secret by the city building department for the present while an investigation is being made.

LATEST ATTEMPT TO SALVAGE LOST GOLD SHIP FAILS

New York, Nov. 26.—The third attempt to salvage the $4,000,000 gold and silver cargo of the Ward line steamer Merida, sunk ten years ago off the Virginia Capes, has failed, it was admitted today at the offices of the H. L. Gotham corporation, which financed the salvage expeditions.

Bad weather has been responsible for the three failures, according to officials. At each attempt severe storms swept the scene of operations, carrying away the tackle and compelling the salvagers to scurry to the nearest harbor for repairs. The project now has been abandoned, until next spring at least.

Ten years ago last May the Merida bound from Havana to New York, was struck in a fog by an American mail liner. It sank in thirty-five fathoms. [illegible] and crew were rescued

ATER AIRCRAFT MAY NULLIFY SEA LIMIT PROPOSAL

Reilly Says Any Vessel Can Carry Planes.

BY GEN. HENRY J. REILLY.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—The Hughes proposals for limiting naval strengths apparently fails to make due allowance for the probable role of aircraft in future naval warfare, and thus leaves the door open for the emasculation of any agreement reached on limitation of ships.

The recent experiments off the American coast, when big bombing machines readily sunk the former German battleship, demonstrated without question that, under favorable conditions, aircraft can become a dangerous foe to a battleship. It is true that these experiments failed in many essential respects to duplicate battle conditions.

The target was an old ship, very much deteriorated; it had no personnel on board to stop leaks created by the external explosions of the bombs; it was cruising at low speed on a steady course; the bombing machines were not under fire, either from the target ship nor from other craft that would normally accompany it in battle; the big slow moving bombing planes had no fast hostile fighting planes to harass them.

Aircraft Value Increases.

The best expert opinion is that, while the battleship is by no means put out of date by aircraft, nevertheless air force in future will be an important and indispensable auxiliary to sea power.

The Hughes proposals do prescribe an allowed maximum of tonnage for airplane carriers—namely: 80,000 tons for Great Britain and ourselves and 48,000 tons for Japan. But no proposals are made as to the number or size of aircraft that may be constructed or maintained.

The inference that a limit upon airplane carriers will operate practically to circumscribe the air effort that can be made over the sea, does not square with the facts. All that is necessary to make a good airplane carrier out of a merchant liner is to eliminate some of its top hamper and lay a flush upper deck to facilitate the landing and stowage of planes, and install a battery of medium caliber guns.

Where Big Marine Counts.

On the outbreak of war the conversion of such vessels into powerful airplane carriers could be effected speedily and at moderate cost; so that a nation possessing such vessels will be able to add materially to its naval strength and effect an important change in its ratio of strength as compared with an enemy not possessing a similar number of commercial liners.

Undoubtedly it is as impractical to limit aircraft being used for war purposes as it is to limit a similar use of merchant vessels. Ever since the armistice the allies have found great difficulty in solving the same problem as applied to Germany, whose production of so-called commercial planes has been proceeding rapidly, the industrial facilities for making them expanding at a great rate.

The use of aircraft cannot possibly be divorced from sea strength; the two are inseparably related.

FARM LEADERS TO MEET ARMS ENVOYS DEC. 6

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—In an effort to make effective the voice of agriculture in a plan to outlaw war, C. S. Barrett, chairman of the National Board of Farm organizations and president of the National Farmers' union, today issued a call to agricultural leaders to assemble in Washington Dec. 6 and meet the foreign and American delegates to the international conference on limitation of armaments. Mr. Barrett is a member of the advisory council to the American delegates to the arms parley.

"There is every reason why the farmers of this nation should come into contact, through their leaders, with the men to whom the powers have committed the important task of reaching an agreement on limitation of armaments," said Mr. Barrett today.

NAME 2 SISTERS AND BROTHERS IN AUTO THEFT RING

Philadelphia, Nov. 26.—Miss Hazel Whitaker, a public school teacher here, was held in $2,000 bail by a United States commissioner today in connection with an alleged scheme to steal automobiles to collect insurance. According to federal authorities, Miss Whitaker, a sister and two brothers were indicted in Los Angeles, Cal., on Nov. 14 in connection with the case.

Norman T. Whitaker, one of the brothers, widely known as a chess player and a lawyer in Washington, D. C., is under bail there, according to the federal authorities and Boland Whitaker is under bail at Baltimore. The other sister said to be under bonds is Dorothy Whitaker.

Another man, whose name has not been disclosed is said to be held in Los Angeles. Norman Whitaker characterized the arrests as ridiculous.

FIVE ARRESTED AS ROBBERS OF I. C. MAIL TRAIN

Dead Man Found in Road Furnishes Clew.

With the arrest of five men by postal inspectors in Indianapolis Friday afternoon and the finding of another man dead from a bullet wound on a lonely country road outside of Rockville, Ind., federal officials announced yesterday they have solved the attempted holdup of an Illinois Central train near Paxton, Ill., on the night of Nov. 7.

This was the robbery in which the outlaws fought a pistol battle of half an hour with the defenders of the train, dynamited and burned the mail car, and fatally wounded a Pullman employé.

These Under Arrest.

The men under arrest are: James Hill, 25 years old; Joseph Burnett, 20; Bern Jones, 19, colored; Frank Wolfe, 25, and Garnett Osbourne, 25, colored, all of Indianapolis.

The man found dead at the side of a road over which the robbers were believed to have taken flight the morning after the holdup was Hugh Ferguson of Indianapolis, also colored. When the body was found the government inspectors immediately seized upon the theory that he had been wounded in the battle at the train, had been carried away by his companions, and tossed out of the car when hope of saving his life proved futile.

Start with Hat as Clew.

The arrest of the men and the clearing up of the crime which resulted in the death of Arthur Moon, colored porter, of Chicago, and the shooting of three others is due to the unflagging work by postal inspectors. When they started on the trail they had only a black derby hat as a clew.

The Illinois Central train had just pulled out of the station at Paxton when three men crawled over the tender and covered the engineer with revolvers. They ordered him to detach the mail car from the other coaches and proceed down the track for two miles.

Moon was in the foremost Pullman car, and, hearing the men uncoupling the car, rushed out. He was shot twice. When the mail car and engine had gone some distance the men ordered a stop. Three other members of the gang climbed aboard.

Mail Clerks Defy Them.

They ordered the mail clerk, Benjamin Bovinetti, and the messenger, Thomas Baker, to open the door of the mail car. They refused, whereupon the robbers set the car afire, and in a few moments it was in flames. The smoke finally forced the men within to open the door.

As they fell through the opening they were met by a fusillade of bullets from a rifle in the hands of one of the bandits standing on a high embankment. Bovinetti and Baker were wounded. When the shooting was heard the engineer and fireman, W. H. Bangs, ran to the mail car and were met by bullets from the embankment. Bangs was shot twice.

During the holdup Baker and Bangs lay on the gorund after being wounded and opened fire with their revolvers. They said they saw one of the men, thought to be a Negro, fall. After taking two mail pouches the robbers left.

Postal Inspectors Hitchcock, Utley, Lyon and Rueter were rushed to the scene. All they could find in the way of clews were the remains of the mail car, several charred mail sacks and a black derby hat said to have been dropped by the robbers.

A week later a woman named Ferguson appealed to the police of Indianapolis to find her husband, Hugh, who had been missing for several days. He had told her, she said, he had secured work in a town in southern Illinois and was going to the job. That was the last she had heard of him.

Requests for the arrest of Hugh were sent broadcast. The police of Rockville, which is but a short distance from Paxton, reported finding a Negro dead on a road outside the city. He had been shot in the right side and had apparently been thrown from a speeding automobile. Mrs. Ferguson identified the man as her husband. Postal inspectors concluded he might have been one of the mail robbers.

Ferguson Associates Arrested.

They arrested several associates of Ferguson in Indianapolis, who admitted they were with him on the night he was shot, but said they had engaged in a gun battle with men who attempted to hold up their automobile. When faced with the Paxton robbery witnesses, they said they had been engaged in "bootlegging," but had not attempted the holdup.

The derby hat found at the robbery scene fitted perfectly the head of Burnett, according to postal inspectors. Several witnesses who viewed them in jail are said to have positively identified them as the bandits.

The men were taken before United States Commissioner Clyde Randal at Terre Haute. They will be taken to Danville, where they will be placed on trial for the robbery and for the murder of Moon, according to postal inspectors.

JUDGE GIVEN TWO YEARS FOR DRY LAW VIOLATION

Prison for Nine Others at Logansport.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 26.—[United Press.]—Seven Logansport men, including City Judge James West, were found guilty of violating the prohibition laws in Federal court today. The jury returned a sealed verdict last night, which was opened when court convened.

Three others had pleaded guilty. Those who were convicted along with Judge West were Frank Tam, proprietor of a soft drink parlor; Harry Brooks, Negro; Fred McWilliams, a railroad man; George Hiles, and Albert and Edward Burgess. The Burgesses—father and son—operate a poolroom. Donald Richardson, a patrolman, and Riley Mullendore and Henry Gillam had pleaded guilty.

Judge West was sentenced to two years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kas. the heaviest sentence imposed. Richardson drew the next heaviest with a year and a day.

On the others, Judge Anderson imposed jail sentences as follows: Tam, Brooks, Miles, McWilliams, Albert, and Edward Burgess and Gillam, six months each, and Mullendore, four months.

Originally fourteen defendants were named in the action.

Government attorneys contended Judge West and Othello Smith, city prosecutor, afforded protection to bootleggers and other traffickers in illicit booze for $15 a week.

CLEVELAND HINTS CITY MAY ACCEPT 6 OR 7 CENT FARE

Judge Orders Fund to Repay Fares Be Provided.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The city administration may abandon its plea for a 5 cent fare and nothing else. It has considered a 6 or 7 cent fare, if it is unable to get a nickel fare.

Of course, no announcement of this sort has been made because it would weaken the morale of its political subordinates, but an intimation of the new policy was given yesterday by Chester E. Cleveland Sr., special counsel for the city in traction matters. He made his statement in the presence of and without any protest from Corporation Counsel Ettleson.

Occurred in Conference.

The incident happened in a conference between Ettelson, his assistants, Cleveland and Roberts, and James M. Sheean, attorney for the surface lines. They were attempting to agree upon the form of an order by which surface line transfers will be considered receipts for the 3 cent difference between the present fare of 8 cents and the 5 cent fare decreed last Wednesday by the commerce commission.

Jacob Legion Tenny, the car rider, who obtained the court action in this matter Friday, objected to the form of the formal order prepared by both Sheean and Cleveland. He wanted the transfer to be an explicit receipt for 3 cents, nothing more or less.

"But this form," explained Cleveland in reference to his draft, "covers a refund to the car riders if the fare is made 6 or 7 cents as well as 5 cents."

Legion, car rider, was overruled, and a 6 or 7 cent fare was not again referred to. There could be no reason why the city administration would want a form of receipt for other than 3 cents, and that alone, if the fare is to be made 6 cents. By the same token, a receipt which will give the car riders a refund of 1, 2, or 3 cents per transfer is highly desirable, if the car fare is to be made 7, 6, or 5 cents.

Provision for Rebate Payment.

When Judge Francis E. Baker had read both drafts he decided that they meant almost the same thing and in the order of the court took part of each draft. The Sheean form did not require the companies to make any provision for paying the refund. Cleveland's did. So, Cleveland's was adopted by the court in this respect.

It provides that if the restraining order of the federal court, which prohibits a 5 cent fare until the master can be heard on its merits Dec. 2, is dissolved, the companies "shall when and as ordered by the court pay into the court such sum or sums of money as may be necessary to pay all the transfers so issued" and the "holders of transfers are given the right to present said transfers and have the same allowed and paid under the orders and direction of the court in this case."

Order on Tenny Petition.

The order specifically said that it was issued upon "the intervening petition of Jacob Legion Tenny in behalf of himself and all others traveling upon the Chicago surface lines," not upon the petition of the city's high priced attorneys.

Because of Cleveland's interpretation of the meaning of the form of the court order adopted it can be assumed with considerable certainty that the city administration's attorneys will urge the three federal judges on Dec. 2 not to issue a blanket injunction which will prohibit a fare reduction below 5 cents.

Plans of City's Lawyers.

First, Cleveland will try out their arguments to get the court to dissolve the injunction without any reservations. If that seems to make no impression upon the judges, then the city's lawyers will attempt to have the court limit its injunction to a reduction of the fare below 6 cents.

If that, too, fails, then they will ask that the injunction, if one is to issue, prohibit a fare reduction below 7 cents. Otherwise, if those are not the intentions of the city's lawyers, what reason could they have in wanting a form of receipt—as expressed by the court order—which would permit a refund of 1 or 2 cents per transfer, as well as 3 cents?

CHURCH TO REVIVE DOUBLE PULPIT FOR DEBATE ON DIVORCE

A double pulpit is a novelty that will be introduced to Chicago this evening at St. Ignatius' Catholic church, Glenview and Loyola avenues. The subject for discussion will be "Divorce." The Rev. Claude J. Pernin, S. J., professor of English in Loyola university, will present the view of divorce held by the Roman Catholic church. The Rev. William A. Padberg, S. J., will present the objections held by the others to these views of the church. Controverted questions will be thoroughly thrashed out, according to the announcements. The double pulpit is said to be a revival of practices current in mediæval times in the universities of Paris and Oxford. The discussion at St. Ignatius is understood to be the first of the kind in the United States.

DUAL MISTAKE LEADS SLEUTHS TO DUEL ON TRAIN

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 26.—Mistaking each other for thieves, two railroad detectives shot each other on a train near Brookfield Junction last night. John Bresnahan, Fond du Lac, is in a critical condition from a bullet wound in his abdomen. Elmer Kleck, Milwaukee, received a severe wound in his arm.

Bresnahan and Kleck were stationed on a merchandise train bound for Waukesha as the result of a number of train robberies. Soon they began stealthily creeping around until they caught sight of each other, it was said. Then followed a strange battle. With the train running thirty miles, the detectives opened fire. Both shots found their mark, and both men pitched forward and were jolted from the train. They were picked up by a passing motorist.

TOMBS IN EGYPT TELL HISTORY OF ETHIOPIAN KING

Ruler Named in the Old Testament Unearthed.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—The full story of the discoveries by the Egyptian expedition headed by Prof. George A. Reisner of Harvard was made known today from the university offices. These excavations now make it possible to tell the history of Ethiopia.

Twenty-six generations of Ethiopian kings have been unearthed in their tombs and the recovery of material, buried for more than 2,000 years, brought to the surface.

The joint expedition which has made possible these discoveries was in charge of Prof. Reisner, who is back in Cambridge after ten years in Egypt, and it was sponsored by Harvard university and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Find Royal Cemeteries.

The discovery of the lost civilization of Ethiopia was made at Napata, the ancient capital of that country, but now called Gebel Barkal. Napata lies in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, at the southern end of Dongola province, at the foot of the fourth cataract, and the royal cemeteries were found outside the city, one on the north at the modern village of El-Kur'uw, and the other on the south at Nuri. At the latter village, on a low knoll near the River Nile, looking out over the sand dunes of the desert, the Harvard-Boston archaeologists examined a group of pyramids which proved to be the tombs of the twenty kings and fifty-five queens of Ethiopia from 660 to 250 B. C., most of whose names had been lost to human knowledge.

Excavations gradually uncovered the burial chamber of Tirhaqua, the king of Ethiopia mentioned in the Book of Isaiah, who was one of the five Ethiopian monarchs who ruled over Egypt; and then one by one were uncovered the tombs of all the other kings, queens, princes and princesses of Ethiopia for a period of over four centuries, an interval as long as that between the discovery of America by Columbus and the present day.

Locate Greatest Kings.

After the excavations at Nuri, four of the greatest kings of Ethiopia were still lacking—kings who, like Tirhaqua, had ruled Egypt as well as Ethiopia.

In the third year of search these four kings, with their queens and, indeed, six generations of their ancestors, were found at the second royal cemetery at El-Kur-uw, on the north of Napata. It was then discovered that the royal family of Ethiopia had sprung from a tribe of Libyan nomads who had entered the province, then a part of Egypt, about 900 B. C., had become Egyptianized, revolted from Egypt, and finally, under Piankhy, conquered the older country. From this sun scorched place five of the kings of Ethiopia had ruled Egypt and 2,000 miles of the Nile valley and had sent their ambassadors to the courts of Assyria and western Asia.

Fireman Dares Death to Save Two Lives

A bit of heroism was revealed yesterday when the story was told of how Patrick K. Coyle, 4005 Brighton place, a ladderman in engine company No. 119, saved the lives of two infants at the risk of his own in a fire at 119-21 East 29th street. Coyle entered the burning structure and although his hands and face were blistered and his clothes scorched, carried the two children to safety. Their names were not learned.

"CONFESSION" OF LENA CLARKE IS MADE EVIDENCE

Orlando, Fla., Nov. 26.—The state scored the first big point in the trial of Miss Lena Clarke, charged with the murder of F. A. Miltimore, when Judge C. O. Andrews this morning ruled that the confession which Miss Clarke is alleged to have made to Chief of Police Vestal might be admitted as evidence.

Following Chief Vestal's recital of the visit of Miss Clarke to his office and her alleged admission that she killed Miltimore, counsel for the defense took him in hand and drew the assertion that he regarded the woman insane.

CITY AND COUNTRY.

In New York City's latest rebellion against state dominance in local affairs Hylan had a majority of over 400,000. The fight between metropolis and country in New York has been a long one, with a basic issue somewhat like the basic issue in the contest in Illinois between city and country.

New York City is partly held down by restriction of representation in the legislature. Certain elements of Illinois want to put that restriction upon Chicago. Chicago will not consent and has power to protect itself.

In the United States great cities are economic rather than political capitals. The seat of political government frequently or generally is found in a small town which is distinguished merely as the state capital. That is true of the federal capital. Washington has no cause of being other than political. It was created for that purpose and exists for that purpose.

It is not as London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, Vienna, etc. London, Paris, and Rome found nations growing out of them and around them. The American political capital has no relation to the life of the people other than governmental.

New York City and Chicago as economic capitals have territories much larger than their states. Chicago is closer to Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, and even to Iowa and Ohio, than it is to the Ohio river regions of Illinois. The wide spreading economic domain produces the instinct of a free city in a metropolis.

Just before the outbreak of the civil war Mayor Fernando Wood of New York City proposed to the council that Manhattan, Long island, and Staten Island should secede and declare themselves the free city of Tri-Insula, a proposal shot to pieces by the first guns in the war.

The state has the fear that not only economic but political dominance will be concentrated in the metropolis and that the country districts will become mere appendages to a great city state and be ruled by the desires and necessities of intricate, complicated, and varied city life.

A great city has heterogeneousness of population and must have conciliatory standards of life. It permits a range of customs and habits. The country is standardized and wishes to standardize the city. The city has many foreign born, great groups of many nationalities. The country is more homogeneous.

The foreign born in New York City were the basic cause of most of the disorders of the earlier years in the city's rebellion against state sovereignty. Lack of sanitation, lack of adequate police supervision, lack of proper schools made foreign sections subject to epidemics and sources of contagion and riots. The establishment of the metropolitan police in New York City by the state legislature in 1857 was resisted by the mayor and the municipal police. The resistance was suppressed by the state troops.

The great cities do not riot any more against state dominion, but the Hylan majority shows that the instinct of freedom is strong and defense against usurpation of authority dependable.

If Gov. Miller and Mayor Hylan had been opposed seventy years ago upon the issues of the recent campaign, the mayor could have, and probably would have, led armed city bands against the state authority. Miller has tried to take the control of utilities and the enforcement of law out of the city's jurisdiction. It is his right, and probably his duty, to see that prohibition is enforced in the city, but even that, or that above all, was infuriating.

His attempt to break up the management of transit, by which the city keeps a 5 cent fare and gives rapid service, and his attempt to run the metropolitan police force from Albany were within his power. The New York legislature can pass laws for the city by passing them over the veto of the mayor of the city and the city is so restricted that it cannot defend itself in the legislature.

What form the growing revolt of New York City against the tyranny of the state will take is not defined. That the revolt will grow and become the dominant issue in city affairs is shown by the history of all oppressed peoples, from the Thirteen American Colonies in 1775 to Ireland today.

Defense against political oppression is the fundamental instinct of every American. It is now being developed in the city of New York against the rest of the state.

Consequences in the New York struggle between city and country are important for Illinois observation. The two forces which have met in New York are meeting in Illinois and New York is an example of what is to be avoided.

Differences between city and country can be conciliated. There is an attempt in Illinois to inflame them. Reform enthusiasts in this state want to restrict Chicago because it has so many foreign born who give a great variety to the habits and customs of the people. Reformers want to iron out all variety and make city life as uniform as country life. Country politicians want to rule the city because it is the richest political division of the state. The state is most successful in its dealings with the city when it makes reasonable delegations of authority to the city for the management of its local affairs.

The country districts of Illinois will not be allowed to reduce Chicago to helplessness by reduction and restriction of representation. The city has learned that in this fashion it surrenders its defense. A city, as has been said, is not concerned in dominating a state because its true spirit is economic and its economic field is so much greater than any one state. New York proves that the state is concerned in dominating the city. Therefore, Chicago will not surrender its defense.

Conciliation of differences in this state must begin with recognition of Chicago's right to representation. The state community of interests will be recognized in the city. The fact that utilities may not be wholly local and may be intercommunity interests will be recognized, but no compromise can be based upon a denial of political rights to a city because it is a city.

GO TO THE LIVE STOCK SHOW.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace says the people of Chicago do not seem sufficiently to appreciate the International Live Stock exposition held here annually. We doubt if any other great city would show more interest, and yet Secretary Wallace is right, we think, to the extent that the exposition is not as well attended as it deserves to be.

The reason is, however, chiefly physical. The natural place for the show is at the stockyards, where all the facilities exist. But city people on the north and west sides find this location involves a rather long journey. It has to compete with many more accessible interests. If we had transportation like New York this objection would be removed and the attendance would be larger. Our people are close to the farm. Many of us are proud of being born and raised on a farm. The community respects agriculture as a city population like New York's or London's or Paris' cannot do, and if we would only realize Col. Skinner's fine idea of a great temple (a practical, businesslike temple) to agriculture on the lake front, an exposition like this of the International Live Stock association, with its interesting and important annex, the Grain and Hay show, would attract an attendance satisfactory to the most enthusiastic.

But the exposition is where it must be, and it is well worth the trip to the stockyards. And city man or woman, whether his or her memory runs back to a country youth or not, will get a sense of the richness and vitality of our country which no city produces. Every city has something almost sinister in its display of power, but when one sees at the live stock show or the dairy show what applied science is doing in the production of wealth, the impression is one of unmixed beneficence. The exposition illustrates peaceful industry at its best, a progressive conquest of nature by human intelligence and character, mankind at work without hate or envy or any rivalry that is not friendly and productive of good to all the world.

The exposition is, therefore, not only interesting for the beauty and utility of the exhibits, but it is a moral tonic. It leaves us with a feeling that life and men are worth while and that America is making them both better. Every school pupil in the city should be sent to the live stock show this week, for it is an impressive lesson in the sources of Chicago's greatness and of the nation's lasting welfare.

AMERICAN FORTS IN THE PACIFIC.

The Japanese at the Washington conference allow it to be known that they will require the United States to abandon Pacific island fortifications, and in turn will give up fortifications on islands near by the Japanese coast. The details of the suggestion are so inconsistent with ordinary rationality as to indicate that the Japanese are amusing themselves between sessions with a little nonsense.

America is asked to destroy the fortifications of Hawaii and not to put any in any Aleutian harbor, to leave Guam and the Midway island unfortified, and to remove the fortifications from the Philippines. Then Japan will take down some negligible works on islands which are not required in the Japanese scheme of defense.

If the Japanese make this proposal seriously to the conference we shall doubt their serious participation in it and shall conclude that they are turning in their hat checks to go home.

We sympathize with them in the matter of the Philippine and Guam fortifications, and we also have some sympathy for the United States. The situation there is difficult. If the United States does not fortify it cannot defend, and if it cannot defend it is open to attack and humiliating loss any time Japan chooses to attack. If it does fortify it necessarily creates unrest and a sense of danger in Japan.

Guam is described as an insular super-Gibraltar, an impregnable Heligoland, in whose harbor a great American fleet might lie under the cover of guns which would make successful attack impossible. It is less than 1,500 miles from the Japanese coast, within effective fleet radius, and would be a threat of serious character.

Probably if the United States started to develop it, war would be caused, just as war would be caused if Japan obtained and started to fortify such an island so situated strategically to the Panama canal or the American coast. The Philippines and Guam undefended are our liability, and fortified they are Japan's liability. The predicament is full of trouble for both nations.

Dutch Harbor in the Aleutian islands and Pearl Harbor in Hawaii are totally different. They are part of the defenses of the American coast. Fortifications there are part of American security, and not possible instruments of aggression. The United States wants its forts at Pearl Harbor in Hawaii, and possibly in the Aleutians, if engineeringly possible, and not in San Francisco, Seattle, or elsewhere on the mainland.

It will have them there. An agreement which involved the taking down of Hawaiian defenses could not be entered into by a sane American government. A proposal of this nature could not be made sanely by the Japanese unless they thought Americans had gone crazy through pacifism. We do not care what they do with their off coast fortifications. That is their business, and we know they would not surrender anything they needed. In exchange for any dismantling they do in such regions we are willing to reduce the fortifications of Buffalo, Chicago, and points west as far as Omaha.

Hawaii and Alaska are under the American flag and not in the market for bargaining or stipulations. Under the flag in these places the United States will do as its best wisdom suggests, we hope, and will not accept suggestions.

What we'll do in Guam and the Philippines we do not know, but are willing to listen to reason.

HIS PROOF.

Law founded on the Bible is good enough for Mayor Gilmore of Morgantown, W. Va. A local man charged with not having the tail light burning on his automobile was arraigned before the mayor, who assessed a fine of $3.

The accused protested, said that it was a poor law under which he was fined and that he did not think it would hold water in court.

The mayor declared any law founded on the Bible was good enough for him. The defendant said he couldn't see where a tail light had anything to do with the Bible. The mayor looked pityingly at the accused and said:

"Do you remember the tale about the ten virgins, five of whom had lights and five of whom didn't? Well, if you do, you will remember that the Lord wouldn't have anything to do with the five without lights, and neither will this court."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE REEF OF CARE.

The water on the reef of care
Is growing shallow now;
I hope that ere the reef is bare,
Appears my golden prow
And anchors at her quay,
With one last dream for me.

But if the tide that now runs out
Be slow in its return,
Let me, O soul, not look with doubt
Upon the lights that burn—
Let me, untroubled, sleep
Till Morning walks the deep.

"I NOW break the years of silence," sobs Ol, "to inquire what has become of the old fashioned newspaper editor that used to run scareheads about the Ku Klux Klan?" We understand he's engaged in other lines—mostly Washington date lines.

JOSEPHUS is probably indebted to Charles Lamb for his happy thought, "The way to disarm is to disarm." Discussing the drink addict Lamb said, "The remedy is simple. Abstain." His advice, like that of Josephus, seems in a fair way to go unheeded.

IT brings to mind what Huneker wrote of G. B. Shaw: "If Mr. Shaw is brilliant on bran, what would he not be on beef and beer?" He was fond of Shaw, but he accused him of never having had an original idea. He said he had merely decorated himself with tail feathers pulled from Ibsen, Strindberg, Hauptmann, Sudermann, even Masterlinck. What Johnson said about Rousseau would often apply to Shaw. "He knows he is talking nonsense and laughs at the world for staring at him."

TWO LINE CITY OBITS.

Here lies young Abraham Isaac Quick,
He wanted to see the white mule kick.

"YOU never," nevers H. D. B., "selected your seatmate before the term opening; you never grabbed a ham-filled biscuit and a cold sweet potato and shivered as you lunched in the woodshed; you never stood on one foot, against the wall, and had the supporting foot measured for a pair of boots; you never dressed up in a little round hat, ear muffs, copper-toed boots, a coat three sizes too big, and jeans pants. Did you?"

"Did you?" Huh. Ask me. Ask me. Did the implacable, but innocent, teacher ever punish you by placing you with another seatmate who—O austere irony—happened to be your sweet patootie?

THE LONELY WAY.

For every man there stretches, through the years,
A lonely way. He may have hosts of friends
Who vow to love and trust him till life ends,
Still must he walk alone the path of fears
And doubts and weariness. The way appears
To childhood's eyes a fairy-path of dreams
Which, thronged with gay companions, ever seems
More richly promising and free from tears.
But manhood's dawn brings disillusionment;
Friends drop away, by circumstances pressed.
By life's high noon he hastens toward the west
With face stern-set, alone, by hard bonds pent.
How happy they who can their dreams renew
When youth is past, when cherished friends are few!

OSCEOLA POOLER, the entertainer and impersonator, of Jesup, Ia., has favored us with a poem, which we refrain, with difficulty, from publishing. It is a bit long. However, we hope to hear from her again. In the interim we shall present a few lines of the poem which Mrs. Linderman of Marengo, Ill., has dedicated to one of our leading hostelries:

A Queen you stand majestic,
The waters bathe your feet;
Your towers stretch far towards Heaven,
A welcome all complete.

Your beauty never wavers
To hearts attuned to thee,
O Edgewater, proud and beauteous,
Bride of an inland sea.

The Hi Cost of Cricketing.

Sir: May I not report discovery of what seems to be the closest approach to the real "Cricket on the Hearth?" Said insect sends forth its cheery sound from beneath the Righthand Bookcase of a pair which flank the fireplace in a honeymoon apartment out on West End avenue. Being the bride's bachelor cousin, it fell to my lot to trace the sound to its source, only to find that it would take a skilled carpenter (at $1.25 per hour) at least half a day to replace the woodwork after dislodging the critter.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit, or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations, and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. [Copyright: 1921: By Dr. W. A. Evans.]

A WOMAN'S TRAGEDY.

I HAVE before me a letter which I wish I could find space to publish in its entirety, but there are 3,000 words in it and I can use less than 400. It will lose much of its force by being abstracted, but even at that, I think the abstract will prove helpful.

It is the life story of an educated, refined woman of middle age, who calls herself an old maid. The daughter of parents of considerable means, reared as a gentlewoman in a home where there was ample service, guilty of no social tragedy, she is now employed as a cook, and has been in service of this grade and type for a number of years.

Being introspective, and having an analytical mind, she has diagnosed herself and the causes of her failure.

Judged by social standards, her life is a failure. She frankly admits the limitations of her capacity, and acknowledges a considerable degree of unhappiness.

The situation is saved from utter loss by a considerable development of common sense, and the beneficent effects of a frank diagnosis. Starting with this equipment, were she a girl in her teens, she could be trained into efficiency and happiness by one who knew.

But let us give the remainder of her story.

Here was a woman, the victim of emotional instability—a neurasthenic—who might have been made into a happy, efficient member of society had the teachers who educated her and the parents who bore her given some attention to emotional training, while they were teaching reading, writing, and arithmetic—had they known and understood the meaning of certain types of personality and certain kinds of behavior and the right treatment by training of those who were peculiar in these regards.

But let us give the remainder of this space to extracts from the lady's story.

"I am what is usually called very nervous. I think you would call it emotional instability. I am intensely self-conscious and introspective, conscientious and easily tired by nervous strain, though physically I am strong.

"My great drawback is that I cannot meet people and talk to them with ease. If I go to an evening party, I am so nervously exhausted the next day that I can do no work. This is due partly to a lack of early social training, but also to a sort of sensitive vanity. I feel my inferiority, but I am apt to show it by an attitude that seems just the opposite.

"I am acutely sensitive to irritating noises. My eyes are sensitive to light. I usually wear smoked glasses in the summer. I lack concentration. I find it difficult to read even an interesting article through. I like to change occupations. Quickly get tired and discouraged.

"I suffer agonies thinking of stupid, awkward blunders. I get all worked up thinking of quarrels and misunderstandings with my sisters. I am inclined to be foolishly envious of the success of others in lines I can never hope to excel in.

"When I want to do a thing, I cannot want to do it methodically. When I want some pleasure, I want it at once. Putting off is one of my chief failings, yet I have gone into some situations in a hysterical fashion without stopping to think. It was always a trouble for me to think and talk at the same time. I have had very vivid flying dreams all my life.

"I am so much affected by the personality of strangers that my mind is sometimes put out of gear by meeting them. I am timid about meeting any one on whom I want to make a good impression. My will is weak for long stretches, but strong for a spurt. I am intensely sensitive to disapproval, even when I know it is deserved. I am easily irritated.

"When I was a child they tried to get me to play with other little girls, but these children seldom came back after one or two visits. I remember hating them and feeling jealous when my father spoke to them."

The parents saw there was something wrong, so they gave the child Parrish's syrup and cod liver oil.

"3. How can it be prevented?"

REPLY.

1. No one knows the main cause. Among the contributing causes are prolonged, nagging irritation, prolonged mild inflammation, eating hot foods, throwing of active tissues out of use, as the case of the sex organs after change of life, and, possibly, overfeeding.

2. The symptoms of cancer are determined by its location.

3. Remove all sources of chronic, nagging irritation; avoid eating hot foods.

WATER FOR CONSTIPATION.

G. A. writes: "A member of our family, who has had chronic constipation that nothing but physic relieves, after trying osteopaths and foods, etc., finds that by drinking two or more quarts of water between 6 and 6:30 each morning the bowels move in about twenty minutes. Has practiced this custom every day for months with no apparent bad results. Would you say this practice might be more dangerous to health than the practice of taking physic? The same amount of water when taken over longer period does not produce this result, but if taken within twenty minutes or half an hour invariably does."

REPLY.

A gallon of water poured into the stomach in a very short while might dilate or sag that organ. If it was taken in broken doses—during an hour or thereabouts—it would do no harm. Those old beer drinkers of another day guzzled gallons, but the successful artists poured slowly. As a remedy for constipation, it is fairly efficient. It stimulated intestinal movement, and contributed moisture to the content of the large intestine.

"RUN-OVER" HEELS.

Essie B. writes: "Every time I get a pair of shoes, the left heel will turn down on the outside. It not only gives the shoes a bad appearance but hurts my foot when the heel gets too worn out. Can you suggest any remedy for the above?"

REPLY.

Apparently your left foot is so built that the weight of your body is transmitted by your tibia or leg bone to your heel bone—a little to the outside of the center of that bone. It would not be good judgment to try to set the end of the tibia over a bit by operation. By elevating the outside of the heel a fraction of an inch, you would tilt the heel bone inward at the top. Were you to keep this up a long time, you might slide it to the right place and keep it there permanently. Build up the heel with leather and cap it with a metal top. Do not overdo it.

LOSES TOOLS.

Steger, Ill., Nov. 22.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I am a machinist by trade and have been working in a shop and had about $200 worth of tools stolen over Labor day. The shop does not have a night or day watchman. A. W. M.

THE PAY OF HIGH RAILWAY OFFICIALS.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—The letter from "Railroad Worker" in this morning's TRIBUNE in regard to the comparative pay of railway officers and employes is about as true in its inferences as in its facts. "Railroad Worker" credits President Rea of the Pennsylvania railroad with yearly pay of $125,000 and Vice President Atterbury with an annual salary of $82,000.

The Congressional Record of June 1, 1920, carries a full list of railway officials receiving pay in excess of $5,000, furnished to Representative Thetus W. Sims by Interstate Commerce Commissioner C. C. McChord, now chairman of the commission. In this the following facts appear in alphebetical order:

W. W. Atterbury, vice president in charge of operation, Pennsylvania R. R., $40,000.

Samuel Rea, president Pennsylvania railroad, $75,460.

Since then Messrs. Rea and Atterbury, in common with other officials of the Pennsylvania and of other railroads, have had their pay cut—in some cases more than the amount of the general reduction ordered by the railroad labor board last July. So today the pay of the officials named is approximately half of what your correspondent credits them with.

But the false inference of "Railroad Worker" is that if Mr. Rea and Mr. Atterbury's pay had been cut to $25,000 and $32,000 respectively, the living costs of the Pennsylvania's employes would have borne more lightly on them. Now, the fact is that if the pay of Messrs. Rea and Atterbury and every other salaried official of the Pennsylvania railroad had been reduced to the $3,000 a year line of classification, it would have been equal to only $6.07 a year toward paying for the food, clothing, education, and rental of the families of the 200,000 employes of the road.

What is true of the Pennsylvania railroad is true of the railways of the United States as a system. In 1920 there were 7,153 general officers whose pay was over $3,000 a year, when the average pay of freight engineers was $3,436. The total pay of such general officers was $45,397,807. Had all their salaries been reduced to a common level of $3,000, it would have left $23,938,807 for distribution among the two million other employes, or something less than $12 apiece.

SLASON THOMPSON.

THE INCAUTIOUS GROCER.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—It might be a good suggestion to the Corner Grocer to do his ordering in his private office. I chanced to be in a grocery at 47th and the elevated one day last week and overheard a wholesale meat man trying to secure an order for ham at 25c per pound and the grocer said right out loud he could buy all he wanted at 20c per pound. I had just bought a slice of ham and paid that same grocer 65c per pound.

FAIR PROFIT.

PRINTERS OPPOSED TO ARBITRATION.

Chicago, Nov. 21, 1921.—The news item appearing in THE TRIBUNE regarding the action of Chicago Typographical union No. 16 at a special meeting held on Sunday, Nov. 20, expresses the sentiments of the union most inadequately. It not only refused the arbitration agreement submitted by the Franklin association but went on record as being utterly opposed to arbitration. One speaker said, "there was no such thing as fair arbitration in Chicago, that the word was a stench in our nostrils and when it was coupled with the name of Landis was an abomination. Other speakers denounced it in terms that could not possibly be misunderstood. The "No!" that resounded from the crowded hall proved that the membership agreed with the speakers.

The membership of No. 16 is very much exercised to know what differences are to be arbitrated. There have been no negotiations, simply a maneuvering on the part of the chairman of the association to reach a point where arbitration might be successfully suggested. It is obvious from the proceedings that the Franklin association, through the chairman of its job scale committee, could not produce any data that would justify the withholding of the money we were, in our opinion, unjustly deprived of last May and more.

If No. 16 goes to arbitration it will be the result of coercion. I doubt if a thousand Diogeneses, armed with the strongest modern lights, could find an honest arbiter in Chicago. I hope I am proved wrong. By their fruits shall ye know them.

JAMES MCKEOWN.

DO YOUR DAILY SHOPPING EARLY.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—The patrons of our street cars are largely to blame for any inconvenience they are put to during the closing hours of business, especially during the holiday season. The working people seeking their homes, tired and hungry, are compelled to share the space in the cars with the shoppers who leave their homes at a late hour in the day, and returning with their bundles and packages, they come in serious competition with the working people from the various stores and offices. As a rule, their purchases could be made at an early hour and the shoppers comfortably returned to their homes long before 6 o'clock.

ADDISON C. THOMAS.

"NO STOPS—CHICAGO TO ARGYLE."

Chicago, Nov. 20.—With some several thousand other people in Rogers Park and Edgewater, I often wonder just what petpeeve we afford to the Northwestern Elevated company that we are compelled to straphang all the way out to Wilson avenue while the Wilson avenue folk use seats that ought to be ours. With special express service running into the Wilson avenue station downstairs, hundreds of the folk of that territory crowd into the Evanston trains, while many of the Wilson expresses run often with seating room to spare. Yesterday afternoon when the Evanston train on which I was riding stopped at Wilson avenue more than twenty-five persons left the car in which I was riding. Nearly all of them had seats. I had taken the train at Sheridan station, and while waiting there two Wilson expresses, far less than full, passed the station.

The Northwestern elevated may reply that during the rush hours they do not stop their Evanston expresses at Wilson avenue. But that is not until almost 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and it is usually quite impossible to get a seat on one of them as early as 2:30 p. m. Why is it necessary to stop the Evanston trains at Wilson at all? Why not at all times through express service from Chicago avenue to Argyle? E. G. D.

BUT THAT WOULD NOT BELIEVE CONGESTION.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—For some time I have read the different arguments, opinions, and political buncombe appearing in the public press relating to the traction problem of Chicago.

Being an occasional straphanger, so called, and therefore interested, it seems to me that if our public officials are really sincere in their apparent desire to solve this problem for the benefit of the car riding public, what better way is there than to employ the traction fund for the purpose it was created—namely: to start buying the traction system.

The first mortgage bonds of both constituent companies—that is, the Chicago City Railway and Chicago Railways company—can now be bought at from 65 to 70 cents on the dollar.

This is materially less than any court of equity would award the property to the city for.

With the enormous sum now at hand for this purpose the people would acquire the property at bargain counter prices.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

ABOU BEN ADHEM AND THE ANGEL.

By Leigh Hunt.

Abou Ben Adhem (may his tribe increase!)
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace,
And saw, within the moonlight of his room,
Making it rich and like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold—
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And to the presence in the room he said,
"What writest thou?" The vision raised its head,
And, with a look made all of sweet accord,
Answer'd, "The names of those who love the Lord."
"And is mine one?" said Abou. "Nay, not so,"
Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low,
But cheerily still, and said, "I pray thee, then,
Write me as one who loves his fellow men."
The angel wrote and vanish'd. The next night
It came again with a great wakening light,
And show'd the names whom love of God had bless'd,
And lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest!

CHICAGO CAFES NEVER REFUSED VIRGINIA DRINKS

BY EDWARD DOHERTY.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—"Was there any café in Chicago that refused to serve drinks to Miss Virginia Rappe?"

Harry B. Barker, former sweetheart of the dead movie actress, recalled to the stand this morning in the manslaughter trial of "Fatty" Roscoe Arbuckle, hesitated a long time before answering.

"No," he said, "not that I can remember."

"Isn't it a fact that you were engaged to Miss Rappe and that in the presence of Miss Catherine Fox of Chicago she broke that engagement?"

"No, I never was engaged to her."

Became Ill at Style Show.

Mrs. Frances Bates, former saleswoman in a Chicago loop department store, Mandel Brothers, told of seeing Miss Rappe attacked by pains in her abdomen on three occasions during the style show in October, 1913. Once she tore a costly gown into shreds, shrieking, "O, my God!" On each occasion she was taken to the store hospital.

Philo McCulloch, movie actor, out of work, testified that Miss Rappe came to his house two years ago and in the presence of a number of people ripped off her stockings and tore her waist. On cross-examination he said he had often been to Arbuckle's home and about three months ago was present at a big party at which liquor was served.

Recalls Finger Print Expert.

The defense then recalled E. O. Heinrich, finger print expert, who testified he found on the door of room 1219 of the St. Francis hotel the impressions of the hands of Arbuckle and Miss Rappe, Arbuckle's hand apparently having been held over that of the woman.

An attempt on the part of the defense to counteract Heinrich's testimony by that of Ignatius McCarthy, another finger print expert, was interrupted by the adjournment until 10 o'clock Monday morning.

McCarthy, according to Attorney Gavin McNabb, leading the fight for Arbuckle will try to provo to the jury that it would have been impossible to identify the fingers on the door as those of anybody, due to the fact that they were blurred.

"I don't think we need McCarthy's testimony," said Arbuckle when court had adjourned, and he had swept the bits of torn paper in front of him into a neat mound. "I believe the jury already knows that Heinrich's testimony doesn't mean anything. McCarthy proved to us that Heinrich was wrong, and the lawyers thought it best to call him."

PEORIA RECLUSE WINS GUARDIAN AFTER CAPTIVITY

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 26.—Appointment of the Dime Savings and Trust company as conservator for Mrs. Mary Darr, 80, adjudged insane after she had been brought into court following assertions made by neighbors that her daughter and son-in-law had been practically holding her captive for five years, was made by Judge Cameron in Probate court today.

"No arrests will be made," the state's attorney's office declared today. The daughter, Mrs. Jennie Hagemeyer, said Mrs. Darr had been kept under lock and key after her mind became enfeebled to prevent her wandering about the streets.

Mrs. Hagemeyer said neighborhood gossip was brought to a head when Hagemeyer began carrying meals to the aged woman, after she had several times turned on the gas and forgotten to light the stove while preparing her own meals.

Lincoln's Guests at Fatal Party

MAJ. AND MRS. HENRY R. RATHBONE.

HENRY R. RATHBONE.
[Copyright: Matzene.]

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Henry R. Rathbone, Chicago attorney and former president of the Hamilton club, has presented to the Lincoln monument Lincoln collection the photographs of his father and mother, Maj. and Mrs. Henry R. Rathbone. They were guests of President and Mrs. Lincoln at the Ford theater on the evening of the assassination of the President. Maj. Rathbone was wounded in attempting to defend Lincoln from Booth's attack.

At the time Maj. and Mrs. Rathbone were engaged. Maj. Rathbone served with the 12th United States infantry in the civil war. Mrs. Rathbone, then Miss Clara Harris, was the daughter of United States Senator Harris of New York, one of the founders of the Republican party. Senator Harris had been one of Lincoln's stanchest supporters in the senate during the war, and a warm friendship had sprung up between Mrs. Lincoln and Clara.

On the fatal evening, April 14, 1865, Gen. and Mrs. Grant were to have been the guests of the President and Mrs. Lincoln, but they were unable to attend. Maj. Rathbone and his fiancée were invited instead. They drove to the theater from the White House with President and Mrs. Lincoln.

When the sudden attack was made by Booth Maj. Rathbone, unarmed, sprang to the assistance of the President, but was severely stabbed by Booth.

By an interesting coincidence the present Henry R. Rathbone was born on Lincoln's birthday.

MEMBERS HAVE RIGHT TO EXPEL PASTOR, RULING

Waukesha, Wis., Nov. 26.—Declaring that a congregation has a right to remove its pastor, Judge C. A. Davison today permitted the congregation of the St. Paul Evangelical Lutheran church, Oconomowoc, to remove the Rev. W. P. Hass and H. A. Jaeger, a school teacher of the parochial school.

The congregation of 200 charged that the Rev. Mr. Hass was willfully unfaithful to his duties. Prior to Judge Davison's order, the congregation board of arbitration said Hass could not be removed on the petition presented.

The trouble began March 25 last, the complaint states. Mr. Jaeger was forgiven by the Rev. Mr. Hass for the use of church funds in certain congregational matters objected to by members.

RECEIVER NAMED FOR BIG WILLYS CORPORATION

$25,000,000 Firm Under Bank by U. S. Order.

Toledo, O., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—On application of the Ohio Savings Bank and Trust company of Toledo, O., Frank P. Kennison, vice president of the bank, and Clem O. Mininger, president of the Electric Auto-Lite corporation, were appointed receivers by Federal Judge Killits Friday for the Willys corporation, a $25,000,000 company of which John N. Willys is the head.

The Willys corporation controls the Electric Auto-Lite corporation, manufacturers of automobile ignition systems; the New Process Gear company of Syracuse, N. Y., and owns large blocks of stock in the Fisk Tire company, the United States Lighting and Heating company of Niagara Falls, and 30 per cent of the common stock of the Willys Overland company of Toledo, O.

Other U. S. Courts Approve.

Because the Willys corporation has plants in Syracuse, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and Elizabeth, N. J., federal courts in the New York and New Jersey districts were asked to and did approve the receivership.

Accompanying the application for a receiver was the company's answer, which consented to the receivership.

The purpose of the suit is to stop litigation all over the country and to control the property until a refinancing plan now being arranged can be consummated.

The receivership does not affect the Willys Overland company or other plants in which the Willys corporation simply holds a portion of the common stock.

Due to Note Held by Bank.

The application for the receivership was based on a note of the Willys corporation held by the Ohio Savings bank on which $100,000 still is due.

The real cause of the receivership was the enormous amount of money invested by the corporation in a large plant at Elizabeth, N. J. This plant was not yet in production when the slump in the automobile business came.

NINE DIE WHEN STEAMER SINKS IN LAKE ONTARIO

Captain, Family, and 5 of Crew Lost.

Oswego, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Nine persons lost their lives when the lake steamer City of New York sank in Lake Ontario off Stony Point in a storm late yesterday.

Five bodies—one woman and four men—were picked up by the steamer Isabella H. at 8 a. m. today and brought here. The bodies were found in a yawl belonging to the City of New York. Nearby another boat bearing the steamer's name was drifting but it was empty. This boat, undoubtedly, was the one in which Capt. Harry Randall, master of the ill fated steamer, his two boys and a member of the crew sought safety when the steamer went down. It is believed they were washed from the boat.

The dead are: Capt. Harry Randall, Mrs. Randall and their two children; Esley Warren, mate; Harry Dorey, deck hand; and Earl Dorey, engineer, all of Seelys Bay, Ont.; Joseph G. Gallagher, fireman, and Frank Gallagher, deck hand, both of Kingston, Ont.

The City of New York left here early Thursday morning bound for Trenton, Ontario, with a load of phosphate. Trenton is about 100 miles from here by water and the steamer could have put in there Thursday night under ordinary conditions. A heavy storm, however, descended upon the lake and continued until late yesterday.

Killed Dry Sleuth in Raid, Arkansas Man Confesses

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 26.—Orin Ray admitted he killed Prohibition Enforcement Officer J. R. Johnson during a raid, according to testimony at his hearing before United States Commissioner Longstreth today. Ray was held to the grand jury on a liquor charge. The state courts will have to try him for murder.

HERE'S A GAME FOR THE WIFE— IT SAVES COIN

Four, come seven. It's a game of "scraps" they played Friday night at the Central branch of the Y. W. C. A. 59 East Monroe street, when Oliver Snyder in a lecture on "How to Dress Well on Small Incomes" recommended a two-in-one dress, suitable for 4 o'clock teas and 7 o'clock dinners. It may be developed in a variety of materials or "scraps."

Among other suggestions given by Mr. Snyder were: "Do your shopping alone. Buy your best clothes for every day wear. If your purse is small limit your choice of colors. Don't wear brown unless you have 'considerable snap.' Don't be too tailored even in business."

City Prisoners Near Escape in Auto Crash

A collision between the municipal bailiff's automobile bus carrying prisoners from the Maxwell street court to the House of Correction and a bakery wagon yesterday almost resulted in the escape of several of the prisoners at Maxwell and Miller streets. The men in the bailiff's automobile, fearing for their safety, beat on the door of the car, howled, and made strenuous efforts to get out.

Invented Color Printing Press Process; Dies Poor

New York, Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Application was made in the surrogate's court of the Bronx today for letters of administration on the estate of Charles Zallud, said to be the inventor of the color printing press process, who died Nov. 14.

The applicant, Mrs. M. Elterman of the Bronx, a niece, said that Zallud died virtually without funds. It is known that besides his personal belongings he had but $40 in his pocket at the time of his death, and two small insurance policies, one for $300 in the Prudential company, and a $100 benefit fund of the Robert Hoe Printing Press company, by whom he was employed for forty years.

Fire on Ocean Liner Delays Trip to Europe

New York, Nov. 26.—The steamship Panhandle steamed away for Plymouth, England, this afternoon after an exciting interruption to its voyage, just begun, when a fleet of fire and police boats was summoned to extinguish a blaze amidship which sent up clouds of smoke but did little damage.

The fire, believed to have resulted from a defective oil feed pipe, was discovered shortly after the liner left its pier in the Hudson river and the vessel hove to opposite the Battery until all danger was passed.

ERIN PEACE HOPE SHINES THROUGH SCREEN OF GLOOM

Griffith Is Back in London for New Parleys.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LODNDON, Nov. 26.—A regular smoke screen of gloom was thrown out in the London newspapers today in connection with the Irish peace conference, for which it is hard to find any justification. The only possible conclusion is that it was done at the direction of the government as a warning to the Ulster "die hards" of what may happen if they insist in wrecking the settlement.

As far as the Sinn Fein is concerned, everything is going normally. Arthur Griffith returned to London this morning after a consultation with the Dail Eireann cabinet in Dublin, while Michael Collins returns Monday to be ready for the resumption of conversations with the British government. It is not likely, however, that anything more than individual discussion will take place before Wednesday, when the attitude of Ulster will be known.

Quibble Over Allegiance.

It is now announced that Mr. Lloyd George and Sir James Craig have agreed on a statement to be made publicly in the Ulster parliament, but it is also certain that the latter will make a further statement in the secret session.

The matter of the form of allegiance is still the most serious and outstanding question between Great Britain and the Sinn Fein and this is said to be wholly a matter of etymology. The Irish are willing to give all the essentials of allegiance to the British monarch but they are not willing to use the word. It is said they have even suggested a diluted allegiance by a plan by which the Irishman swears allegiance to the Irish state and the Irish state swears allegiance to the king.

Why Workhouse Was Burned.

The official explanation issued by the Sinn Fein today concerning the burning of the Rathkeale, County Limerick, workhouse is an excellent example of the confused rule now existing in Ireland. The workhouse is a strong building of military value and was seized by the Irish republican army when the truce made it possible. A few days ago the British authorities notified the local republican commandant that they intended to occupy the building. He protested that this would be a breach of the truce, as it would place the British in a stronger military position than before.

The chief liaison officer at Dublin even tried to see Gen. MacReady and Sir Hamar Greenwood to protest, but they refused to discuss the matter. The republicans then decided to destroy the building rather than to hand it over to the British.

Lloyd George More Hopeful.

Mr. Lloyd George, it is reported, is more hopeful of an Irish settlement than he has been. He has asked the Sinn Fein to put on paper the definite safeguards offered Ulster and he has persuaded Craig to give them his careful consideration. He is also dealing now with the difficult question of allegiance, which also will have to be put on paper before long.

REUNITED

This picture of A. Stroller Tobinson, with his wife and two children, Luella, 12, and Eugene, 8, was taken in Chicago when Tobinson was leader of a west side group of radicals. During Russia's revolution he went there and became president of the far eastern republic. Twice he has been reported dead, but now his wife and children have rejoined him in Russia. [Gordon Photo.]

FAMILY REJOINS SOVIET RULER, EX-CHICAGOAN

Tobinsons Are Reunited at Moscow.

BY HELEN AUGUR.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

MOSCOW, Nov. 26.—In the fall of 1918 the Jewish west side of Chicago went into mourning. A Tokio newspaper had been quoted in cables as reporting the capture and execution by the Kolchak army of A. Stroller Tobinson, who the year before had exchanged the leadership of the west side radicals for the presidency of Far-Eastern Siberia. The cables added that Tobinson's widow and two small children had sailed from Japan for the United States.

The west side had idolized Tobinson, the genial giant. In the Workers' institute, the night school he founded, his pictures were draped in black.

Gertrude Tobinson arrived in Chicago with Luella and Eugene. Then the truth leaked out. Tobinson was not dead but was hiding from Kolchak in the woods and steppes of Siberia, bearded and dressed like a peasant.

Wife Said He Was Dead.

At an obscure quarter of the Kolchak lines young Gertrude Tobinson had been captured for the fourth time on her incredible flight from Habarovsk Thinking to learn her husband's whereabouts, the Kolchak officers threatened death to the three fugitives. The little mother said Tobinson was dead and she was going to her relatives in the United States.

Almost two years later Gertrude Tobinson was in New York, lecturing and writing, managing to keep her children out in the country. For a year she had not heard from her husband. There had been messages written in code, telling of captures and escapes, illness and peril. Then Tobinson seemed to have vanished. Everybody was sure this time of his death, but Gertrude Tobinson went quietly ahead educating her children and waiting for a definite word.

In the summer of 1920 she received a message from Tobinson. "I'm astride the horse again," it said. "Come home."

Reunited at Last.

Sitting over a comfortable cup of tea in the Moscow suite of the president of the Far-Eastern republic, Gertrude Tobinson told me the rest of the story.

"When I got to Moscow my husband was still fighting for Chita," she said. "I had to wait here for two weeks. Then Gen. Semenov flew away from Chita in an airplane, and we climbed into a special train and crossed Siberia. The children had their Christmas tree with their father in the new capital of the Far-Eastern republic.

"But in just a week I had to turn nurse. My husband broke down from the three years' strain, and was ill for months with pneumonia."

Krasnoschokov, as Tobinson is known here, has gone to the Crimea now to rest. His wife, who never whined under four years of ordeal, is inconsolable because he temporarily kidnaped the children while she was working in the famine area.

A Revolutionist at 15.

"From the time I was 12 until I went to America at 16 I was a clerk in a big department store in Warsaw," she said. "When the 1905 revolution came I was only 15, but I had been a revolutionists for some time. Because I was only a little girl the more suspected workers used to give me their pistols to carry home. I would slip into the house to try to conceal them under my pillow. But my mother would find them and weep for terror that we would be discovered.

"We lived in the same courtyard as the police station, and I would come home with pamphlets hidden in my clothing, and steal past the Cossocks and their horses sleeping in the open space. In the dead of night I would throw down printed appeals to them out of my window.

"Then it became unsafe for me to stay in Poland, and I went to New York and worked in a biscuit factory. I labored hard to learn English, but after a while I found a splendid teacher. He was a young house painter studying for a university degree and his name was Krasnoschokov."

Sea Captain Goes Mad, Terrifies Crew with Gun

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—A raving maniac, Capt. C. E. Morris of New York, master of the Munson line steamer Labette, was removed today in irons from the vessel and confined in the county hospital. When the Labette ran short of fuel last night crossing Mobile bay, Capt. Morris became delirious, armed himself with a shotgun and kept the crew at bay for several hours. They feared for their lives.

FARMER KILLED BY TRAIN.

Winchester, Ind., Nov. 26.—Morris Thompson, 35, a farmer, was killed instantly, and Gordon Leeky, 18, was injured seriously today when the stock truck they were driving to Winchester was struck by a Big Four freight train.

FORMER WHITE ASKS VETERANS TO RALLY TO REDS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

MOSCOW, Nov. 26.—Gen. Slastzoff has issued the following appeal to officers and soldiers who served under Gen. Wrangel and other White refugees.

"I, Slastzoff the Crimean, am calling upon you to subject yourselves to the soviet government and to return to your own country. If you do not, you are acting as mercenaries of foreign capital—as mercenaries against your own country. At any moment you may be sent to take Russian territory. You will be paid, but those sending you will get the material and territorial profit, and the Russian people will curse you."

After assuring them that they will not be oppressed, if they return, and assuring them that their past will be forgiven, he said:

"As one of the former highest commanders of the White army, I order you to follow me. I command you to subject yourselves to the soviet government in order to defend your people and country."

ELLER AND FICK NEAR FIST FIGHT AS CHARGES FLY

Alderman Wins Long Fight for Market Cleanup.

Ald. Henry L. Fick and Sanitary District Trustee Morris Eller had a word battle which verged on a fist fight at the entrance to the city law department yesterday after the alderman had won his five months' battle to have the Maxwell street market cleaned up.

As the shouts of the two officials rang thoughout the seventy-five yard length of the city hall corridor, Corporation Counsel Ettelson steped out of his office and asked the angry debaters to step into a private office that the public peace might be preserved.

Fick for months has accused Eller of fostering unlawful conditions, including permanent stands for which rents are alleged to be paid to collectors friendly to the Lundin-Thompson administration at the Maxwell street market.

"Nothing on Me," Eller Shouts.

"You have got nothing on me. I'm honest. You talk a lot, but you'll have to show me," Eller, the Lundin-Thompson committeeman from the Twentieth ward, which Ald. Fick and Ald. Franz have represented in the council for years, shouted as the argument closed.

"I'd be a fool to tell you what I have got," Fick answered as he tapped a coat pocket containing affidavits concerning conditions at the market.

Earlier in the day First Assistant Corporation Counsel James W. Breen announced that, as directed by a recent council order, the permanent stands will be removed next week. Mayor Thompson is said to have made a private investigation of conditions at Maxwell street and approved the council order.

Charges Nepotism to Eller.

"Five of six members of the Eller family are on public pay rolls," Ald. Fiak asserted at the close of the controversy. "The income of the family is about $1,800 a month. Each member of the family except Mrs. Eller has a limousine."

The latest method of separating stand owners from their cash is an automobile raffle being conducted by "Fishky" Krackow, a nephew of Louis Krackow, market master and Eller's right hand man.

Those selling tickets for the raffle have threatened stand keepers with dire misfortunes unless at least $5 worth of chances on the automobile are taken, according to complaints made to the council committee on markets.

Flock Complains Pastor, Rum Sleuth, Neglects Them

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—The Rev. J. O. Spracklin, who recently was tried and acquitted after he had killed Babe Trumbull in a rum raid, is charged with neglect by members of his Canadian church. They say he spends too much time away from his duties.

A HERO FINDS A FRIEND

HARRY W. HALEY.

COL. R. P. DICKERSON.

COL. R. P. DICKERSON is playing host to Harry W. Haley on the Dickerson ranch in southwest Missouri. Col. Dickerson is commander of the National Loyalty league. Haley went to Fort Leavenworth to serve a six months' term for desertion in place of a man who had saved his life in France, "Private Thomas G. Jones. After five months the deception was discovered and Haley was freed. But the government announced his sacrifice would be futile—Jones would have to pay his own penalty.

Haley and Jones were "buddies" with the Canadian forces in France. At Armentieres a machine gun bullet got Haley in the leg as the Germans were advancing. Jones dragged him to a shell hole, waited for darkness, then got him safely back to the Canadian line.

When America entered the war Jones transferred to Gen. Pershing's forces. Returning after the armistice, he deserted at Fort Slocum and went into Canada. There he married. Haley met him, heard his story, and volunteered to come into the United States and served the term imposed against Jones, so the latter's name might be cleared.

City Manager Ends Strife in "Soo" Fire Department

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—A rebellion in the Soo fire department by volunteer members was quickly put down today by City Manager H. A. Sherman, who discharged six men who demanded reinstatement of Frank Bassett, recently deposed fire chief, and asked removal of Frank Trombly, the new chief, threatening a strike, otherwise.

Judge, Auto Law Flouter, Pays $10 to Avoid a Cell

Pasadena, Cal., Nov. 26.—Judge Page Morris, federal District court at Duluth, Minn., today paid a fine of $10 in police court on a charge of traffic law violation. He was arrested Oct. 26, the complaint reciting that he failed to stop and aid a pedestrian struck by his automobile. This was changed today to a charge of failing to give a traffic signal, and Judge Morris was given the alternative of paying a fine of $10 or spending five days in jail.

FEAR OF BUYERS' BOYCOTT SHOOTS EGG PRICE DOWN

Produce Dealers Predict No Further Gain.

Alarmed at a threatened buyers' strike, holders of December eggs on the Chicago Mercantile exchange began to unload yesterday. In the early hours of trading, prices advanced to 42½ cents a dozen, a clean gain of 1¼ cents over the previous day, but before the end of the hour's trading the market weakened and all but ¼ cent of the gain was dissipated.

No Further Increase.

As a result of the changed attitude on the exchange yesterday, produce men declared there should be no further increase in the retail price. Most of them predicted a drop of several cents a dozen in wholesale and retail prices should the buyers' strike materialize.

Poole Continues Probe.

Notwithstanding the change in the egg market, Russell J. Poole, city food expert, continued his investigation of charges that an egg corner had boosted prices.

Poole estimated yesterday that the flurry in eggs during the last week had cost housewives in Chicago between $100,000 and $200,000 in increased egg prices. The net increase for the week was a trifle more than 7 cents a dozen wholesale and from 10 to 20 cents a dozen retail.

Indiana Bank Is Closed; Holdup Party to Blame

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 26.—The Beech Grove State bank, near here, was ordered closed today by Charles W. Camp, state bank examiner. Mr. Camp said there had been a steady withdrawal of deposits in the institution since it was robbed of $23,000 several months ago. Some of the stolen money was recovered and two men now are serving prison terms for connection with the robbery. It was said the bank was loaded with North Dakota securities. Jordon Olson of Minot, N. D., owns the controlling stock.

Mr. Camp said he did not believe the depositors will suffer any loss.

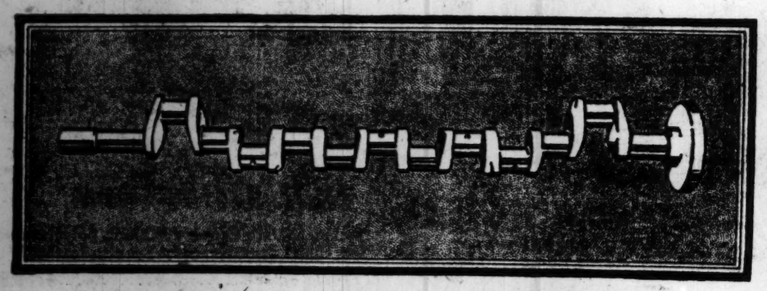
FRANKLIN



New Case-Hardened Crankshaft Triples Previous Bearing Life

CASE-HARDENED CRANKSHAFT! This is only one of a score of improvements in the Franklin of today, but an important one, not only to the Franklin, but to the industry as a whole. The Franklin crankshaft will now outlast three ordinary shafts.

It has always run more smoothly and lasted longer—it has seven main bearings, instead of the usual three. But now—triple the usual distance before taking up bearings! This source of trouble, delay and expense almost eliminated! Once again the Franklin is first—no other car possesses this valuable feature.

Elsewhere, too, endurance and efficiency have been increased. Simplified ignition system. Adjustable spring pivot bolts. Larger drive shaft, universal joints and important bearings. Automatic lubrication of valves and steering yoke pins. Drop-forged load-carrying parts—strength in every fibre.

Starting has been made easier by improved electric vaporizer and new starter with strong turning power. Perfected silent chain starter drive, together with the new patented Long-type aluminum pistons—a real advance, insures quiet operation.

Rear springs have been lengthened. Service brake is the most efficient yet designed.

Come and see today's Franklin. These recent advances again lead the motoring world. Any Franklin dealer will explain them and the other points. A few minutes' study of these improvements will be valuable to you later on in selecting your next car.

COUNTERFEITING IS PASSING OUT, PORTER ASSERTS

Sleuth Says Work Today Is Crude.

Counterfeiting of money, government revenue stamps, and official papers will be a lost art in a few years, according to Capt. Thomas I. Porter, chief of the Chicago office of the United States secret service division of the treasury department.

CAPT. THOMAS I. PORTER.

Capt. Porter was in his office in the federal building. The walls were hung with trophies of famous cases he has has handled during his thirty-three years in government service. A small printing press and several plates were on the table beside him.

Counterfeiters Were Experts.

"The counterfeiting game of thirty years ago was altogether different from the way it is workerd now," he said. "In the old days there were men who could make a $20 bank note that would not be discovered as being illegal until years after it was made.

"Now any one can pick up a phony bill and tell at a glance that it is not good. I remember men who would work for years on a plate to make a note as perfect as possible. All the work then was hand engraving, done by home made tools. Now they have cameras and the engraving process which, although it should be better, is not nearly as good.

"Take this note, for instance. You can tell it is not good. Then look at this. It is so nearly like the real a power glass is necessary to tell the difference.

Few Resist Temptation.

"Another thing, a lot of the best counterfeiters in the country have settled down to the quiet life. They have discovered the new process in the hands of amateurs has made it hard for them to work.

"But nearly all go back to the old trade. Few who have made any money through counterfeiting are able to throw off the call when they come out of prison. They still think they can make a bank note that will pass detection."

SCIENTIST HEADS NAME CANDIDATE FOR TRUSTEESHIP

Boston, Mass., Nov. 26.—The directors of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, announced today that they had submitted to the trustees of the Christian Science Publishing society the name of a Christian Scientist whose election as a trustee would be accepted by the directors.

This, it was explained, was in accordance with a letter from the trustees in which, as a result of the Supreme court decision given last Wednesday, they offered to coöperate with the directors in regard to the appointment of their successors in the trusteeship.

In response to the nomination, the directors' statement said, the trustees gave assurance that they would meet for action on it Monday.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—Class and commodity rates from California points to Douglas, Ariz., were held prejudicial to Douglas today by the interstate commerce commission to the extent that they exceed rates in effect from the same points to Bisbee, Ariz. Commodity rates to Douglas from points in Oregon and Washington were likewise held unjust to Douglas to the extent that they exceed rates from the same points of origin to El Paso, Tex., and Bisbee. The roads participating in the traffic were directed to alter their schedules before Feb. 21, 1922, and to make new rates and file them with the commission.

JEWS FROM TEN STATES UNITE TO AID RELIEF DRIVE

Meet Here Next Sunday to Plan Campaign.

Ten states, including Illinois and contiguous territory, are falling in line to put over the national drive for $14,000,000 for war sufferers in eastern Europe. Representatives from these states will assemble at the Standard club next Sunday.

Julius Rosenwald will be chairman of the conference, and the speakers' list will be headed by David A. Brown, former Detroit newsboy, who has risen to national eminence as a philanthropist and who is chairman of the national appeal for funds for the stricken multitudes abroad.

The ten states to be represented are grouped under zone seven in the national drive organization. Headquarters are in the Westminster building, 110 South Dearborn street. Charles Rubens is the zone chairman.

Big Day in Drive.

Reports received from a recent Boston conference of representatives from New England states indicate the Standard club meeting next Sunday will be a big day in the national drive. There will be eye-witness accounts of the suffering of the Jews in eastern Europe and of the heroic work of the joint distribution committee in administering the millions given by American Jews to relieve that distress.

Letters sent out by Mr. Rubens, appealing for a large delegation from each state have met with encouraging response. Among the leaders who will come with their state delegations are: Alex Rosen, Bismarck, N. D.; Sam Calmenson, Aberdeen, S. D.; A. Zalsky, Fremont, Neb.; H. Smulskoff, Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Fred W. Butzel, Detroit, Mich.; Isidore Kahn, Evansville, Ind.; Nat Stone, Milwaukee, Wis.; S. Sapro, Chisholm, Minn.; David P. Davis, Frankfort, Ky.

Extra Effort Necessary.

Mr. Rubens calls attention to the fact the present peculiar economic conditions necessitate extra endeavor in order to bring in the $14,000,000.

"This is an emergency," says Mr. Rubens, "and all of us, working to a common purpose, must form ourselves into a grand army of service, and if sacrifice is necessary we must make the sacrifice."

The conference at the Standard club will open at 11 o'clock and in the evening at Sinai Center the delegates will attend the great massmeeting organized by the Chicago Jewish relief committee, under the direction of Jacob M. Loeb, general chairman of the local drive for $1,500,000. Secretary Hoover will address the night meeting and Rosa Raisa, whose sympathies have ever been actively with her stricken countrymen and countrywomen in Russia, will sing.

MURDER NEAR EDWARDSVILLE.

Edwardsville, Ill., Nov. 25.—An unidentified man, well dressed and about 30 years old, was found shot to death on an automobile road five miles west of here today. There were nine bullet holes in his body.

PROFESSOR IS FOUND DROWNED IN MILWAUKEEE

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 26.—The body of Prof. Walter H. Cheever, vice president of Milwaukee Normal school and professor of psychology there, was found in Lake Michigan at the foot of Park place today.

Prof. Cheever left his home yesterday afternoon, according to his daughter, Mrs. McGee, with whom he lived.

President Carroll G. Pearse of the Milwaukee Normal said Prof. Cheever had been in poor health for some time. Mr. Cheever was a well known Chautauqua lecture. He had been a member of the school faculty for twenty-five years, and was 68 years old.

"Prof. Cheever overworked during the summer months and appeared in the school only a portion of the time this year," said Mr. Pearse.

Nab Farm Hand as Slayer of South Dakota Priest

Dubuque, Ia., Nov. 26.—The slayer of the Rev. Arthur B. Belknap at Lead, S. D., is believed to have been apprehended at Marquette, Ia., with the arrest of a farm hand answering the description of Father Belknap's slayer, and whose pockets were filled with clippings of the slaying. He was taken to Elkader, the county seat.

MAINE GOVERNOR SWATS HARVEY'S DIG AT PILGRIMS

Augusta, Me., Nov. 26.—Gov. Baxter took exception in a statement today to a remark by Ambassador George Harvey, in a speech at London on Thanksgiving day. The ambassador was quoted as saying that in Maine the Pilgrim sons kept the faith of their fathers only intermittently.

"I resent any reflection upon our past equally as I do upon our present," said the governor.

"As for the ambassador's assertion that the Pilgrim sons installed a government of authorized caprice, I suggest that caprice or capriciousness has no place in an accurate description of Maine character or Maine institutions, past or present.

"The faith of their fathers has been kept by the people of Maine and in keeping that faith they have not been outdone by their neighbors in sister states."

CONSUELO PUTS LONDON PALACE ON THE MARKET

Former Duchess to Sell Sunderland House.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Sunderland house, one of the wonder palaces of Mayfair, which was built by W. K. Vanderbilt for his daughter, Consuelo, then Duchess of Marlborough, is in the market. Its original cost was in the neighborhood of a million dollars, and its present value is much in excess of that figure.

Behind a massive and somewhat forbidding exterior Sunderland house conceals salons and apartments of great splendor. The grand staircase of marble and brass, the huge ballroom and priceless tapestries are hardly rivaled among the palaces of Europe.

"White Elephant" to Consuelo.

With all this magnificence, however, there was little doing in the strictly social sense under Duchess Consuelo's régime. Estranged from the duke, whom she eventually divorced, she lived for public welfare and good works, and the sumptuous apartments of Sunderland house were more often thronged with charity organizers than with social butterflies.

When the duchess was a candidate in London's municipal elections she held her committee meetings at Sunderland house.

Government Office During War.

During the war the mansion was commandeered by the government for departmental offices, and after the armistice it became the London headquarters of the league of nations.

Nowadays the ex-duchess is plain Mme. de Balsan and lives in Paris since her marriage last July to a wealthy French manufacturer. The new duchess, who has no titled to Sunderland house, seems to be absorbed in agricultural pursuits at Blenheim, the vast Marlborough estate in Oxfordshire.

CONSUELO'S CASTLE FOR SALE

Sunderland house, which W. K. Vanderbilt built for his daughter, Consuelo, when she became duchess of Marlborough, is for sale.

U. S. Claims $4,500,000 Tax from Liberty Motor Makers

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 26.—The United States government has filed a tax claim against the Lincoln Motor company for $4,500,000. The tax, the government contends, is due since 1918 from the Lincoln Motor Company of Michigan, which manufactured Liberty motors during the war. The government claims the present company, maker of motor cars, is responsible for it. The company is now being run by the Detroit Trust company as receiver.

WOMEN TRAFFIC COPS RARIN' TO GO IN NEW YORK

New York, Nov. 26.—[Special.]—The 2,000 volunteer women police reserves began reporting today to the police captains in their districts for instruction regarding duty as traffic regulators beginning at 8 a. m. Monday. They are to be placed at crossings near public schools, because the milk strike has taken 2,500 men of the regular force, and there is a temporary shortage.

The women will serve between 8 and 9 in the morning, 12 to 1 and 3 to 3:30 in the afternoon, and at special times when private and part-time schools let out their pupils. They will wear dark blue uniforms, Sam Brown belts, black leggings, black shoes, overseas caps and will have shields, police whistles and the summons book. They have full police powers, and if it is found drivers do not obey them night sticks will be issued.

Among the members are Mrs. John Loftus, wife of a famous jockey, and Mrs. H. S. Saunders, known to hundreds who visited the Cafe Montmartre as "Doraldina," the Hawaiian dancer.

BANDITS SNATCH $30,000 FROM BANK VEHICLE

Boston, Mass., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—In a rain of shots, four motor bandits escaped today with about $30,000, which they had taken from a motor truck of the First National bank. Guards on the truck were unable to frustrate the robbery. The roads leading to New York are being watched, because the holdup car carried New York licenses.

St. Louis Bandits Get Jewels.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Jewelry and diamonds worth more than $60,000 were stolen today by two robbers, who held up the St. Louis Refining company's offices. The concern deals in rare metals and uncut gems.

MICHIGAN BOY, 13, KILLS CHUM WHO WON'T 'BEAT IT'

Bay City, Mich., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Joe Michalski, 12, was shot and killed Friday by Barney Wasielewski, 13, in the latter's home at Fisherville. The Wasielewski lad was brought here and locked up.

According to playmates, the older boy ordered the other from the house, picking up a rifle. The Michalski boy evidently thought the other fooling. Playmates told the police Barney then pulled the trigger. The bullet entered th younger boy's tmple.

Wasielewski said to the police:

"If that kid had kept away he wouldn't have been shot. I told him a thousand times to beat it. He wouldn't, so I shot him."

DOES LIFE SEEM DIFFICULT? GO VISIT MR. BLOSE

He Runs Adjusting Bureau in a Loop Store.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

Once, just once, upon a time, a man named Leonidas, with 300 Spartans, in a narrow mountain passage, 50 feet wide, held the pass at Thermopylae against hundreds of Persians, all of them men, most of them mad.

Every day, for the last fifteen years, a man named Fred Blose, with three assistants, in a narrow passage, 12 feet by 6, has held the pass at the adjusting bureau of a loop department store, against hundreds of shoppers, all of them mad, most of them women.

"All we ever get is grief," says Mr. Blose, and he chuckles as he explains to the irate woman with the bass voice why the "fire proof snow" table decorations burned up during the second course of her dinner party.

Do's That Don't; Dont's That Do.

"Where's my hand?" shouts a woman in brown. She punctuates her question by waving two hands toward the desk. In a moment, a third, of china, is handed her.

Christmas cards that bend where they shouldn't; paper dolls that don't bend where they should; gray hair nets that were sent the lady who had hennaed her hair; a rose colored lamp shade alone and lost in a big city; these are a few of the things that help keep Mr. Blose and his corps of fifty underground helpers busy.

Miss L——, a girl at the end of the line, whispers something in a low tone about "remnants were returned and," but her voice dies down. After three attempts she manages to explain that with the remnants which were sent back, "the maid, so careless of her, enclosed my best pair of pajamas, lavendar, slightly worn."

Officer McN—— and the Chickens.

Officer McN—— is next. "The neighbor's chickens are in my yard. What're you gonna do about it?"

But the adjusting bureau is able to divine that the chickens are in Mr. McN's yard because the fence has been torn down; that the fence has been torn down because a motor truck ran into it; that the motor truck must have been driven by an employe of the store. Hammer, nails, and a carpenter are dispatched with the customer and by now the neighbor's chickens are seeing their own yard first.

More difficult to adjust is Mrs. F.'s complaint. "Some one drank half a bottle of my home brew and my lamp shade was delivered the same day. It's your fault."

The colder the weather the hotter the temper, according to Mr. Blose, who charts the curve of complaints as increasing from September to the holidays and gradually decreasing until April, where a summer slump sets in. Monday is the best day for a fight. The fighting hour is 11 o'clock.

Apartment Houses and Sawdust.

Apartment houses and sawdust—they are the two main reasons for a complaint bureau.

Apartment house deliveries are dangerous, it seems. The boy delivers your pincushion to Mrs. Brown in apartment 6. Mrs. Brown forgets to bring it in to you and the trouble starts.

Sawdust is dangerous because it is the wrapping for dishes and all breakable articles. The shaving cup you buy for your husband's birthday on the morrow has to be wrapped in sawdust. This delays the delivery. Result—husband has to go to the barber's on his birthday.

Leonidas' friends at Thermopylae died. Mr. Blose's friends become famous. One of his former assistants is a well known priest; another is a prominent Chicago judge.

COL. JOHN V. CLINNIN IS AWARDED MEDAL FOR SERVICE IN WAR

The distinguished service medal "for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services" has been conferred on Col. John V. Clinnin, assistant United States district attorney and former commanding officer of the 130th infantry.

COL. JOHN V. CLINNIN.

Col. Clinnin yesterday received notice from the adjutant general at Washington that the medal was being forwarded to the commanding general of the 6th army corps for presentation with full ceremony.

The citation reads "for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service as regimental commander of the 130th infantry. By his force and energy he brought his regiment to a high state of efficiency, instilling into it an aggressive spirit, which proved a valuable factor in the operation of his regiment near Breuilles, Verdun, Bois de Chaumes, Siviy and Bois du Platt Chene. He rendered services of great merit."

Rich People Suspended in Philadelphia Rum Raids

Philadelphia, Nov. 26.—Further investigations made today in connection with the raiding yesterday of an apparently deserted warehouse by prohibition officers revealed that the trail of alleged illegal sales of intoxicants led to the doors of well known clubs, certain hotels, and exclusive residences.

Sixty thousand dollars' worth of choice liquors were found, but what interested the federal raiders more were the memoranda, receipts, and orders for the wines and liquors found in the place. No names have been revealed but interesting developments are promised.

FOUR OF FAMILY DIE IN STRANGE PACT OF DEATH

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The calling of what appeared to be an ordinary trial in Bow street police court revealed a family death pact in which four persons died rather than face disgrace.

The victims were Ernest Coates, an electrical engineer; his wife, Marie, who had been married three times; Mrs. Daisy Townshend, her daughter by her second marriage, and Henry Marin, her son by her first marriage.

A Happy Family.

Coates had been wealthy, but his fortunes had declined. Still the family lived happily in a large double house in Leigham court road, Streatham, London, S. W. The daughter made her home with the mother, as her husband, an Australian officer, was serving in Australia. The son, his health broken in the war, was tenderly cared for by the others of the family.

Coates' misfortunes came to a head when he was charged with misappropriating 290 pounds belonging to a public company. The daughter was just recovering from a long and expensive illness. Coates secured his release on bail pending trial. Then, apparently, he set the stage for the tragedy.

Their Last Dinner.

First Coates and his wife made their wills. It seems they determined their helpless son should die with them rather than be left to suffer among strangers. But the daughter decided to die with them, their wills indicated.

The maid was given a holiday. Mrs. Coates prepared their last meal. A table was laid. They had chicken for dinner and then were produced two bottles, one of champagne and the other of poison, probably cyanide of potassium.

The champagne was poured into four glasses and into each glass was poured some of the poison.

It is believed young Marin's wine was poisoned and then handed him to drink. He died almost immediately and was carried upstairs just as he was, fully dressed, and laid reverently on a bed.

Others Prepare for Death.

Then the husband and wife and the daughter prepared to die. They undressed and the two women put on their prettiest night dresses.

It is clear the daughter first took her poison draught and that when she died the man and woman placed her on the bed in her own room and crossed her hands. Then Mrs. Coates went into her bedroom, lay on the bed, took the poisoned champagne, and drank. The husband arranged her in death and turned her head sideways so he could take a last look at her as he held the champagne to his lips. They were found face to face in death as if in peaceful sleep.

On the table was a letter written to the coroner explaining the tragedy.

N. Y. Governor Undecided About Waterway Debate

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Gov. Miller laughed, but reserved decision when asked today if he would accept the offer of the Illinois Manufacturers' association to debate the St. Lawrence ship canal proposition with Gov. Allen of Kansas.

"I received a telegram from the Manufacturers' association today in which they offered me a 'fair ring,' but I have not had any challenge from Gov. Allen or any other person," the governor said.

The Merit of a Piano Is the Merit of its TONE

OF the host of different makes of pianos on the market, there are perhaps half a dozen or so whose tonal quality entitles them to be classified as really fine instruments.

THE first step in choosing a piano, then, will naturally be to make a careful, critical comparison of the tonal quality of these few leading makes.

IF you conscientiously do this—without prejudice—we are confident your choice will be one of the five sizes of

Kranich & Bach Grand Pianos

THIS assurance on our part is based not merely on our own judgment of musical values, but on the judgment of recognized musical critics and pianists of national and international fame, who have unhesitatingly awarded "the palm" to Kranich & Bach Grand Pianos for tonal purity, singing quality, range, and power, with faultless touch.

THERE is that about the Kranich & Bach tone—a quality of exquisite sympathy—which seems to vibrate in harmony with every mood and emotion of the human heart.

TO hear it is to thrill to its inspiration; to play it is to sense at once its marvelous musical possibilities.

The Kranich & Bach Grand Piano is available in five sizes and eleven styles

—A size and a style to meet every requirement as to space and personal preference. For homes where space is limited, special attention is invited to the celebrated

STINNES FRAMES BIG DEAL TO SAVE GERMANY, REPORT

Plan to Develop Russia Wins British Aid.

BY GEORGE SELDES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—Coincident with reports that Hugo Stinnes achieved great success during his London visit, where he conferred with British financiers on questions of credits and on joint action in exploiting Russia, comes a report that British, German and Italian trade missions are undertaking a revision of their national trade treaties with Russia. German commercial success in Russia along many lines already has been announced.

Stinnes' London trip has created a great stir in Germany, where the coal king is coming to be regarded as a sort of demi-god or perhaps a Moses who will lead the Teuton hosts out of the desert of reparations and from the wreck of their financial and economic system. It is generally believed that Stinnes has been successful in his arrangements and dealings on his Russian plans and that he is engaged in negotiations similar to those of Felix Deutsch of the German General Electric company.

German Hopes Lie in Russia.

These industrial leaders, as well as Dr. Rathenau and others, believe Germany can make good on everything, if given an opportunity, in developing and reconstructing Russia, which has always depended upon Germany economically.

There also have been numerous reports that Stinnes discussed a long moratorium for Germany for the stabilization of German money.

In the proposed Anglo-German-Italian treaty with Russia Germany is expected to deliver a large amount of railway equipment and farm machinery.

Rothschild Cannot Find Billion.

Director Kraemer of the National Economic council, in a speech on the German credit deal with Lord Rothschild, said when Germans asked $1,000,000,000 of Lord Rothschild he replied:

"There is not so much free money in England and America together."

When the Germans said that they must pay $1,000,000,000 yearly, Lord Rothschild answered:

"The reparations demands are altogether madness."

the West Side Y. W. C. A. took time off to get their clubroom ready for the "come and see" week at the Y, which starts Monday.

"This is not a campaign for funds," said Mrs. Carl C. Bullock in announcing plans for the week. "We thought for a change the public ought to be invited not to contribute more money but to come and see how money contributed in the past is being spent for Chicago girls."

During this week the public is invited to visit the ten Y. W. C. A. centers in Chicago. Special programs are being prepared for some of the evenings.

Monday at the Central branch, 59 East Monroe street, Miss Helen Branch will talk on "The Girl and Her Job."

Monday and Thursday are health nights at the West Side branch, 101 South Ashland boulevard, where the girls will stage special exhibitions of dancing and swimming. Miss Jane Addams will be the principal speaker at the Central branch on membership night, Thursday, Dec. 1.

RUSSIA LOCKS UP ALL OFFICERS OF HOUSING BUREAU

Strikes Smashing Blow at Grafters.

BY AMBROSE LAMBERT.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MOSCOW, Nov. 26.—The biggest sensation in Moscow is the energetic manner in which M. Kameniev, president of the Moscow soviet, is dealing with the wholesale graft and extortion now going on in the allotment of apartments and rooms.

During the last three days every official in the housing department, from the highest to the lowest and numbering hundreds, has been arrested, while every citizen who has paid bribes is asked to come forward and testify with a promise of immunity.

The first step in the clearing up of what has been the most open scandal in Moscow was the conviction of several officials this week with the imposing of three year sentences to prison. Because of the wholesale ramifications of the graft and intimidation M. Kameniev decided to abolish soviet control of the housing problem, placing it in the hands of the inhabitants, who will form housing cooperative and building societies.

Makes Cheka Popular.

M. Kameniev issued a notice to the citizens of Moscow, in which he did not mince words, denouncing the system of extortion prevailing. It is common knowledge that it is impossible to get a room in Moscow without paying a bribe, and even then one is liable to be put out if he does not continue to "grease" the palms of the officials. The Cheka, which made the arrests, for the first time in its history took a popular step and M. Kameniev has been acclaimed by all.

He has taken an even more daring step, which is interpreted as a significant tendency of the government to recognize the rights of citizens other than workmen. Under a decree signed by Lenin, doctors are granted immunity from being ousted from their apartments. Workmen living in an apartment house demanded that a certain doctor give up his apartment, and upon his refusal they forcibly evicted him. During the eviction the doctor's son beat up the house commandant. Later the son was tried, but he was acquitted and the workmen reprimanded.

Firm Hand on Workers.

M. Kameniev in a signed statement showed that the workmen had violated Lenin's decree and said that if they had not been workmen they would not have been freed with a mere reprimand. His action was one of the most daring steps taken by any of the soviet leaders since the announcement of the new economic policy.

Furthermore, his action in tackling the workmen is regarded as most significant, in view of the fact that he is not only the president of the Moscow soviet and the brother-in-law of Trotzky, but he is one of the "big five" who direct the external policy of Russia.

In even the moderate home of good taste a harmony of effect is now obtained through the adaptation to modern furniture, of designs made by master cabinetmakers of the historic Periods.

The Aeolian Company was the first musical instrument house to recognize the importance of this modern trend toward cabinets in Period designs and to meet it with Period Phonographs.

The beautiful and artistic Period Vocalions which were then introduced showing motifs from practically all of the famous periods in table or console Model Cabinets received a warm welcome from a discriminating public.

Now taking another step, this company presents a strikingly beautiful group of Upright Period Vocalions. These charming instruments, while correct and tasteful in design, occupy no more space than the conventional phonograph, yet harmonize perfectly with the finest modern Period furniture.

The tone-reproducing qualities of these new Upright Period Vocalions are quite up to the high Vocalion standards. In purity, richness and refinement of tone, they cannot be approached.

All models contain the Graduola, the famous, exclusive Vocalion device with which you may graduate the flow of melody as you will—delicately coloring the music as your mood dictates.

Period Vocalions are also equipped with the Vocalion Automatic Stop; the Vocalion Universal Tone-Arm, which plays all makes of records, bringing out the full beauty of each, and requiring no added attachments.

The case-woods used in the new Upright Period Vocalions are exquisite. Some are developed in choicest crotched mahogany, others in soft, shaded walnut, in some cabinets beautifully combined with genuine Burl Redwood.

Placed near a lamp they glow with an almost jewel-like radiance and beautify the room as does a fine picture or piece of porcelain.

The Period Vocalions are now on exhibition at our Aeolian-Vocalion Salons, and cordial invitation is extended you to come and hear and see them.

LIVE STOCK SHOW OPENS ON THRONG OF MANY NATIONS

Students' Judging Contest Features First Day.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Flags of more than a score of nations hung from the big dome of the International amphitheater in which gathered thousands of visitors, representing approximately an equal number of countries, for the International Live Stock exposition which opened yesterday at the stockyards. Foreign delegates, visitors, and exhibitors from nearly every state in the union came pouring in over all roalroads leading into Chicago.

Heading the delegation from Canada were G. H. Malcolm of Winnipeg, minister of agriculture of Manitoba; W. W. Frazier, live stock commissioner of Manitoba; Prof. John C. Brocken, president of the Manitoba Agricultural college; S. J. Carlyle, live stock man from Alberta, and Prof. W. Z. Carlyle, manager of the Prince of Wales' ranch at High River, Alberta.

College Day at the Show.

It was college day at the International, opening with thes tudents live stock judging contest. Eighty-four man were entered in the contest and were busy in the judging pits all day. The awards will be announced today.

Judges of the students' contest are J. L. Edmonds, H. P. Rusk, and W. G. Kammlade, all professors at the University of Illinois; W. B. Richards, Geneva, Ill.; Prof. W. H. Pew, Ohio; Prof. F. R. Marshall, Utah; W. J. Carmichael, Chicago, and Prof. W. H. Smith, Urbana, Ill.

The aisles at the grain and hay show, held as an important part of the stock show this year, were filled all day.

The judging of hay, grain, and live stock will begin tomorrow. The amphitheater will be open today, offering an excellent opportunity for Chicagoans to see the exhibits.

Judging of Belgian horses will be one of the main events in the arena tomorrow, while the tying of blue ribbons will be in progress all day in the various live stock divisions.

Eight teams of girls, all members of the boys' and girls' clubs, will begin their demonstrations in domestic science in the morning. There are three girls in each of the teams, which represent North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa, Massachusetts, Michigan, and Illinois.

Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, and E. T. Meredith, former secretary of agriculture, will be here tomorrow to take part in the International. Both of them will make several speeches during the week.

W. Watson of Old Melburn, Aberdeenshire, and D. M. Allen of Bellingtomb, Grantow-Anspey, the two Scotch judges, have arrived. Mr. Watson will probably name the grand champion steer early in the week. This event usually creates more interest than any other. Mr. Allen will supervise awards in the breeding cattle and steer classes.

Last night the horse fair opened. It ist he f eature event that is to be held every night of the International.

MATERNITY BILL NOW EFFECTIVE IN SIX STATES

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—The "maternity bill" signed by President Harding the day before Thanksgiving is now in effect in six states, which had passed laws accepting it in advance of its passage by congress, Miss Grace Abbott of Chicago, chief of the children's bureau, announced today.

So eagerly was the passage of the bill awaited in Delaware, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, and South Dakota that these states in the 1921 sessions of their legislatures passed laws accepting the act if it should become a law and authorizing a state board or division to cooperate with the federal government.

Other states will not be obliged to wait until the next regular session of their legislatures, for the law provides that if the legislature has not acted the governor may, in so far as the laws of his state permit, accept the provisions of the act and authorize a state agency to coöperate with the children's bureau until the legislature has had opportunity to act.

SERVED WITH GEN. GRANT.

Tuscola, Ill., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Dr. James L. Rest, 87, of Tuscola died at his home yesterday. He was one of the oldest practicing physicians in central Illinois. He came to Tuscola in 1859. He was a veteran of the civil war, in which he served as surgeon of the 21st Illinois, Gen. Grant's old regiment.

Kill Midnight Prowler; Police Exhibit Body

Peter Punker, gardener at the home of John Stuart, 990 Sheridan road, Winnetka, heard a disturbance in the chicken house Friday night. Investigation showed an animal moving under the roosts. Policeman Balkow was hurriedly summoned. One shot was enough. The raccoon is on exhibition at the Winnetka police station.

CONGRESSMEN ON VACATION START 'FENCE BUILDING'

All Illinois Republicans Seek Seats Again.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Most Illinois congressmen are in their home districts this week, taking advantage of their only chance to put their political fences in repair before the regular session of congress opens on Dec. 5.

All the Illinois delegation in congress—excepting, probably, "Uncle Joe" Cannon—will be candidates for renomination in the April primaries. Uncle Joe has as yet not said personally that he will not seek another term, but all political developments in the Danville district are indicative of his voluntary retirement at the end of his present term.

These Have Little Opposition.

Indications now are that these Republican congressmen will have no formidable opposition in the primaries and possibly will have a clear field:

District.
1—Martin B. Madden, Chicago.
2—James R. Mann, Chicago.
9—Fred A. Britten, Chicago.
12—Charles E. Fuller, Belvidere.
13—John C. McKenzie, Elizabeth.
14—William J. Graham, Aledo.
15—Edward J. King, Galesburg.
16—Clifford Ireland, Peoria.
17—Frank H. Funk, Bloomington.
19—Allen F. Moore, Monticello.
20—Guy L. Shaw, Beardstown.
21—Loren E. Wheeler, Spreingfield.
22—William A. Rodenberg, East St. Louis.
23—E. B. Brooks, Newton.
24—Thomas S. Williams, Louisville.
25—Edward E. Dennison, Marion.

There are but three Democrats in the present Illinois delegation—John W. Rainey, Adolph J. Sabath, and Stanley H. Kunz, all of Chicago. The usual Democratic primary scramble is anticipated in each of these normally Democratic districts.

Congress at Large Race.

For the two places for congressman at large the early limited field is beginning to enlarge. Former Gov. Richard Yates is a candidate for renomination and Henry R. Rathbone of Glencoe has just concluded a preliminary campaign trip through the state for the succession to the late William E. Mason. John R. Thompson, a former Chicago leader, is the latest possibility as an entrant. John J. Brown of Vandalia has made up his mind to enter the race, and Stephen A. Day of Evanston is an announced candidate.

In the Englewood district the anti-Thompson-Lundin Republicans will have a candidate against Congressman Eliot W. Sproul. This may be former Congressman William W. Wilson. However, there is a chance of a new agreement between the country towns organization and the city hall foes in the city whereby Frederick R. De Young of Harvey may contest against Mr. Sproul, it was rumored yesterday.

Gorman to Have Opponent.

The city hall has decided to put a candidate against Congressman John J. Gorman in the Sixth district on the west side, it has been announced. In the Seventh the anti-Lundin forces will have a candidate, not yet selected, against Congressman M. A. Michaelson, and in the Tenth it is expected Congressman Carl Chindblom will have to go against a city hall candidate.

In the Aurora district politicians are figuring upon a real primary fight between State Senator H. C. Kessinger and Congressman Ira Coply. In Uncle Joe's district State Representative William P. Holaday has opened his campaign for congress. Dr. E. L. Cooley of Danville is withholding activities until he hears more definitely of Mr. Cannon's intentions.

Democrats Hope to Regain Losses.

The Democrats will make desperate efforts to retrieve the Twentieth and Twenty-third districts, which were swept up in the Harding landslide. Former Congressman Henry T. Rainey will be a candidate for his old place in the Twentieth district, and there will be a Democratic primary fight in the Twenty-third between Albert R. Gravenhorst of Effingham, major in the old 4th Illinois in France, and State Representative John A. McNeil of Olney.

Police Stop London Aim to Outlight Broadway

LONDON, Nov. 26.—[United News.]—"Brighter London," as the press hailed a month's scintillation of the "Midnight Follies," has been snuffed out by the London county council.

The council voted that performers must be limited to six, without scenery or stage costumes, which, promoters declare, is equivalent to killing the effort to supply after theater suppers with entertainment after the American Ziegfeld manner.

The decision was an outgrowth of a complaint by theatrical managers that the Follies stage, in connection with a hotel, was attended by liquor and other privileges not accorded regular theaters.

A wonderful Christmas Gift

Makes any sewing machine an electric

THERE is no secret of dressing well at little cost. It's really ridiculously simple, as every woman knows. You merely do the sewing yourself, and have many more pretty things to wear, than another who spends much more.

But sewing on the old-fashioned foot-pumping machine is wearisome drudgery and to most women, a positive danger. Now this is all changed. One motion of the hand places the Hamilton Beach Home Motor next to the hand wheel of your ordinary sewing machine and makes it a speedy electric.

No tools or screws or belts required. Absolutely no holes to drill or clamps to attach. Your machine is unmarred. Heavy material, thick seams, many plies—it's all one to you—just as easy to sew as the sheerest silks. And the very first dress saves its small first-cost. You sew as long as you like without effort or exertion, at a cost for current of less than one cent an hour. You never touch the wheel; the machine always starts the right way; you never break a thread. Just a silent steady motion, that is exactly as fast as you wish—no faster—controlled by your toe on the speed pedal.

Hamilton Beach Home Motor

With its convenient attachments the same motor also serves as a wonderful fan in hot weather, sharpens knives, polishes silver, and whips cream. Nearly 1,000,000 homes now use it to save time, labor, and health. Absolutely guaranteed by Hamilton Beach.

At $55.00 it is unrivaled value for the money. Yet a small deposit and a little each week, makes it yours to use as much as you please. Every day you delay costs you time and work and health. EXCESS IMPORTS AROUSE MEXICO TO TRADE PERIL

Lack of Protection to Land Owner Blamed.

BY J. H. CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
(Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.)

Mexico City, Nov. 26.—The Mexican authorities and the metropolitan press are much concerned over the fact that Mexican imports steadily are rising, while Mexican exports as steadily are diminishing. This generally is taken as an indication that Mexico is recovering slowly from the effects of the revolution, in so far as the exploitation of her natural resources is concerned. The following editorial from the Universal is typical of the attitude of the metropolitan press:

"While our imports are increasing our exports are decreasing. We are paying out in gold what we ought to be paying in the products of the country; and the increase of our imports over our anemic exports is throwing more into the limelight every day our unbalanced economic condition.

"Lack of Protection."

"No one in Mexico doubts that this condition is due to the absolute lack of protection of the rights of the landowner, and that this in its turn is the cause of the lack of the cultivation of land, which naturally brings in its train an inability to satisfy the first necessities of national life.

"The lack of protection and support of our national industries is the direct cause of our having to import from foreign countries such large quantities of merchandise, when we ought ourselves to be in the export business. The unserviceable condition of the National railways has prevented and is still preventing us exporting whatever of our national products we might be able to export, as in the past."

New Italian Line Opens.

A new Italian steamship company with five powerful boats is to begin service between Genoa and the Mexican gulf ports. The first steamer left Genoa on Nov. 15 and will touch at Mediterranean Spanish ports and Havana on the way.

The new company is bidding for freight and offers transportation from Genoa or Spanish ports to Tampico at $1, American money, cheaper per cubic meter than the prices hitherto prevailing.

United States Shy on Tin; Must Import Most Used

Our total annual consumption of tin is something like 93,000 tons. Unfortunately we are obliged to import nearly all of it, for the United States has hardly any tin deposits worth mentioning.

ITALIAN ARRESTED FOR FEUD SLAYING SAYS HE HAS AN ALIBI

James Genna, who was arrested for the murder of Nicola Adamo Thursday, has only one reply for all questions shot at him by the police. It is:

"I have an alibi."

Genna, who is a brother of Angelo Genna, recently acquitted on a charge of murdering Paul Labriola, has been identified as one of the three murderers by Mrs. Adamo.

Mrs. Adamo told the police her husband had told her often that if anything happened to him James Genna would know about it.

The motive for the murder, the police believe, is a feud which had its birth years ago in the slaying of Adamo's brother in Italy.

KILLED BY TRAIN.

MISS LAVAZZORIO GETS $10,000 FOR LOVE OF CUNEO

Accepts Compromise to Avoid Third Trial.

Margaret Lavazzorio was awarded a judgment of $10,000 against Amerigo Cuneo, son of a wealthy South Water street merchant, by Judge Hugo Pam in the Superior court yesterday.

This, it is believed, will write "finis" to the pre-war romance and breach of promise suit asking $50,000, which has dragged through two courts during the last year and a half.

Cuneo's forty-five love letters, which were twice read to juries in the Circuit and Superior courts, told the story of a romance which cooled, and finally ceased altogether.

The candor with which Cuneo analyzed his love for the girl at its various stages caused the two juries to find judgment against him.

In the first suit before Judge Theodore Brentano the jury awarded her $30,000. Settlement on a smaller amount was offered but refused.

Then a second suit for the same amount before Judge Pam resulted in a $15,000 decision by the jury. Cuneo's lawyers offered $5,000, and again the offer was refused.

Yesterday Judge Pam, who has attempted on several hearings to adjust the matter, told the plaintiff he would either, at her request, enter a judgment of $10,000 or, at the request of Cuneo's attorneys, grant a motion for a new trial. Margaret accepted the judgment. Cuneo was married to his cousin two years ago in California.

AGED RESIDENT CELEBRATES HER 94TH BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Abby F. Cook Mendsen, who celebrates her ninety-fourth birthday anniversary today at her home, 2049 Washington boulevard, has lived in this city since 1854. Although she has been an invalid for fifty years, she has maintained an interest in public affairs and has been a constant contributor to charity.

Mrs. Mendsen's father was Willard Cook, one of Chicago's pioneer contractors in stone construction, under the firm name of Willard Cook & Sons. One of her brothers, Ansel B. Cook, was at one time a member of the state legislature and at another acting mayor of Chicago.

Court Forbids Des Moines Special Traction Election

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 26.—Judge James C. Hume today issued an injunction restraining the city of Des Moines from holding a special election Monday to decide whether the Des Moines City Railway company should be given a new sliding scale franchise to supersede the 5 cent flat rate franchise now in existence. Judge Hume held that notice of the election had not been legally published. The city will appeal to the state Supreme court. A suspension of car service is threatened.

MANILA CHINESE PLAN A UNITED STATES OF CHINA

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

MANILA, Nov. 26.—A group of the richest Chinese in the Philippine islands plan to finance a new independent government in their native Fukien province in China.

Cu Ung Jieng, the richest Chinese in the Philippines, is going to Fukien soon. He says if he is given $1,000,000 (Mexican), he will guarantee to secure the independence of Fukien within eighteen months. He says he is ready to put up a personal bond as a guarantee that he will keep his promise. In case of failure, he says, he will return the money with 50 per cent interest at the end of eighteen months. He is worth 8,000,000 or 9,000,000 pesos (a peso is worth 50 cents).

It is reported that Dee C. Chuan, a millionaire Chinese, will give half the sum which Cu Ung Jieng requires.

The idea is to make Amoy the capital of the new independent government and to try to get the other provinces to declare their independence with the ultimate motive of combining the states into a group similar to the United States of America.

"HOME OF THE BABY LOBSTER"

Because we have eliminated all superfluities and you pay only for the food you eat you can cut your dining costs 40 to 60 per cent, and even more, and still get food which can't be beaten anywhere at any price.

Whether you eat breakfast at home or not you will be interested to know that—

These sea-food specialties suggest why the North American is the most distinctive sea-food restaurant since the days of Rector's.

One dozen fresh shrimps, with cocktail sauce	30c
Oyster Stew—made in an individual dish, with big New York Counts, an entire bottle of Certified milk and a big piece of butter	35c
Fried Oysters—7 big New York Counts, fried to your order, with Tartar or Chili sauce or ketchup	35c
Whole Baby Lobster, hot with melted butter and Chili sauce or cold with Chili sauce	65c

for 45 cents (or less) you can get a very fine breakfast here. One glance at our prices will show you how satisfyingly this can be accomplished.

Suppose for the sake of comparison we take the finest breakfast imaginable—fresh eggs with tender bacon, toast, coffee cake, or sweet rolls and a pot of steaming coffee. Here that "king of breakfasts" costs only 45 cents. The charge for the two eggs, strictly fresh and fried in butter to make them taste better, with four strips of the finest bacon is 30 cents; an individual (2 cup) pot of coffee 10 cents; and coffee cake, or zwieback, or sweet roll or fresh toast with butter or honey only 5 cents (total 45 cents).

And that is all you do pay. There are no waiters to be tipped.

When you can have such a breakfast as this for such a small price is there any sense in paying from 65 cents to $1.25 (or even more) elsewhere for the same food?

Another popular breakfast specialty of ours is cornmeal mush, fried in butter, with three strips of bacon, butter, and pure maple sap or honey. It costs you only 25 cents.

Also for 25 cents you may have a delicious honey waffle, with three strips of bacon, or Mickelberrys Old Farm Sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey. Add to it an individual (2 cup) pot of coffee for 10 cents and you have a real breakfast for 35 cents.

Big Portions

Each portion is more than a portion—usually ample for two. There is no extra charge for sharing portions and so for a very small price two people can get a complete meal of several courses.

Go where you will you can't find a more convenient and comfortable place to dine. The air is kept fresh and pure by one of the finest ventilating plants ever installed. You dine at your own table which is covered with snowy linen. And just remember that no matter how much more you pay, or where, you can't get better food.

MICHIGAN SENDS MURDERERS OVER ROAD IN A HURRY

It's Race Between Justice and Undertaker.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Michigan is getting a reputation for herself because of the speed displayed in apprehending and "putting away" murderers. During the last few months justice—and murder squads—have moved with such rapidity that it has become a race with them to place the criminal behind prison bars and the undertaker to get the murdered victims laid away. Justice won in several cases, and there were numerous close finishes.

Most recent is the case of Richard Champlain, the 22 year old youth of Hemlock, Saginaw county, who on the evening of Monday, Nov. 14, shot and killed both his father and mother in their farm home, and attempted to cremate the bodies. In this he partially succeeded.

The following day he was arrested. He maintained his innocence until Friday, Nov. 18, when he confessed, giving as his reason that his parents objected to his keeping company with a girl of a different religion. Saturday young Champlain was sentenced to Jackson for life, and was in that institution Saturday noon. His parents were buried the following day, after their son had served one day of his sentence.

Even Race in This Case.

Justice moved swiftly in the recent case of Patrolman Herman Radamacher of Detroit. Radamacher, in the early days of October, was doing traffic duty in the "crow's nest" at the approach of Belle Isle bridge. On the night of Oct. 6 fishermen on the bridge saw a woman hurled into the river by a man who made his escape across the draw of the bridge. Oct. 8 the woman's body was found about 1,000 feet down stream. It was the body of the wife of Radamacher. He had stood in his tower watching the searchers work for two days. With the finding of the body the husband was arrested. His plea of innocence was changed to one of guilty twenty-four hours later, and he began his life sentence in Marquette prison the day his wife's body was lowered into her grave in a little Illinois village.

For real speed and a case that will probably hold the record for some time, came the Detroit case of Thomas Smith, who, on the morning of April 7, decided to kill his wife. Twenty knife wounds were inflicted in various parts of her body. Thomas made a poor attempt at a getaway, and before 5 o'clock of the same day had been captured, arraigned, waived examination, and confessed. He was sentenced on the day of the murder, and the following morning was taken to Jackson. All this happened within twenty-six hours.

On the afternoon of April 19 the body of Mrs. Nettie Lee was found in her Detroit home with her throat cut. Her husband was captured two days later and confessed. Justice moved a little slow this time for it was just one week to the hour after he had killed his wife before he was paying the penalty behind the prison bars in Marquette.

Coleman McEwan, a Detroit motorman, shot and killed Henry Mitchell, a fellow-motorman, Oct. 11. The killing was deliberate and carefully planned. Suspicion, however, pointed strongly to McEwan, the men having quarreled over a woman. On Oct. 21 McEwan was sentenced to life imprisonment at Jackson.

Case of Mrs. Lewen.

On May 16 Mrs. Elizabeth Lewen, better known as Madame LeGrande, a Detroit milliner, with the promise of a street car ride and a box of candy, coaxed little five year old Max Ernst from his home on the west side of the city, to a vacant tract of land on the east side. The child was found strangled, and his mouth filled with mud. Mrs. Lewen—a friend of the family—enjoyed her freedom for about two weeks. She was arrested, but never confessed. Evidence, however, was strongly against her and on June 13 she entered the House of Correction, where she is now serving a life sentence.

A few minutes less than twenty hours after Louis Phyllaire, a 41 year old farmer, had shot and killed his neighbor, Merle Shepherd, he was on his way to a state penitentiary to serve a life sentence. Shepherd was murdered at 6:30 Tuesday evening, Nov. 16. Twenty-three minutes later he was in jail. At 9 o'clock Wednesday morning he waived examination, and at 1:30 p. m. was arraigned. He pleaded guilty, was sentenced, and "doing time" two days before his victime was buried. Shepherd was shot in a struggle that followed Phyllaire's appearance after a snowball fight between the children of the two men.

Statistics compiled in the office of the Detroit police commissioner show that the average time between the commission of a murder, and the apprehension and sentence of the murderer is thirty days. Between Jan. 1 and Aug. 31, a period of eight months, a total of fifty-six murders were committed in Detroit. Of this number, thirty were cleared up and the murderers sentenced. Several are yet awaiting trial. Eleven were killed by officers who were later exonerated. Of the fifty-six murders, all but five have been accounted for, and the killers arrested.

It's Race Between Justice and Undertaker.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Michigan is getting a reputation for herself because of the speed displayed in apprehending and "putting away" murderers. During the last few months justice—and murder squads—have moved with such rapidity that it has become a race with them to place the criminal behind prison bars and the undertaker to get the murdered victims laid away. Justice won in several cases, and there were numerous close finishes.

Most recent is the case of Richard Champlain, the 22 year old youth of Hemlock, Saginaw county, who on the evening of Monday, Nov. 14, shot and killed both his father and mother in their farm home, and attempted to cremate the bodies. In this he partially succeeded.

The following day he was arrested. He maintained his innocence until Friday, Nov. 18, when he confessed, giving as his reason that his parents objected to his keeping company with a girl of a different religion. Saturday young Champlain was sentenced to Jackson for life, and was in that institution Saturday noon. His parents were buried the following day, after their son had served one day of his sentence.

Even Race in This Case.

Justice moved swiftly in the recent case of Patrolman Herman Radamacher of Detroit. Radamacher, in the early days of October, was doing traffic duty in the "crow's nest" at the approach of Belle Isle bridge. On the night of Oct. 6 fishermen on the bridge saw a woman hurled into the river by a man who made his escape across the draw of the bridge. Oct. 8 the woman's body was found about 1,000 feet down stream. It was the body of the wife of Radamacher. He had stood in his tower watching the searchers work for two days. With the finding of the body the husband was arrested. His plea of innocence was changed to one of guilty twenty-four hours later, and he began his life sentence in Marquette prison the day his wife's body was lowered into her grave in a little Illinois village.

For real speed and a case that will probably hold the record for some time, came the Detroit case of Thomas Smith, who, on the morning of April 7, decided to kill his wife. Twenty knife wounds were inflicted in various parts of her body. Thomas made a poor attempt at a getaway, and before 5 o'clock of the same day had been captured, arraigned, waived examination, and confessed. He was sentenced on the day of the murder, and the following morning was taken to Jackson. All this happened within twenty-six hours.

On the afternoon of April 19 the body of Mrs. Nettie Lee was found in her Detroit home with her throat cut. Her husband was captured two days later and confessed. Justice moved a little slow this time for it was just one week to the hour after he had killed his wife before he was paying the penalty behind the prison bars in Marquette.

Coleman McEwan, a Detroit motorman, shot and killed Henry Mitchell, a fellow-motorman, Oct. 11. The killing was deliberate and carefully planned. Suspicion, however, pointed strongly to McEwan, the men having quarreled over a woman. On Oct. 21 McEwan was sentenced to life imprisonment at Jackson.

Case of Mrs. Lewen.

On May 16 Mrs. Elizabeth Lewen, better known as Madame LeGrande, a Detroit milliner, with the promise of a street car ride and a box of candy, coaxed little five year old Max Ernst from his home on the west side of the city, to a vacant tract of land on the east side. The child was found strangled, and his mouth filled with mud. Mrs. Lewen—a friend of the family—enjoyed her freedom for about two weeks. She was arrested, but never confessed. Evidence, however, was strongly against her and on June 18 she entered the House of Correction, where she is now serving a life sentence.

A few minutes less than twenty hours after Louis Phyllaire, a 41 year old farmer, had shot and killed his neighbor, Merle Shepherd, he was on his way to a state penitentiary to serve a life sentence. Shepherd was murdered at 6:30 Tuesday evening, Nov. 16. Twenty-three minutes later he was in jail. At 9 o'clock Wednesday morning he waived examination, and at 1:30 p. m. was arraigned. He pleaded guilty, was sentenced, and "doing time" two days before his victime was buried. Shepherd was shot in a struggle that followed Phyllaire's appearance after a snowball fight between the children of the two men.

Statistics compiled in the office of the Detroit police commissioner show that the average time between the commission of a murder, and the apprehension and sentence of the murderer is thirty days. Between Jan. 1 and Aug. 31, a period of eight months, a total of fifty-six murders were committed in Detroit. Of this number, thirty were cleared up and the murderers sentenced. Several are yet awaiting trial. Eleven were killed by officers who were later exonerated. Of the fifty-six murders, all but five have been accounted for, and the killers arrested.

THERE are many uses of the piano. Each type brings happiness to its owner. And here there are many models from which to choose, each in keeping with the latest trend of design. All is in readiness to assist you in the wisest purchase. In the great variety we show (about 25 makes) you are certain to find your own exact idea of a piano. Our store is a permanent exposition of the latest and best.

Steinway Pianos

From $875

THE greatest test of a piano is its history. An instrument which is the result of years of studious development reflects the standards which built it.

So it is with the Steinway. Generations have given their skill and vision to its construction so that it would stand as the highest type of the pianoforte. Today it does. It is recognized by public and artists as being the supreme instrument—"the piano of the immortals."

Lyon & Healy Apartment Grands

From $925

A SMALL grand is welcomed in the home where space is precious. Devotion to this problem has created the Apartment Grand. It is an instrument in which all the nobility of form and depth of tone which distinguish the Grand have been retained in more convenient size. It is the only Grand piano that contains the Candelectra, the Silento and the Junior Pedal. Yet it costs hardly more than an upright.

The Duo-Art Piano

From $795

IN addition to serving the pianist in the usual manner the Duo-Art enables the unskilled, by means of rolls, to play the music which appeals to them with true expression and technique. It offers unlimited opportunity for musical appreciation.

But its crowning capacity is that it reproduces with absolute verity of detail the keyboard performances of such masters as Paderewski, Grainger, Bauer and Ganz.

Modernized Pianos

From $125

WE have brought up to date a number of excellent used pianos. This has been done by replacing all worn parts and changing old style cases to modern ones.

The result is that you have a choice of instruments of fine musical quality and attractive appearance which are priced at figures asked for ordinary used pianos.

Those contemplating buying a moderate-priced instrument should by all means visit this department. A few are listed.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

New York, Nov. 26.—[Special.]—They may not want to scrap the navy after what happened today at the Polo grounds. On a field that was a slimy mixture of land and water the boys from Annapolis plowed, dragged, and skidded their way to victory over the Army in their annual gridiron classic, establishing for the third successive year their superiority at football over the cadets from West Point. The score was 7 to 0, the result of a lone muddy touchdown in the second quarter.

The victory gave the midshipment the lead in the annual service series. Since 1890 the Navy has won twelve and the Army 11.

Played in Rain.

A steady drizzing rain throughout the contest nearly ruined it as a colorful spectacle for the display of brass buttons and gold braid as well as for an exhibition of the great college sport. The generals, admirals, and statesmen didn't relish being on display in dripping attire, and the players were unable to perform at their best on the slippery and muddy field.

Only the Navy goat, wearing his comfy blanket of blue and gold, seemed to relish the going. The Army mule threw his ears back and balked on being exposed to such weather.

No one could doubt the superiority of the Navy eleven. Perhaps on a dry field it would have run up a bigger count on the soldiers. As it was, the victory was largely due to the open field running of Barchat, the small, speedy back of the middies.

Barchat Leads the Way.

On numerous occasions he dogged and dashed his way around and through the Army men for big gains, and it was his dashes in that second period that put the ball down close to the rival goal where a touchdown resulted.

Barchat was aided materially in the ground gaining by Koehler, Conroy, and Cruise, who ripped through the Army wings at times for crushing gains, Conroy reeling off an occasional thrilling run in the open. It was Conroy who skidded over the Army goal line for the lone touchdown when the Navy was on the one yard line.

Only one big chance presented itself to the Army and that came just a few minutes before the close of the battle, when French, the sensational back, got loose for a 27 yard run after circling the Navy left end. This planted the ball well into the Navy territory, only 10 yards from the goal.

Middies Avert Tie.

Richards and Smythe crashed through the Navy defense in a couple of ripping line plays and the ball was only eight yards from the goal line for a first down. It looked as if a touchdown and probable tied score would result, but wit hthefr backs against the wall, the Navy braced.

French attempted an end run around the Navy's right wing, but a desperate Navy forward broke through the line and brought him down for a five yard loss. French did the best thing then left to do by shooting a forward pass, but the Army's passing game seemed no better than some of the other big game. He shot it into the arms of Hamilton, a sub Annapolis back, who was downed on his own ten yard line. The Army had lost the ball and its big chance to save the day.

After trying a couple of plays, tactics of the Navy booted the ball out of danger and the contest ended before the Army had time to launch another attack.

Navy Defense Too Strong.

It was seldom that the West Point men could gain consistently. French alone stood out prominently in the offense of Major Daly's team. Smythe did splendid line plunging on occasions, and his punting far outclassed that of Barchet. Indeed the long punts of the army man served to check the progress of the middies, especially in the first half, for on every ex-

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

How Did Ohio Take It?

WE were asked by Helpers so many times last week, "How did Ohio State take it?" referring to the Illinois defeat, that we will pass along our impressions to the whole Wake family.

Between halves, with the score 7 to 0 in favor of Illinois, Ohio's 100 piece military band faced the Illini rooting section and played the Illinois Alma Mater while even the Ohio partisans stood with bared heads.

During the brief rally which preceded Illinois' winning touchdown, about fifty Urbana rooters in conspicuous orange caps swayed in unison and chanted "Beat Ohio, beat Ohio, beat Ohio." The Ohio stands gave a good natured round of applause.

Do not imagine there was no disappointment; Ohio State expected to win. Even Huntington, West Virginia, the home of the Workmans, Honaker, and Johnny Stuart, sent a delegation of 200, including Mrs. Workman and Mrs. Stuart. Defeat was a big surprise.

Yet in the Ohio State dressing room after the game we did not hear the sometimes bitter excuses of losers. Seeking Coach Wilce, we found him near nervous exhaustion but game.

Asking him whether the contest might have resulted differently, he pointed out two places where possible mistakes had been made, but with no criticism of his players and rather with an air of "O, well, it's over, what's the use."

For a team which so confidently expected to win and which in some quarters was regarded as being "cocky," Ohio State left with us a distinctly favorable impression in its defeat. Prompt disavowal of the story that the winning touchdown was disputed did not lessen that impression.

When I've donated hour after hour,
And a little pat full nearly breaks me,
I can smile though I feel rather sour.

When they've taken my ultimate dollar,
And they've laughed at my efforts to win;
Though I'm tempted to let out a holler
I can still pull the ghost of a grin.

But I throw off my cloak of repression
And I beg, in my wrath, for a gun,
When we come to the end of the session,
And each crook denies he has won.

NEW ORLEANS IS ABOARD TRIBUNE AMATEUR WAGON

Grid Game Outdraws Racing as Evidence.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—This, "the city that care forgot," where horse racing for years has flourished and prospered as a money making and gambling proposition, was given a side jolt and awakening Thursday when the attendance at Jefferson race track was less by nearly one-half that at the Center college-Tulane university football game.

The official figures show that the professional sporting game of racing drew slightly less than 6,000 persons, while the amateur football contest was witnessed by 10,800 paid enthusiasts. There were nearly 1,000 free badges represented in the attendance at the race track, while the football managers had given out only a few free tickets.

Races Are Better Advertised.

The races had been advertised for weeks. It was the opening of the winter racing season. The city is crowded with horsemen and race track followers. The Centre-Tulane football game had been quickly arranged and was played on Tulane's athletic field. Transportation to this small stadium is not of the best, but when time was called for "Bo" McMillin and his "praying colonels" to start doing things with the pigskin every seat in the stand was filled and all temporary seats were jammed.

In the cheering throng were many of the leading citizens of the city and state. There was no gambling. The crowd at the race track was a mixed one.

Begin to See the Light.

That the amateur game should have outdrawn the "sport of kings" has been freely commented on in New Orleans. One well known sporting man said, "We are beginning to learn that the people are tiring of commercialized sports. Who would have thought that twenty-two boys, kicking and throwing a leather ball, could have outdrawn the ponies?

"THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, when it took a stand that amateur sports was real news, must have known what it was doing; but I never thought New Orleans would have any kind of diversion that would outdraw the horses."

What Newspaper Says.

The New Orleans States, in commenting editorially on the Centre-Tulane game, said:

"We remember the time when football here was a novelty, now it is the greatest American sport, and the squarest, because it is wholly in the control of amateurs. Prize fighting, wrestling, racing, most of the sports, have a professional flavor. Amateur sports are in the ascendency and will show greater popularity in the immediate future. The attendance at the Tulane-Centre football game proves this when its rival attraction, the races, failed to draw as well as the amateur game did."

Attendance at the professional prize fights here in recent months have been less than that at the amateur boxing stage of the Young Men's Gym club and the Cathedral club.

Last summer the City Amateur Baseball league outdrew the local Southern league. All forms of amateur sports are drawing tremendous crowds; golf, sailing, and motor boat racing are enjoying unusual popularity.

Adopting Tribune Plan.

There is a growing tendency on the part of the newspapers to adopt THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S plan of giving professional sports just what they deserve from a news value viewpoint, and to give amateur sports a more liberal space allowance.

The New Orleans States has announced that it believes that amateur sports contribute to the health of all the people and that it will expand this department of its news columns.

NET FEDERATION O. K.'S SUZANNE

PARIS, Nov. 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen has received qualified approval from the council of the French Lawn Tennis federation of her conduct during her recent tennis matches in the United States. She had repeatedly demanded the approval of the federation since her return from America.

A resolution adopted by the council declared the doctor's certificates showing ill health must have affected her playing, but, "from a sporting view," she should not have abandoned her match with Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory. Furthermore, the resolution said, upon finding herself unfit to play, she should have returned immediately to France.

The council regretted publication in American newspapers of unfavorable comment on Mlle. Lenglen's sportsmanship.

The Question.

Should a national championship match or matches be played to determine a titleholder in college football?

Where Asked.

Lake and Michigan boulevard.

The Answers.

Joseph McKeon, 613 Rees street, playground director—I think a match or series of matches leading to a national championship would go across big. It certainly would offer a wonderful incentive for all the teams and indirectly lead to a great development.

L. A. Twoney, 1508 Larrabee street, playground director—A splendid idea, but I doubt of its practicability. I believe the sectional football seasons are too short to permit of it. You can count on me to be a booster.

Miss Mary McQuade, Fort Wayne, Ind., telephone operator—I should say so. One thing is sure and that is that if a series is staged the operators will be in for a hot time answering inquiries on the results, but I for one would welcome the chance. The matches would make a big appeal to all sport lovers.

Andrew Marx, 1430 Hyde Park boulevard, student—I'll say so. With the tremendous and increasing interest shown in the gridiron sport, such a contest would be unrivaled for excellence of play, attendance, and financial returns. I hope that somewhere there is a group of men big enough to make it a reality.

Miss Julia Grant, 215 East Erie street, telephone operator—I'm in favor of it and believe the college officials should be the strongest sponsors of the games as a direct means of fostering better and stronger intercollegiate relations.

New Scheme in Handling Harvard-Yale Grid Tickets

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 26.—There will be a new deal in the allotment of seats for the next Yale-Harvard football game in the stadium, two years hence, the Harvard Athletic association announced today. One detail of the changes proposed will give freshmen and sophomores precedence over graduates and university officers. Although nominally entitled to two tickets each, these lower classmen this year were cut to one each because of the large number of graduate applications.

DE PAUL DROPS HARD BATTLE AT HAVERHILL, 14-7

Haverhill, Mass., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—St. James High's football team defeated De Paul academy of Chicago, 14 to 7. A crowd of 8,000 attended the contest, three periods of which were played in a heavy storm.

St. James' scores came in the first period. Burke fumbled the kickoff on the 30 yard line and Holloway recovered for St. James. Moynihan went around left end for twelve yards and then after a series of line plunges, went over for the first touchdown. St. James' second touchdown came near the end of the period, after Tannian had blocked Spellman's punt on De Paul's 8 yard line. Buckley scored on a line plunge.

De Paul's touchdown came in the third period as the result of a succession of forward passes which baffled the local boys. Werdell tossed the forward, which scored the touchdown, to Ryan, who caught it behind the goal line. Pecoraro and Spellman starred for De Paul. Lineup:

FOOTBALL DEATH TOLL DROPS TO THIRTEEN, MOSTLY SCHOOLBOYS

Football claimed thirteen victims during the 1921 season, according to reports to the Associated Press yesterday.

The death list was three less than 1920 and three above the toll of two years ago. Ten lives were lost as the result of games in 1918, twelve in 1917, eighteen in 1916, and fifteen in 1915. The majority of youths killed were members of high school teams. Only one was a member of a college eleven. The list follows:

William Pritchard, Elizabeth City, N. C., 16 years, died of injuries received in practice Sept. 20.

Francis Fricke, Flint, Mich., high school, 15 years; died Oct. 19; kicked in abdomen.

Frank Nadeau, Lowell, Mass., 23 years old; died Nov. 2 as result of ruptured blood vessel at base of brain.

Matthew Karyachich, Benwood, W. Va., 20 years; died Sept. 19 from injuries.

Edward H. Keck, Belleville, Ill., 20 years old; killed Nov. 24; crushed in a mass play.

"Sim" Barber of Abilene, Kas., high school, died Nov. 7 from injuries.

Charles Breewood, Kansas City, Kas., high school; died early in season as result of injuries.

Waldo Menkel, 23, Mounds, Okla.; died Nov. 25 of injuries.

Dartmouth Beats Georgia 7 to 0 by Forward Pass

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 26.—Dartmouth's football team defeated Georgia university, 7 to 0, today. The Green team from New Hampshire outplayed the Georgia Bulldogs on offensive, gaining far more ground, but the only score was made on a long forward pass, one of the two that were successful out of a dozen attempts.

Des Moines U. Plungers Beat Haskell Indians, 24-7

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 26.—In a slow game Des Moines university defeated the Haskell Indians today, 24 to 7. The Iowa boys had a style of line plunging that seemed to demoralize the Indians. The broken field running and tackling of Anderson, Haskell halfback, featured the game.

PROVISO SHIFTS EARN 13-6 WIN AT FITCHBURG

Fitchburg, Mass., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Before Fitchburg High solved Proviso High's unbalanced line and backfield shifts the Maywood, Ill., team pushed over two touchdowns at Crocker field this afternoon in a stubbornly fought intersectional grid fray, played in a heavy snowstorm. The invaders were victorious, 13 to 6.

Proviso drew many penalties for having its backfield in motion before the ball was snapped, but Coach Kenneth Coutchie's team continued that style of attack, combined with forward passes, which Fitchburg found hard to break up because of the visitors' ability to catch the oval.

The second half was devoted largely to punting, on which the gains were about even. The wet ball resulted in frequent fumbles, none of which contributed directly to the scoring. Lineup:

THREE IOWANS ON ANNUAL ELEVEN CHOSEN BY ECKIE

A. Devine, Locke, Elliott, and Peden as Backs.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Following a successful western conference football season, featured by the victory of Chicago over Princeton in one of the most important intersectional struggle ever played by Big Ten eleven and the defeat of Ohio State by Illinois in the biggest upset of the season which gave Iowa the undisputed championship, it is customary to select the leading players for honorary or mythical elevens.

WALTER ECKERSALL.

While some of the elevens were outclassed, the customary close and hard fought struggles were played, and an undisputed title holder was not determined until Coach Zuppke's Illinois team put Ohio State out of consideration on the last Saturday of the playing season. The Orange and Blue aggregation found itself after four successive defeats by Big Ten elevens, and played a brand of football against the Buckeyes which was characteristic of Urbana teams.

Champion After 21 Years.

Ohio eliminated Chicago as a championship contender by winning over the conqueror of Princeton, 7 to 0, in a great battle. Michigan shattered Wisconsin's hopes by holding the Badgers to a 7 to 7 tie, while the Maroons further eliminated the Cardinals with a 3 to 0 defeat. While all this was taking place Iowa attended to its knitting, won all its games in a consistent manner and brought a championship to Iowa City for the first time since 1900.

Typical stubbornly fought battles caused the players to show their true colors. They were called upon to fight in the darkest hours, and take advantage of any momentary opportunity to convert defeat into victory. Some were alert to the smiles of Dame Fortune, while others fell down in their big chances. Poor judgment and failure to hold the ball when tackled resulted in defeats for some of the stronger elevens.

Many Angles to Consider.

In selecting honorary, or "all-star" elevens, every angle of offensive and defensive football must be taken into consideration.

Thus, such a team must have accurate forward passers and reliable receivers, a strong off tackle driving half back, and another who can run the ends or cut back in with dash and speed. It must have a back who can make the necessary yardage for first down by hitting the line.

Such an attack would be worthless if it did not have a line capable of giving the necessary protection on all sorts of plays, whether delayed forward passes, split bucks, or plays into the line. The forwards must be men who are capable of leading an interference, efficient in breaking through to take off the secondary offense, and, above all, able to open holes for the backs.

Kicker Chosen Carefully.

But back of this offense is the kicking game, one of the most important in football. The necessity of having a reliable punter, who can boot the oval out of danger and far into opponents' territory, has been shown too many times for comment. Such a player should best be a warrior, who can execute the triple threat of run, kick, or pass. He should also, if possible, be a dependable field goal kicker.

On defense, the same conditions should prevail. The linemen should know when to shift to meet an unbalanced line attack. They should know in an instant whether to shift one or two positions, and figure the best way to get into the play in just as short a time. The forward wall should be strong enough to stop attacks without assistance from the secondary defense.

The ends should be great smashers who are ever mindful to hit the interference on the outside and turn the runner in. They should always drive the catchers of kicks to the inside, and never permit them to get outside.

Strong on Secondary Defense.

The secondary defense should place themselves in position where they can move to points of attack with quickness and dispatch. They should always know the exact spot of the field where the oval rests and be ever mindful not to catch forward passes on fourth downs near their goal line.

The defensive full back must be a reliable player. First of all, he should be a deadly tackler. No one can tell when the time will come when such a player must save his eleven from defeat by pulling down a hard running opponent, who has passed the secondary defense. He must be a sure handler of punts and should know when to play the ball safe, by permitting it to touch the ground or making signals for fair catches.

Before going into the personnel of the teams certain players are deserving of mention because they were unable to show their true ability because of injuries. Arnold Oss of Minnesota is a great half back, but injuries sustained in the Northwestern struggle kept him out of remaining contests.

Charles Carney of Illinois, unanimous choice of critics for an all-American flank position last season, failed to play true to form because of the knee injured in the Ohio State contest of 1920. Carney tried to play this season, but was of little use to his team. Jack Crangle, the Illinois full back, was handicapped all season with a bad shoulder. Jack is a great football player, but was unable to give his best.

Kipke, the Michigan half back, is another sterling warrior who was incapacitated early in the year and failed to show his true worth. This little half back should be a terror next season, providing he is not hurt early in the year.

Aubrey Devine Unmatched.

Aubrey Devine, leader of the championship Iowa eleven, is awarded the position of quarter back and made captain of the first honorary eleven. The Hawkeye is one of the greatest players developed in the middle west in recent years, and his all-around ability, combined with rare football judgment, should make him a unanimous selection.

The Iowa captain, while not a fast runner, has an excellent change of pace on his runs. When he is about to be tackled, he throws himself at an opponent and generally makes a yard or so. He also has a knack of pivoting out of tacklers' grasps, and is fighting for ground all the time he is on his feet.

He is a sure handler of punts and an accurate passer. He is also a good punter and field goal kicker. He would be chosen to execute the triple threat of kick, run, or pass, and with interference provided by the remainder of the team should make ground on every run. His defensive qualifications are in accord with his offensive ability. He is a sure tackler and catcher of punts, just the type needed for the defensive full back's position.

Crisler a Great Fighting End.

"Fritz" Crisler, one of the best ends developed by Stagg in years, is placed at right end. The Maroon has been a factor in all Chicago's games, but his general play in the Princeton and Wisconsin struggles should earn him an all-American berth. In these struggles, he not only smashed the interference, but repeatedly tackled the man with the ball.

He has few equals as a receiver of passes. Against Ohio State and Wisconsin, he pulled down what seemed impossible chances. There is no better end in the section at boxing a tackle or covering punts. It was mainly his work which kept Capt. Keck of Princeton out of all Chicago plays.

Cyril Myers, captain of Ohio State, is awarded the other flank. The Buckeye leader was good last season, but his general play this autumn has been a marked improvement. He was a tower of offensive strength in the Chicago game, as in all Ohio's contests, and his ability to size up a situation quickly enabled his team to defeat the Maroons. Myers started a forward pass play close to the Maroon goal, but saw an opening in the middle of the Chicago line and dashed through it for the only score of the game. He makes a valuable running mate to Crisler.

Iowa Star at Full Back.

Belding of Iowa is another great end who is nearly the equal of Crisler and Myers. Gould of Wisconsin is an ideal wing player, although he has been used as offensive half back most of the year and end on defense. Tebell of Wisconsin and Goebel of Michigan are among the other strong flank players of the year.

Gordon Locke of Iowa, the hardest hitting full back seen in the conference since the days of Hugo Bezdek at Chicago and Frank Longman of Michigan, is given the full back position without hesitation. It is seldom that defeated players have praise for a member of a victorious team, but from what Notre Dame and Illinois warriors told of Locke's plunging ability the Hawkeye should bear all-American consideration.

Locke is the type of player who can unfailingly make a yard when needed for first down. He drives hard and low, recovers quickly, and gathers speed just as fast. When opposition is met he digs his toes into the ground and generally roots himself free of tacklers. He starts so fast and gathers momentum so speedily that he makes ground when opposition is met. He is a strong man in the interference and an ideal player to back up a line or play one corner of a box defense.

Thomas Also Great Plunger.

Thomas of Chicago was a great offensive full back, who hit the line with nearly as much drive as Locke. Capt. Sundt of Wisconsin was another good full back and reliable punter. Capt. Kyle of Indiana and Petterson of Northwestern were the other good full backs in the conference.

Don Peden of Illinois is placed at left half back. Although injured in early games, Peden gamely stayed in the competition and was the most consistent ground gainer of the year for the Zuppke eleven. He is fast and clever, a sure handler of the ball, and an accurate passer. It was his toss to Walquist which resulted in the touchdown against Ohio State.

Peden could be used to skirt the ends or dash off tackles on come back or cut in play. He gets under way quickly, picks holes in faultless fashion, and is reliable in the interference. On the defense he is just as valuable because of his ability to size up plays and move to the point of attack for the desired results.

Elliott of Wisconsin is given the other half back position because of his value to the Badger eleven this season. Elliott is of the off tackle driving type and runs with power. He played excellent football all season and was on the passing and receiving end of forward passes. He is a deadly tackler and good interferer.

Cappon of Michigan is another great half back, and there is little to choose between him and the men selected for the first eleven. This player was a tower of offensive strength in the Illinois and Wisconsin games, and performed as well as any Michigan man in the Minnesota struggle.

Capt. Walquist of Illinois is another valuable back. He was played at quarter back most of the season, but was out of position. Cole of Chicago, Martineau of Minnesota, Stuart of Ohio State, and Williams of Wisconsin were other outstanding half backs.

Vick Gets Center Position.

Ernie Vick of Michigan is placed at center. The Wolverine has been one of the most valuable men to his team all season. He seldom gets hurt, and knows a lot of football. He is an accurate passer, one of the first requirements in a pivot player, while his aggressive play on defense had a lot to do with Michigan's victory over Illinois and its tie game with Wisconsin. Although Yost played Vick at tackle on defense, he would be an ideal player to have at one corner of a box defense. His general knowledge of football makes him the logical choice for the position.

Bunge of Wisconsin is nearly the equal of the Wolverine. The Badger has played aggressive football all season and is one of the best players on the Cardinal eleven. Heidt of Iowa, King of Chicago, and Hathaway of Northwestern were the other leading centers.

"Some" Pair of Tackles.

Charles McGuire, captain of the Chicago eleven, is placed at right tackle. The big Maroon leader has given comparatively no ground all season, while he aided considerably in making the full backs' gains possible by opening up holes. He is a fighter of the first water who failed to weaken when he faced the redoubtable Stanton Keck of Princeton.

"Duke" Slater, giant Negro of the Iowa eleven, is given the other tackle position. Slater should be a candidate for All-American honors. There is little about line play that he does not know, and it was mainly through his efforts that Locke gained so much ground against Notre Dame and Illinois. He weighs 207 pounds and is over 6 feet tall. He is fairly fast and shifty, and is seldom kept out of plays.

Brader of Wisconsin was another great tackle. Huffman and Spiers of Ohio were a fine pair of men for the positions, while Carman of Purdue could make a tackle position on any team in the country, and be rated a star.

Dunne and Trott Guards.

"Duke" Dunne, captain of Michigan, is awarded the left guard position. Dunne has been of great service to his alma mater. He started out as an end, and has played practically every position in the line. He played himself out in the Ohio State game, but was in every play while he lasted. He performed well against Illinois, and put up a stellar game against Wisconsin. In the Badger struggle he blocked forward passes and spoiled plays before they were formed. A shoulder injury compelled him to leave the battle at the end of the first half.

Trott of Ohio State, a great forward, is given the other guard position. The Buckeye was a reliable performer last season, but showed to even better advantage this year. He has permitted few gains through his position, and broke up many formations used by opponents. He has been down under punts and has done some tackling on the wings.

Credit to Mohr and Redmon.

Al Mohr of Illinois and Charles Redmon of Chicago are nearly the equals of Trott and Dunne. The former played a great game against Ohio State. He was down under kicks and smashed several Buckeye plays before they got under way. He also played well against Michigan. Redmon did some excellent work in the Princeton game and played consistently in other contests. Minick of Iowa, McCaw of Indiana, and G. Penfield of Northwestern, were other strong guards.

The team as selected included four players who captained their teams during the last season and who are rightfully entitled to the honors. Walquist of Illinois, who played his last game, is made leader of the second eleven, and Guy Sundt, a great athlete who captained Wisconsin, is chosen leader of the third eleven.

HAVE YOU A GOOD MEMORY?

On the right in the picture we have Judge Michael L. McKinley of the Superior court as he appeared in football togs in the early '90s, when the gridiron game was tough going. You will have to ask the judge who posed with him when the photo was taken by H. Graham Hair, probably at Iowa City, Ia.

JUDGE McKINLEY, ONCE CHAMPION OF 'ROUGH STUFF'

Judge Michael L. McKinley of the Superior court is violently opposed to disorderly conduct. His bailiffs have been trained to the minute and the slightest display of levity in his courtroom is followed by instant and dire punishment for the culprit. Yet Judge McKinley was at one time known nationally as a leading exponent of disorderly conduct. Back in 1893-'4 he led one of the most disorderly organizations then known, a championship "rough stuff" crowd.

"Run low, tackle hard, and knock your man over!" was the motto used by the Chicago jurist in those days, and the way-back wheniers will tell you that it brought home the smoked pork for Iowa university.

Sports Change With Times.

"Sports do change with the times," mused the judge the other day after having watched this year's football stars from his old home state run out a win in open field play.

"In my day headgears, neck and shoulder protectors were unknown. They drove us out on the field to slaughter and be slaughtered with aching muscles our only armor. Ben Donnelly of Princeton was our head coach then and he was a rough and tumble artist of high order. He would have harsh words to say between halves if a single one of his men had failed to knock his man down in either interference or a tackle.

Trained by Farmer Burns.

"Roger Sherman of Michigan, now a Chicago attorney, was an associate coach of the old school, too. Our physical trainers were 'Dad' Moulton and 'Farmer' Burns, the wrestler. Neither could be termed mild men.

"We played a strictly western game, although Chicago was always on the schedule and always a tough contest. In my last year we came to Chicago on Saturday and met the huskies under command of Capt. Phil Allen, playing them to an 11-11 tie. Then we hopped on to a train for Madison and played Wisconsin on Monday.

"That Wisconsin game was the hardest task I have ever tackled, but we came through somehow. We knew we had all the rest of our lives in which to let our wounds heal."

Judge McKinley is known now as one of the most consistent athletes of the Chicago bar. His early training was so strenuous that he left school with violent exercise as one of his life's chief dictates. His daily schedule includes a two mile run in the morning and work at the weights in chambers and at home in addition to a rigid diet.

Lewis Institute Coach Uses a New Formation

Lewis Institute has arranged a big basket ball schedule this year, which includes games with the University of Chicago, De Paul university, Loyola university, and St. Viator college. A new formation is being used by Coach Bartky. Instead of placing his men in the usual positions previous to the tip-off he lines them up in single file behind their center, and all the plays are worked from this position. This has an advantage in that it gives all the men a forward motion toward their own goal, and also provides for a defense should the center miss the jump. The squad is the largest in the history of Lewis, as close to seventy-five men turned out.

WINTER CARE OF FISHING TACKLE.

To care properly for tackle during the winter is much more of a problem now than it was a few years ago, before the innovation of modern heating systems. In the old days you could stow away your favorite rods and not have to worry about them keeping cool, as well as damp, enough during the winter. But now the angler has to take care that his bamboos are not exposed to artificial heat, which tends to dry out a wooden pole and ultimately will spoil a good rod.

If you are a steel rod fan, the problem of caring for your fishing tools is not so difficult. Rust, of course, is the enemy of the steel pole, and the principal stunt to be performed for this type of rod is rubbing it down with an oiled cloth, not forgetting to slip a drop or two inside.

When it comes to the bamboos, it's a "hoss" of another color. They have to be treated more carefully, sort of petted, as it were. First, clean them thoroughly and then with the oiled cloth touch up the metal parts. While doing this, better look 'em over pretty carefully, noting where the silk has worn and what rewinding or other repairing will be necessary during the winter. If you have to buy any materials, jot 'em down so you will know just what you need in order to put your bamboo pals in shipshape order.

In storing your rod or rods, try to find a place where they will not be subjected to artificial heat. That sounds easy, but your rods must also be safe from low temperatures and too much dampness. It's a case of "betwixt and between," and to locate the right spot in a modern apartment is not so easy.

As to flies, better sort 'em out before you put 'em away for the winter. Some will probably need cleaning, and others may not be worth carrying over another year unless you fix them up. Many fishermen do not remove their flies from the tackle box, and store them in a separate container. However, if you want to play absolutely safe you can put them in a fruit jar and many a moth will be able to touch them.

Incidentally, if you are keen for tying your own flies, and inventing new lures, now is the time to secure a supply of good feathers by going after your duck hunting friends. The birds they are bringing in will fix you out with all kinds of good feathers.

Artificial lures, the standby of many bass fishermen, should be gone over before storing them. Better wipe them off with an oiled rag and then put in a dry place.

Your reel must be cleaned and oiled before you put it away. Take it apart and wash it with benzine. Then clean the pivot and gear holes with a soft cloth or, better yet, a chamois skin. When thoroughly cleaned, put a drop of oil in each pivot hole and on the point where the gears fit. Before you put the reel together, grease the gears lightly with vaseline. Then use the oiled cloth on the outside and the reel is ready to be stowed away.

There are dustproof bags to keep reels in—I've got one myself—but any dustproof container will do. If you have nothing better, a wide mouthed fruit jar will fill the bill. These fruit jars also are handy for keeping entire silk lines during the winter.

PETTING THE BAMBOOS

PUTTERING around with the bamboo rods is one of the main occupations for the "winter" fisherman, and getting poles ready for next season is fun, not work, according to the dyed in the wool angler.

NAVY PLUNGERS SEND ARMY TO DEFEAT, 7 TO 0

change, the army gained, generally a sufficient distance to make up for the superior line plunging and running of the middies.

It might have been a great game from a purely football standpoint had there been a dry field. As it was, the ground was heavy with mud and so slippery that no one could get a quick start and do any snappy dodging without falling. The ball, too, was wet and slippery, and there were frequent fumbles. On occasions when punting was necessary, especially during the second half, the ball had to be wiped clean with a towel before the play was attempted.

Athletes Used Up.

Neither team seemed in the best of shape, though the heavy going may have caused undue fatigue. Anyway, time was taken out after almost every other play in the last two periods while some prone athlete recovered. Clouds of steam arose over the mass of athletes, and soon after one quarter had been played uniforms were so covered with mud and slime that all players looked alike.

Numbers on their backs could not be read, and with the low overhanging clouds darkness came down upon the field, so that for a time it seemed the game would be finished without any of the spectators seeing it.

While the Navy depended almost wholly upon straight football for advancement, the Army attempted the forward passing game frequently, sometimes even in its own territory and on a first down, but it was seldom that anything was accomplished.

POWERFUL DRIVE OF LOCKE DUE TO BIG BONES, SAYS SCIENCE

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—"Why is Locke?" Modern science has taken a hand in answering this question, just as modern science answered an earlier query: "Why is Babe Ruth?"

Prof. Bundy Allen, head radiographer at Iowa university, and one of the foremost Roentgenologists in the United States, has made X-ray examinations of the stellar Hawkeye full back's body, and he accredits Locke's power to big bones.

"Locke," declared Dr. Allen today, "has the largest bones I ever saw in a man of his size, and that fact, coupled with the further fact that he has very little surplus flesh in his 175 pounds, probably explains his wonderful driving power as a full back on the gridiron."

DESIGNER PLANS MORE SEATING FOR YALE BOWL

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 26.—Plans for increasing the seating capacity of Yale bowl to 117,000 are under consideration by Yale authorities. A statement given out today by Charles A. Ferry, Yale '71, designer of the bowl, states that the plan provides for a balcony over the upper section of the seats and the promenade.

The balcony would consist of a series of concrete arches supported by reinforced concrete columns erected around the outer edge of the promenade. The arches would support a concrete deck, built in steps, on which would be placed benches as in the bowl. This addition would provide about 49,000 more seats and make a covered stand of the upper part of the bowl.

NOTRE DAME BEST PASSING ELEVEN, SAYS BILL ROPER

BY W. W. (BILL) ROPER.
[Head Princeton Coach.]

Several years ago I saw Notre Dame play its first game in the east. It was at West Point. I don't recollect the exact score; it was somewhere in the thirties in favor of the westerners. West Point didn't have a look-in, while the Notre Dame ends and backs had a field day. I have never seen better forward passing than Notre Dame showed that day against the Army. There was a player by the name of Rockne at end on the Notre Dame team. He seemed able to catch a forward pass anywheres and at any time.

BILL ROPER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

This same Rockne is now athletic director and football coach at Notre Dame, and his team this year had the best forward passing attack in the country, to my way of thinking, or, at least, as good as any I have seen. This is a high compliment, I know, to pay any team in the west—where the forward pass has been developed to a high degree of efficiency, and where they throw and catch a football like a baseball. But Notre Dame's record justifies everything.

Wins 2 Games in 4 Days.

The team has gone through a very successful season. It lost one game, to the University of Iowa, probably the best team in the west. Notre Dame was the only team to beat Nebraska. Notre Dame came east a few weeks ago for a series of two games. The team played West Point on Saturday and the following Tuesday met Rutgers at the Polo Grounds in New York, winning both games rather easily.

It is no small feat to travel twenty-two hours on the train and play two football games in four days and win both of them by big scores. The real reason why Notre Dame could get away with both games so handily was because of their style of play. Had the Notre Dame attack consisted of a close rushing game inside of tackle, their job would have been much more difficult.

Tough Job at Old Game.

I remember back in 1900, Princeton tried playing two games four days apart. We played Cornell on Saturday and on the following Tuesday, election day, the Tigers met Columbia in New York. Before the second game was over, we had to call for reinforcements from the stands, and get two or three members of the scrubs who happened to be watching the game, to hurriedly put on some extra suits and fill in. Every man on the Princeton team was completely doneup and practically through for the season. Of course, this was in the good old days of bull-dogs and beef, push and pull. But even then, making all allowance for changed conditions, there are very few teams that can play two games in four days and not show the effects of it.

The beauty about the forward pass and a forward passing game is that it does not overtax the endurance of the players. The more I see of the passing game, the more I feel sure the winning combinations in the future will be the teams that can pass and know when to use it effectively.

Pass Best for Gains.

I know a good many coaches and players will disagree with me, especially those in the east who believe in the traditional close rushing game. But statistics will bear me out I know. I venture to say twice as much ground has been gained this year by the use of the forward pass than by plays inside of tackle.

I admit no team can go into a game against a rival even appreciably as good and hope to win by forward passing alone. There must, of course, be a combination of open and closed play, and it must be so adjusted that the defense does not know what to expect. This is the beauty of the Notre Dame attack, which is built on a long forward pass down the field, but which is supplemented by a very effective running game from the same formation. Rockne combines a long and short pass with the rushing game. The long pass is the most dangerous. If it is recovered it is sure to be a long gain. If it is not completely, only a down is lost. While if it is recovered by the other side, it is just as good as a punt. The team trying the long pass has everything to win and little or nothing to lose.

Notre Dame works on this theory. Nothing makes a defense more uneasy than the expectation of a long pass down field.

The real success of any forward passing attack lies in affording the passer adequate protection in making the pass.

FOOTBALL IN THE "GOOD OLD DAYS"

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

FOOTBALL, as a game of skill, has advanced rapidly during the last year or two. Football as a game of brute strength, bulk, weight, and hammering force disappeared years ago. The "good old game" was mourned for a long time by those who had played it, but there is no denying the fact that the new game is more exciting for both spectators and players, just as hot a competition and less dangerous than the old style of play.

Twenty-five years ago the football that had to be played by giants was at its height. Yale had such men as Heffelfinger, Coss, and Hickok. "Heff" was a bigger and stronger man than Jess Willard. I think he was the biggest and strongest man I ever saw in any athletic sport.

Hickok Big and Speedy.

Hickok was about 6 feet 2, and weighed 220 pounds, but he could run a hundred yards in very fast time, which made him one of the fastest big men I remember on a football field. Harry Cross was about 6 feet 4, and weighed 230 pounds, being a smaller Heffelfinger in strength and proportions. These three men, besides being remarkably skillful and speedy, were about as husky a center and guard combination as any college could boast.

Michigan had the Hooper brothers at center and guard, 240 and 230 pounds of lean muscle. Princeton had, among many big men, Bucky Hall, a 6 foot 6 giant built like a Hercules, and "Big Bill" Edwards, since famous in New York's political history.

Track Athletes on Grid.

Of the men I have mentioned many also were track and field athletes, Hickok being intercollegiate champion for years with hammer and shot, Cross a close second, Heffelfinger a hammer thrower, Bucky Hall a great shot putter, Wilbur better than 47 feet with the 16 pound shot, and so good a boxer that if he had taken up boxing professionally he could have given Jim Jeffries a run for the championship.

The abolition of the flying wedge started the ruling out of mass plays, piling up, and roughing generally, and brought about the modern style of football with all its forward passing and open play.

In the flying wedge the attacking team fell into a wedge formation as the ball was put into play, the man with the ball slipping into a protected position within the entering point of the wedge. The whole wedge then swept forward on the run, the men locked together, crushing down and trampling over all opposition.

Mass Plays Effective.

There was, following the abolition of the flying wedge, some mass play that was hardly less effective. The object of the play, in those "good old days," frequently was to cripple or disable as many of the opposing team's best men as possible.

In the good old days it was customary, when an opposing runner was downed with the ball, to pile on him and crush him as much as possible before the referee's whistle blew. If a heel or a knee could be planted in his anatomy where it would be most effective, so much the better. The instant a man was tackled the whole opposing team ran toward the spot at full speed, man after man hurling himself into the mass on top of the fallen runner.

Slugging a Fine Art.

Slugging, too, was one of the fine arts. Wherever the referee's eye could not spy it was considered perfectly legitimate to wallop a crouching opposing line man under the chin with elbow or fist. A good counter puncher was an asset in any line, and more good uppercuts have been struck on the old time gridirons than ever were landed in the ring.

Open play and the spirit of modern football have changed all that. When the rules committee first met to cut the mass plays out of football and make it a faster and more open game they met with strenuous opposition and criticism from the old players. They were accused of trying to kill American football and make it as mild and ladylike as English rugby. But they went ahead. They had to. Legislatures would have prohibited football play in another year, because of the number of fatalities and serious accidents.

New Football a Better Game.

But the new football is a better game. Old football, with its endless mass play, endless hammering at the line, endless piling on, heavy, crushing, pushing slowly up and down and field, was far less interesting than today's game. Moreover, the open game makes it possible for a college with few students to develop a team able to compete against the big colleges.

Of course our modern college teams have as good men, and as strong men in the line and behind the line, but weight and bulk are no longer major requirements. In my opinion the great old steam rollers, the crushing, crashing, smashing, line bucking teams of years ago—even the best and greatest of them—would have been whipped to a standstill if pitted against any one of our lighter, faster, trickier teams of today, with the open style of play and the effective, puzzling, bewildering aerial attack.

DROP PLANS FOR MOORE-BUFF GO; ROW OVER COIN

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

A financial difference of 5 per cent has resulted in the calling off of all negotiations for the Milwaukee ten round bout between Johnny Buff, holder of the flyweight and bantamweight titles, and Pal Moore, the local 118 pounder.

Harry Hockstadter, manager of Moore, asked 25 per cent for his fighter, while Buff demanded a flat guarantee of $6,500. Promoter Frank Mulkern of Milwaukee agreed to meet the champion's demand, but refused to give Moore more than 20 per cent.

After this match fell through Moore signed articles to meet Carl Tremaine of Cleveland over the eight round route at Memphis Dec. 5. The local boxer will start training tomorrow at the Arcade.

Comiskey Seeks Britton Go.

Tommy Comiskey, St. Paul welterweight, under the management of Eddie Long, will seek a match with Jack Britton if he wins his bout with Anthony Downey of Columbus, O., at La Salle, Ill., Thursday night.

Downey is a brother of Bryan Downey, and the bout is attracting considerable interest downstate. George Adams and Joe Mandell will meet in the semi-windup. Three preliminaries will be held. The show is being conducted by Jimmy Keyes, an old time promoter around these parts.

Bob Roper left last night for Memphis, where Roper will trade punches with Wild Bill Reed tomorrow night. Following this contest, Roper will return to Chicago to resume training for a fifteen round contest with Charley Weinert at New Orleans on Dec. 9.

Jimmy Kelly, west side bantamweight, and Jack Kennedy of Gary will meet in the main event of Sid Kessler's boxing show at South Bend on Thursday night.

Watson to Box Dundee.

Gene Watson, former California lightweight, who is making Chicago his home, is rounding into shape for his ten round clash with Mike Dundee at Rock Island on Dec. 2. The pair met at one of the outdoor Aurora shows and Dundee won the verdict after ten rounds of interesting milling. Dick Curley is matchmaker for the Rock Island club, and he has arranged four bouts to support the main event.

The Arcade gymnasium will be open this afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock for the benefit of a number of boxers who are training for important contests.

Fistic Word Pictures

By RAY PEARSON

"BETTER send Boschulte to St. Paul to bring back O'Connor. He knows how to handle those rough birds."

That remark was made in the Chicago detective bureau by Chief of Detectives Michael Hughes a couple of days after the above mentioned O'Connor had been captured in the Minnesota city.

The next scene in this narrative was on a passenger train bound from St. Paul to Chicago. On this train travelers with keen eyes saw an odd pair of seat companions. They sat close together, this pair, very close together, but what conversation took place wasn't meant for the ears of others.

One was a big, broad shouldered fellow with eyes that looked straight ahead and a face with features that showed nerve and determination; the other was a little man, not more than half the size of his companion. This little fellow didn't look one in the eye. His gaze was shifting, and he twisted about nervously as much as was possible within the narrow confines of the seat. If he could have twisted farther away he would have done so, but he couldn't for his right wrist was handcuffed to the left wrist of the big man sitting with him. The little man was "Tommy" O'Connor. He was on his way to jail and trial, and is now awaiting a trip to the gallows. The big fellow was Jack Boschulte, detective sergeant.

"Tommy" O'Connor is notorious. He is a Chicago gunman and all around bad man. He has been convicted of the murder of a Chicago policeman. The total number of notches on his gun is three.

It wasn't the first time that Jack Boschulte, in being called upon to bring O'Connor back to Chicago, had done things that required nerve. As far back as twenty years ago, Boschulte demonstrated that he had plenty of nerve in the ring. He was a middleweight boxer and scrappers weren't made too tough for him. Boschulte came up fast as a boxer, and gave every promise of nearing the champion's pinnacle. He fought the best men in his class in the country, but it was a much harder battle against more formidable opposition then. Tommy Ryan was the middleweight champion of those days.

But Tommy Ryan didn't instill fear in young Boschulte, who in his fighting days spelled his name "Beauscholte." Jack sought a match with Champion Ryan, got it, and in a tough but short fight was knocked out in three rounds. Still Boschulte wasn't convinced that Ryan was his master, and he fought Syracuse Tommy a second time, this being a six round bout in which Ryan won the decision. But Boschulte didn't lose his determination. He hoped to beat Ryan for the title, and fought him a third time, this time being knocked out in the fifth round.

Boschulte also fought other topliners. Philadelphia Jack O'Brien won a decision over him, and Marvin Hart stopped him in eleven rounds after Boschulte had handed the Louisville heavyweight a beating for eight rounds. In this latter bout Boschulte weighed 162 pounds, while Hart weighed 194. Jack never weighed more than 165 pounds as a ringster. He was smart enough to discover early that he wasn't destined to become a champion, and after four years of boxing tossed off the gloves and became a Chicago policeman.

Boschulte is a good detective sergeant. All the world and "Tommy" O'Connor will say so.

SCHOOL OF EXPERIENCE BESTOWS ONE DEGREE ON MR. "BABE" RUTH

BABE RUTH says that experience has taught him that Col. Huston, one of the owners of the New York Yankees, was right when he told him that he could play left better than center field for the New York Americans, and that he will make the change next season. Babe appears to be one of those unhappy boys who must learn by experience, and Judge Landis has educated a lot of them.

LANE BATTLES SCOTT TO A SCORELESS TIE

Fighting on a muddy gridiron, Lane Tech lightweights battled the Reserves of Scott High, Toledo, to a scoreless tie at Cubs' park yesterday afternoon before a crowd of 4,000.

Neither team was able to get within fifteen yards of its opponent's goal line during the entire battle. Lane completed a 22 yard forward pass in the last few minutes and brought the ball to Scott's 20 yard line. The Toledo team braced and Lane lost the ball on downs.

Despite the heavy field, Bohuskey and Altman broke loose for several long end runs. Feldstein of Scott made a 34 yard sprint to Lane's 25 yard line in the second quarter, but the local team held and the ball went over on downs. Rane, star Lane quarter back, who suffered a sprained ankle in the alumni game Thanksgiving day, entered the contest for a few minutes, but had to be taken out. Lineup:

Holy Cross Romps Over Boston Collegians, 41-0

Boston, Mass., Nov. 26.—Holy Cross exacted the heavy toll of six touchdowns from Boston college at Braves field today, 41 to 0. A field made heavy with rain proved little hindrance to the Holy Cross back field, which carried out a fast running attack mixed with a system of forward passes.

BADGER EDITOR PICKS STAR TEAM

Madison, Wis., Nov. 26.—Here is the honorary all-conference football eleven selected by Charles J. Levin, sports editor of the University of Wisconsin Daily Cardinal:

Crisler	Chicago	Left end
Huffman	Ohio	Left tackle
Brader	Wisconsin	Left guard
Bunge	Wisconsin	Center
McGuire	Chicago	Right guard
Slater	Iowa	Right tackle
Belding	Iowa	Right end

It is a representative team, combining all of the requisites necessary for an honorary eleven, Mr. Levin says.

Six Players End Careers with Pittsburgh Team

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 26.—Two of the leading players on the University of Pittsburgh football team, and four other varsity men, played their last game with the Panthers on Thanksgiving day. Herb Stein, center, who was named all-American center in 1919 and 1920, and Capt. Tom Davies, selected as an all-American halfback of the second team last season, will retire.

European Promoters Sic Georges on Battling Siki

PARIS, Nov. 26.—[United Press.]—Georges Carpentier, European heavyweight champion, agreed today to meet Battling Siki in February if the promoters will post a forfeit and the purse money.

M'MILLIN'S TEAM IN CHARITY GAME SCORES VICTORY

Columbus, O., Nov. 26.—"Bo" McMillin, Centre college, All-American quater back, and "Eddie" Casey, ex-Harvard All-American half back, upheld their gridiron traditions today by piloting to a 16 to 0 victory a "Rainbow" team, composed of former star gridiron players from a score of colleges, over a "Starbuck" team composed of Ohio State university stars at Ohio field. Players donated their services and the proceeds went to local charity.

The little Centre quarter back, his goal in danger, circled the end, wriggled his way through opposing tackles across the field, and in an eighty-six yard dash, planted the oval behind the goal. This play, which came in the third quarter, had been preceded in the first quarter by a touchdown by Casey. Goal was kicked after each touchdown and the other two points were made on a safety.

In the "Starbuck" line were Harley, Stinchcomb, and others of Ohio State gridiron fame.

LOYAL SOLDIERS WIN OPENER.

The Loyal Soldiers basketball squad of the Sheridan Road M. E. Sunday school played their opening game Friday. They defeated the Acme A. C., 26 to 7. The probable lineup for the season will be: Forwards, G. Sloat, C. Matthews; center, N. Wilgus; guards, D. Roberts, E. Moses. C. Matthews has been elected captain and D. Andres manager.

DENVER PAIR IN BOWLING LEAD AT DES MOINES

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 26.—E. Waite and G. Wolf of Denver went into the lead in the doubles in midwest bowling tournament this afternoon by shooting 1,270. The score lacks fourteen pins of equaling the association's record in that event.

W. Banks of Lincoln, Neb., shot 610 in the singles, which lead the field in today's shooting, but which barely puts him into the money. Standings in the various events follow:

Five man event—Wahkonsa Alleys, Fort Dodge, 2,906; South Side Malleables, Milwaukee, 2,878; Sonin Clothiers, Fremont, 2,868; Ziegler Chocolates, Milwaukee, 2,837; Wooster-Lambert No. 2, St. Louis, 2,829.

Doubles—Waite-Wolf, Denver, 1,270; Morrow-Riley, Kansas City, 1,257; Crinnigan-Frost, Fort Dodge, 1,234; Wachter-Schmidt, St. Louis, 1,231; Danforth-Zerbest, St. Joseph, 1,222.

Singles—G. Becker, Milwaukee, 725; C. Wesley, Omaha, 714; E. Somers, Milwaukee, 685; W. O'Donnell, Kansas City, 652; G. Morrow, Kansas City, 641.

HYDE PARK BEATS AUSTIN FOR TITLE

Hyde Park's undefeated heavyweight football team won the Chicago Public High School league championship—the first victory for the Blue and White since 1916—by winning from Austin High, 32 to 0, at Stagg field yesterday afternoon. A crowd of 5,000 turned out for the annual prep classic of the city.

The Austin team, many of whom were strongly outweighed, was no match for the shifts and crashing attack of the south side schoolboys, who were coached to a high pitch for the game by Arthur Scanlon, former football head coach at Purdue university.

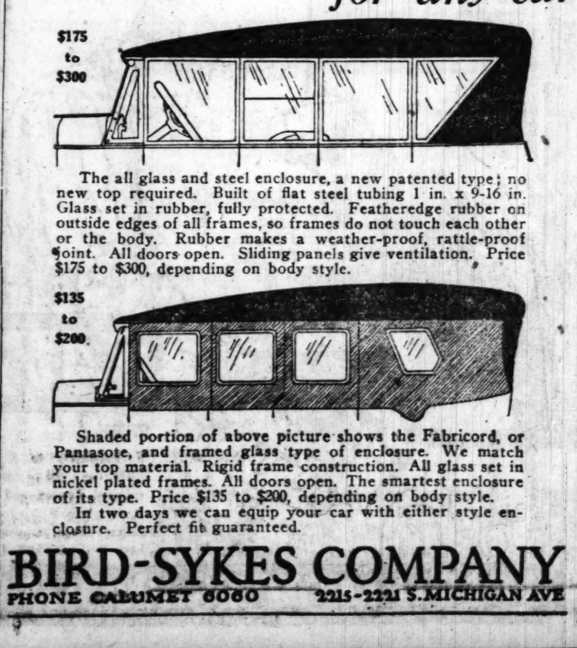
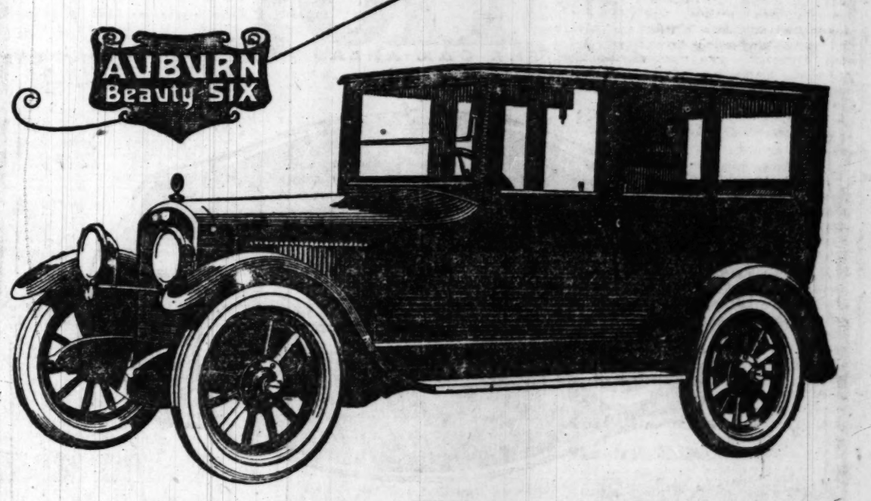
Cedar Rapids Challenges Any High School in Nation

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Cedar Rapids high school, Iowa champions for two years, is anxious to meet any high school team in the country for gridiron supremacy. This school won the national basket ball title last year and is anxious to decide the football championship.





NEED CHANGE IN BASKET SYSTEM OF CONFERENCE

BY ALBON HOLDEN.

With the Thanksgiving day week-end vacations out of the way, Big Ten conference university basketball teams will start practice this week. The opening of the schedule does not take place until Jan. 7, but all teams will engage in strenuous practice games to be fit for the championship grind.

A. A. STAGG. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The same unsatisfactory conditions still prevail in basketball, just as they do in every major sport in conference except track, and the faculty committee has done nothing to remedy the situation. The teams are limited to twelve games, which are played "home and home" with six opponents, but because the conference rules provide for no means of determining the championship, the press has to satisfy the demands of the public and the students by naming a champion by the percentage basis.

Present System Farce.

Where every team does not meet every other team, a percentage championship is generally pretty much of a farce, and in the last four or five years the squabbles between different claimants has stirred up more bad feeling in the Big Ten than any other feature of the sport calendar.

In 1917 Minnesota and Illinois tied, and had to call it a draw. Wisconsin, although beaten three times, won the title on a percentage basis in 1918, and the next year another jam resulted. Minnesota and Chicago both won ten games straight and claimed a tie. Chicago played a twelve game schedule and lost its two final games, while the Gophers played only ten games. Then the Midway howled for a standardization of schedules.

Title Jams Frequent.

Another jam resulted in 1920 when Chicago nosed out Purdue for the title, because Chicago played twelve games and Purdue ten. Last year the mess was even worse with Wisconsin, Michigan and Purdue all tied with eight games won and four lost. The sensible solution would have been to award Wisconsin the title, for the Badgers beat Michigan twice and Michigan took a pair of games from Purdue.

It looks like a great race this winter, with Wisconsin standing out as the most dangerous team. The Badgers did not lose heavily from their 1921 champion outfit and can build a team around Williams and Taylor. Dr. Meanwell, the wizard coach of the passing game, can be counted on for a powerful outfit. Purdue should have a great team, with Don White back for one year more and Coach Lambert's team almost intact.

Michigan Prospects Not Bright.

Coach Mather has a tough prospect at Michigan, for three, and possibly a fourth regular from last year will be missing. Illinois, if Carney and Hellstrom can stand the gaff on their bum legs, should have a dangerous quintet, with Walquist, Collins and Sabo back.

Almost anything can be expected from Chicago, depending on how things are handled. Last year Director Stagg tried coaching basketball for the first time, and, with a veteran team that was expected to romp home to a cinch championship, could win only half of his games. It is believed that Nelson Norgren, a former Maroon star and an experienced basketball coach, will handle the Maroons this winter. Crisler, Birkhoff, and Vollmer, brilliant stars of the last three years, are lost, but there are some promising new men in sight who may be developed.

Indiana to Have Good Team.

Coaches Levis of Indiana and Ashmore of Iowa did well in new jobs last year and may be expected to be in the race this winter. Indiana held first place for half of the race last season, but withered at the finish, while Iowa came strong after a poor start. Northwestern won its first game last year, and then dropped every other Big Ten struggle. The Purple is working hard to improve its standing, and will rush a team as fast as possible to be ready for a game with Yale at Evanston during the holidays.

At Ohio State fifteen men were used last year without finding a winning combination. Dr. Cooke at Minnesota will have a hard job to replace Oss and Arntson, his star shooters, who have played three years.

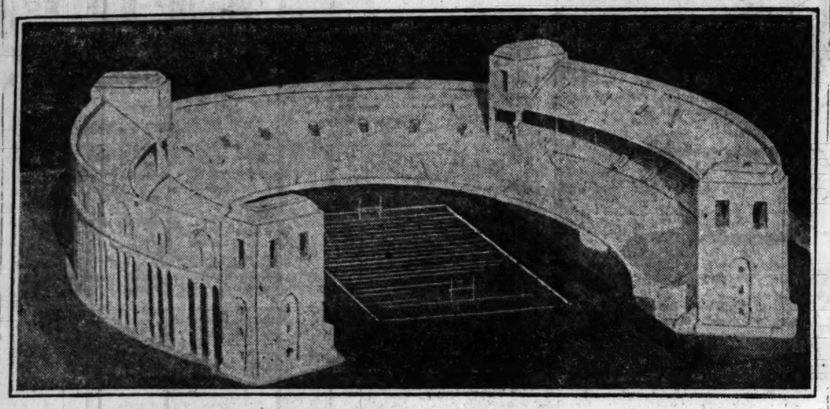
NEW WISCONSIN STADIUM



MADISON, Wis., Nov. 26.—When completed the new University of Wisconsin stadium will be one of the most pretentious in the west. It will have a seating capacity of 53,000. In shape it will resemble a horseshoe.

The stadium at Camp Randall is gradually being erected from a building fund which was opened in 1915 when the state legislature appropriated $20,000 for this purpose. Half of this amount was used for grading and building what is now one of the best gridirons in the country. The rest of the appropriation was used to start the construction of the concrete stadium and 5,300 seats were built on the natural bank at the west side of the field.

Gate receipts from athletic contests for the last two years have made it possible this year to add 4,000 concrete seats on the east side of the field. The building plan of the athletic council is to use funds earned from athletic contests and they hope to be able to build each year to meet the increasing demand. The plan now calls for completing the east side in concrete twenty-eight rows high next summer and installing permanent dressing quarters beneath.

The building program for succeeding years calls for completing the lower deck of west side in concrete to fifty rows high with superstructure for upper deck; building of twenty-eight rows of concrete on the south end of the bowl; completing lower deck on east side of fifty rows; finishing with upper decks of twenty-two tiers on east and west sides of the field.

If funds earned from athletic contests are not sufficient to carry on the building in proportion to the demand the council may ask the alumni to buy their Homecoming game tickets for a period of five years in advance to create a fund with which to carry on the work.

'Y' COLLEGE GRID TEAM HAS CLEAN RECORD FOR YEAR

Chicago boasts one college football team which is unbeaten for the season. That is Chicago Y. M. C. A. college, which concluded its season Thanksgiving day by drubbing De Paul university, 51 to 0, on the loser's field. This score exceeded Northwestern university's 34 to 0 victory over the same team, but the "Y" colegians are far too busy in their own activities in athletics to spend time claiming parity with or superiority to a team of the western conference, on the basis of comparative scores.

The "Y" college, under the athletic directorship of John G. Hoffer, has come to the fore in minor college athletic circles in recent years, but the recent football campaign has been by far its most successful.

Playing Football Four Years.

The college has been playing regular college football for only four or five years and even yet has no official playing field, being compelled to stage its home contests in Washington park.

The college, which is situated at 53d street and Drexel avenue, is one of three conducted by the national Y. M. C. A. as professional training institutions for men who plan to enter phases of social work and physical training, the other two being at Springfield, Mass., and Nashville, Tenn.

A four year course is given and every man in the college is required to play one year of football, assuring Coach Hoffer of a numerical squad for his team.

Start with Green Men.

Many students, however, come out totally unlearned in the gridiron sport, and consequently their football instruction detracts from the time and attention which might be put upon the development of such varsity squads as carry the colors of other small colleges. The number of men playing football at the Y. M. C. A. college under this rule during the season just closed was seventy-five, but only twenty-one were material for the college squad.

The team was made up practically of men who went to the institution direct from high school. The squad average was 164 pounds, all but the center of the rush line being lighter than the players on other characteristic college elevens.

Backfield Is Strong.

Capt. Andy Passell, full back, former Milwaukee high school boy; Harry Edgren, who calls signals from a half back's position; Emory Nelson and Milt Stauffer, composed a strong backfield, with F. K. Schutte, Bill Mumma, and Carroll Hoffman always ready to take vacant places. Edgren in particular was a player of strength, being a good punter and passer and a shifty open field runner. He came from Bowen High in South Chicago.

[illegible] who played at full back or half, was a versatile back, a good passer and hard plunger. Mumma was a crashing off tackle driver. Stauffer, regular quarter back, was good at interfering.

In the line, three strong tackles—Bill Rowe from Tilden High, Murray Ellis from Rochester, Minn., and William Kreutch from Norfolk, Neb.—combined weight with skill, outcharging every opponent on the schedule. G. W. Roesler and R. S. Myers, the latter a Cleveland high schooler, furnished speed on the ends, Myers being a clever receiver of passes and adept at turning opponents in. "Red" Crinklaw, a Marshalltown, Ia., boy, held down one flank consistently, Myers being used at end or half.

Record Brings Games.

The guards, James Hedrick, C. M. Alldrich, Paul Hayward, and Randall ("Jumbo") Morrow, center, were given credit by Assistant Coach Nelson Norgren of the University of Chicago, who watched the "Y" team play, for opening holes through which the back field advanced the ball. The line made the team a better defensive than offensive combination early in the season, but the scoring power developed to full satisfaction.

Due to the team's unbeaten record, Coach Hoffer already has enough offers for 1922 games to fill an ordinary season's schedules for two schools. The beatings that "Y" college handed Lake Forest college, Pat Page's Butler collegians in Indianapolis, and Kalamazoo Normal shoved it into notice through Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, and Wisconsin. Following is the season's record:

Y. M. C. A. college, 7; Lake Forest, 0.
Y. M. C. A. college, 7; Kalamazoo Normal, 3.
Y. M. C. A. college, 60; Wheaton, 0.
Y. M. C. A. college, 14; Butler, 7.
Y. M. C. A. college, 20; Northwestern [Naperville], 0.
[illegible] A. college, 51; De Paul, 0.

THREE MORE HUNTERS DIE IN GUN ACCIDENTS IN CENTRAL ILLINOIS

Bloomington, Ill., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Fourteen is now the total for fatal hunting accidents in central Illinois so far during the present season, three more being added to the list this week. Leonard Fones of Hampton was killed while seeking ducks with his father.

Ansel Wiggins of Roodhouse received injuries which resulted in his death. He was in quest of ducks with a companion, Aaron Watkins. The latter accidentally discharged his gun. In lifting a gun from a boat, Harold Shaw was almost instantly killed when the weapon was accidentally discharged. The victim in company with two other nimrods, left their home in Danville to seek ducks on the North Fork river.

Enoch Fix of Sangamon county received injuries which may prove fatal. He was shot in the left shoulder. Fix was conveyed to a hospital in Springfield. Donald Kingsley of Alden was punctured by several shot when the gun he was carrying was accidentally discharged. William Adams of Kenney was shot in the legs by Earl Whiteman while the two were seeking quail.

ILLINOIS IS HOPEFUL OF REVENGE IN 1922

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Illinois, still in a delirium of delight over the victory of Capt. Walquist's determined men at Columbus, is looking ahead to 1922. When the coaches' conference is held to map out the next year's schedules, it is very likely that Illinois will arrange to play the five teams which appeared on the Orange and Blue card this fall: Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Chicago, and Ohio. The Hawkeyes and Buckeyes are to visit Illinois field. Revenge is the main idea.

There is considerable sentiment favoring the return of Minnesota to the Orange and Blue card. The Gophers were missing this year for the first time since Zuppke came to Illinois. The Illini would like to see the Gophers back. And it is expected that Minnesota will come forth with stronger teams than has been its fortune for the last two seasons.

The return of Minnesota would give Zuppke a six conference game schedule —one more "Big Ten" contest than was carded this fall.

Illinois' prospects for next season are not regarded as unusually bright. The loss of Capt. Walquist, the spirited Olander, the great Crangle, Al Mohr, and Johnny Sabo will be sorely felt. Freshman material is not regarded as of a high class, but the youngsters, coached by Burt Ingwersen have had scrap and pep which bodes well.

Coach Frank Winters began intensive basketball training this week to cut down his squad of seventy aspirants. The nucleus of the team is Capt. Carney, Walquist, Sabo, and Collins. Reserves from last year are Gibson, Tabor, Danielson, and Bates.

Illinois "Prep" Teams Busy at Basketball

Freeport, Ill., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—With the football season near its end, the schools included in the Northern Illinois High School Athletic association are turning their attention to basketball. Though the conference season does not open until January, the teams already are practicing and will meet non-conference fives during the several weeks before the battle for conference honors opens. Each school will have heavyweight and lightweight teams. The schedule:

Jan. 6.—Elgin at West Aurora, East Aurora at Freeport, De Kalb at Joliet.
Jan. 13.—Rockford at DeKalb, Freeport at Elgin, West Aurora at Joliet.
Jan. 20.—Joliet at Rockford, East Aurora at Elgin, DeKalb at West Aurora.

FAIR ATHLETES LODGE PROTEST AGAINST SYSTEM

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 26.—Women students at the University of Iowa are complaining that they have to work too hard to get an athletic letter in comparison with the male students.

"If men had to do what women have to do to win an "I," few men would be wearing the athletic letter," according to Pauline Spencer, of Des Moines, president of the Women's Athletic association.

Here's Reason.

She explains that a man gets an "I" for winning a first in a dual meet or a point in a conference meet. A woman who is highest point winner in an athletic meet scores 100 points toward an "I," but it takes 1,000 points to win the letter. The woman who scores second place gets 75 points, third 50 points, and ten points are given for entering the contest.

To win an "I" a co-ed must be a member of the Women's Athletic association and to qualify for membership it is necessary either to hike twenty-five miles, swim seven and one-half hours in half hour periods within six weeks' time, or paddle a canoe to Coralville and back four times.

Can't Be Done.

Making a first team counts 100 points and a second team 50 points. An A grade in gymnastic work counts 50 points and an additional 25 points are given for advanced gymnastics. Miss Spencer says it is almost impossible for a woman athlete to earn an "I" in one year, but one or two rare instances are known where it has been done in two years.

At present only six university women have won "I's". They are C. Pauline Spencer of Des Moines; Lorena Bowen of Iowa City; Julia Darrow of Columbus Junction; Dorothy O'Donoghue of Storm Lake; Rosamond Read of Postville, and Ruth P. Zorn of Montezuma.

DIETZ MAY KEEP BERTH AS COACH OF PURDUE TEAM

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Purdue wants William H. Dietz, its Indian football coach, to renew his contract that expired when the 1921 season came to a close. The football men, the university authorities, the student body, the alumni, and the townspeople of Lafayette are all demanding that Dietz remain. He has not made up his mind, but probably will do so this coming week. It is believed that he will decide to remain for a year or a term of years.

Purdue will elect a football captain this coming week. It is likely the honor will go to one of three men: Swank of West Lafayette, Claypool of Davenport, Ia., or Murphy of Chicago. They have all played two seasons on the team.

The basketball team is hard at work under the direction of Coach Lambert. Miller and Eversman, last season's regulars, joined the squad this week following the completion of the football season.

BOYD CHAMBERS QUITS FOOTBALL.

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 26.—Boyd Chambers, athletic director of the University of Cincinnati, will not coach the football eleven of the institution next year. At his request he was relieved of that duty. He will remain as athletic director.

EAST WILL MISS THEM

AFTER winning the undisputed championship of the western intercollegiate conference and the entire middle west, the University of Iowa team will appear as an opponent on Yale's schedule at New Haven next year. The formidable Hawkeye machine, however, will be robbed of much of its strength in 1922, for Capt. Aubrey Devine and his brother, Glen Devine; "Duke" Slater, tackle; Leslie Belding, end; and other redoubtable linemen will be lost by graduation.

FLAT SITUATION ISN'T AS GLOOMY AS GLOOMERS SAY

Even West Side Starts on Big Apartments.

BY AL CHASE.

Probably the most significant feature about the present housing situation is the fact that, despite all the gloom that our most expert gloom dispensers can dispense, there actually is under way or planned a bunch of flat buildings that ought to give our profiteering landlords a bad pain in the bank balance. A pain, by the way, that should result in lower rents eventually.

Another pain producer for the rent gouging owner is the fact that thousands of bungalows and small flats are springing up in the outlying parts of the city. It's strange that when a fifty flat building is announced the public sits up and takes notice. But the average person fails to pay any attention to the announcement of twenty-five buildings with two apartments each, which care for exactly the same number of families as the one big structure—and certainly under better living conditions.

162 Flats in Four Projects.

With no attempt at giving a complete list of flat buildings under way, it's an interesting side light on the general situation to report the projects announced yesterday. A total of 162 apartments is reported by Architect A. L. Himelblau, all for the farthest northeast tip of uptown Chicago (J. F. Cornelius and other boosters for this same kindly note its use).

For instance, work will start in a few days on a seventy-eight flat building, 220x140, at 7710-30 Sheridan road, which with the land will cost a reported $650,000. There'll be four and five rooms. The Zisook Construction company is owner.

Start on Twenty-four Apartments.

Close by work has just started on a twenty-four flat building at 7748-52 Sheridan, for H. Holzenbraber. Lot 60x125, two and three rooms.

At the southwest corner of Sheridan road and Eastlake terrace excavation has begun for twenty-eight apartments, three and four rooms, lot 120x100, for M. Goldstein, owner, to cost $200,000. A Steinlee was broker and the Bond and Mortgage company has made a $120,000 loan on the property. There'll be four Sheridan road shops.

Architect Himelblau himself is owner of the thirty-two flats he designed for 7615-24 Eastlake terrace, 110x150, four and five rooms, to cost $200,000. Baer & Eisendrath have made a $140,000 loan on this.

West Side Wakes Up.

Another significant feature in the flat situation is that at last the building of big apartments on the west side has been resumed. During the week Loewenberg & Loewenberg announced a $300,000 fifty-two apartment building for Independence and Douglas boulevards.

Yesterday excavating started for a forty flat building at 5115-23 Washington boulevard, from plans by J. S. Avener & Co., to cost the owner, N. W. Weber, $250,000. All will be four room kitchenettes. It will be ready about April 1.

These, of course, are only some of the larger projects, but they show that Chicago's housing situation is righting itself faster than the general public realizes.

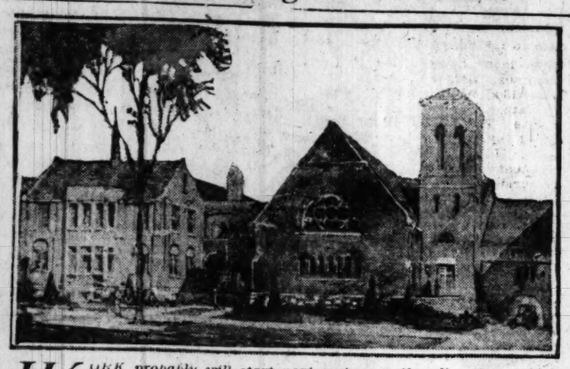
Rejuvenating an Old Timer



WORK probably will start next spring on the alterations which will convert one of Evanston's oldest churches, the Hemenway Methodist Episcopal, on Chicago avenue between Main and Lee streets, into a modern structure. Architects Tallmadge & Watson have designed a square tower for the main church edifice and also a new parish house and Sunday school with auditorium and stage. The church auditorium will be remodeled and new seats installed. The entire cost will be around $90,000. The Rev. Horace Smith is pastor.

Evanston's New Church School

"THE last word in departmental Sunday school organization" is the way Architect Thomas Tallmadge of Tallmadge & Watson designates the new $165,000 church school now being constructed as an addition to the First Baptist church edifice at Chicago avenue and Lake street, Evanston. Its outstanding feature will be a 400 seat auditorium planned as a memorial to Lieut. Kenneth MacLeish, naval aviator killed in the war. There will be a kitchen, classrooms, lockers, and shower baths for boys and other regulation features. It will be completed by next summer. The Rev. James Madison Stifler is pastor. The church was founded about sixty-two years ago.

Board Notes

Another step in the formation of the proposed industrial division of the Chicago Real Estate board, suggested by Business Manager J. Soule Warterfield, was taken Friday when the board of directors met and approved a request of eight industrial brokers for an organization meeting next Tuesday at 2 p. m. The directors also were requested to instruct the board's attorney, J. L. Vette, to submit changes in the by-laws making the new division possible.

Emmett Whealan, county commissioner, told Cook county real estate brokers last Tuesday what the Forest Preserve district meant to Chicago and outlined some of its future plans.

Charles Ringer to Build on Exchange Ave. Corner

Work probably will start this week on a $70,000 two story brick and terra-cotta improvement at the northwest corner of 79th and Exchange avenue by Charles Ringer and George F. Nord from plans by Architect William P. Doerr. There will be a large garage in the rear of the 130x160 lot and five first floor shops in the main building with five kitchenette-shops on the second floor, which will enable the shop owners to live close to their work, and six offices.

SAYS BUILDING ASSOCIATIONS HELP YOU SAVE

Herman Teninga Tells of Work Done.

Herman Teninga spoke on Tuesday about "Building, Saving, and Loan Associations" before the real estate class of the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce, which is under the auspices of the Cook County Real Estate board, George F. Nixon, chairman of the committee in charge. Walter B. Helton, real estate manager for the L lines, will discuss "Transportation and Its Relation to Real Estate" in the tenth lecture of the series. It will be given in this department next Sunday.

Building, savings, and loan associations have become a power for good in this country and help perhaps more than any other one agency to solve the home problem.—Herman Teninga.

BY HERMAN TENINGA.

What is a building, savings, and loan association? It's a coöperative savings institution organized to help you get your own home in an easy way; to take care of your savings and give you adequate interest on those savings while you're saving them.

HERMAN TENINGA. [Walinger Photo.]

The theory of the building, savings, and loan associations is very simple and easy to understand. Its object is to accumulate funds to loan to its members. Its savings department pays on small savings a rate of interest ordinarily received only on large investments and its loan department makes loans costing borrowers about one-half that generally paid on the open market. The theory is to collect money in small amounts from a large number of people and loan it to others on real estate or its own stock. The money so borrowed is paid back in regular, systematic, compulsory installments, with the necessary interest.

Some of Its Uses.

Here briefly are some of the various uses to which a loan association can be put: Many wise parents have subscribed for stock as savings accounts for their children. One father followed the plan of giving each child one share at birth. Another is paying a sum equivalent to 10 cents a day for his baby boy. By the time the boy becomes 21 the father will have laid away $1,400 with which to send him to college.

Ambitious young people join an association as the easiest and quickest avenue for accumulating money for a start in life; to open up a business, to make the first payment on a home, or what not. The cautious, desiring to lay by some money for a rainy day, find it comforting and advantageous to use the association.

Helpful to Property Owners.

The property owner finds it helpful in numberless ways: if he has a mortgage on his property he can subscribe to stock with which to pay it off. If he owns a clear flat building it affords a means for investing the incoming rents, so that they will earn additional profit. By this means many flat owners earn as much as 12 to 14 per cent on their buildings.

After all, loan associations do not do such wonderful things; it's the individual member who makes himself save. The associations give him the opportunity to help himself. The secret which makes possible the high interest rate on savings, low net cost of loans and absolute safety is simply coöperation. Money invested in a savings bank earns for the bank just as much interest as money in a loan association earns the association, but in a bank the profits are divided between the owners and its depositors. Coöperation makes the association's depositors its sole owners and this assures to them all the profits their money earns.

New Lutheran Church for Englewood

THE English Evangelical Lutheran Church of Our Redeemer has had plans drawn by Worthman & Steinbach for a $200,000 edifice to be built on a new site on Harvard avenue between 64th and 65th streets early next spring. The Rev. G. Schuessler is pastor of 2,500 communicants, with an actual membership of 1,600. The church will be of stone in English Gothic cathedral type, 68x167, seating 1,800, with a two story sunday school.

Pine Grove and Sheridan Corner Sold for $220,000

If brokers' figures are correct, then Paul P. Center of Oak Park made a good profit on his 158x150 property at the southwest corner of Sheridan and Pine Grove. He bought it through John J. Ready Jr., of W. K. Young & Bro., for a reported $175,000 a few weeks ago. He has now sold it through the Brooks Realty company for a reported $220,000, subject to $150,000, to Mrs. Eleanor Perbohner. The buyer intends to remodel the corner first floor for a drug store and will keep the property for a permanent investment. Harrison & Riedy will have charge of it. The improvement consists of a three story building containing twenty-nine apartments and four shops. It is directly east of the Panorama theater.

Another Firm to Quit Loop for North Side Ad Colony

And still another ad firm plans leaving the loop for the new north side advertising colony. The H. E. Remington Advertising company, now at 327 South La Salle street, has bought the three story former home of Major Frederic D. Owsley at 225 East Erie street, and will move early next month. Albert Hecht, architect, bought the house several months ago and remodeled it into an office building, using considerable of the space for his studios. John B. Londrigan, of the Bowes Realty company, was broker in the last deal.

Plan $200,000 Building Across From the Howard

Howard street continues the liveliest thoroughfare so far as new building projects are concerned. Charles Ferguson is having plans drawn by Architects Henry L. Newhouse and F. M. Bernham for a $200,000 three story structure across from the Howard theater, to contain stores, offices, and apartments.

BUILD $100,000 AUTO SALESROOM.

Salvat & Neumeister, pioneers in electric cars, are building a $100,000 two story salesroom and service station at the northwest corner of Cottage Grove avenue and 50th place, 100x180, from plans by Henry L. Newhouse and F. M. Bernham. They plan similar buildings in Evanston and Oak Park. They now operate a chain of garages known as the Fashion stations, all designed by Newhouse and Bernham.

HEAD OF CHICAGO WOMAN'S CLUB TO ADDRESS REALTY MEN

PROF. FREDERICK STARR.

Following the precedent established last year, the Cook county real estate board not only will invite women to attend its fourteenth annual banquet at the Drake on Dec. 8, but will have a woman speaker. Miss Grace Temple, president of the Chicago Woman's club, will speak on "The Woman's Club Movement."

Prof. Frederick Starr of the University of Chicago, recently back from research work in the orient, has accepted an invitation to address the realty men, but George F. Nixon, chairman of the banquet committee, late last night had not been advised of the subject of his talk. Other speakers will be George Wheeler, Hinman financial writer, and Charles N. Wheeler, former TRIBUNE man, who is listed as "special Washington correspondent and close observer of international politics." An elaborate musical program is being arranged.

Plans Studio Building on Sheridan Road Lot

D. H. Bloom of the Bloom studio has bought from Flora Schwartz the 50x150 on Sheridan road, adjoining the northeast corner of Irving Park boulevard, for a reported $60,000, subject to $25,000, through the Barnett & Bluhm company. It is reported he intends replacing the present old improvements with a modern studio building. The same brokers report the sale of the 100x125 at the northwest corner of Armitage and Crawford, improved with stores and offices, by Jennie Wexelman to Charles Minov and M. Herzog for $55,000, subject to $25,000.

PLANS SERVICE STATION.

F. M. Feldman has bought the 60x120 at [illegible] South Kedzie avenue, with old improvements, and is having plans for a $30,000 auto sales and service station drawn by Architect M. O. Nathan. George H. Schneider sold the property for a reported $16,000 through Marks & Co.

PLAN BUNGALOW ATOP $500,000 CEDAR ST. FLATS

Charles A. Brown, of Brown, Boettcher & Dienner, patent attorneys, wants to live in a bungalow but he wants it within walking distance of the loop and high enough to give him a view of the lake from his front yard. Yesterday he solved this perplexing problem by selling the 100x175 at 20-28 Cedar street, containing some brewery ruins, to Charles F. Henry, with the stipulation that on top of the seven story apartment Mr. Henry plans building, will be an elaborate bungalow in which Mr. Brown will live. Architect Roy F. France is drawing plans for a 75 flat building to cost approximately $500,000. F. J. O'Donnell, of M. Hoffman & Co., was broker.

National Life Treasurer Buys Glencoe Residence

Levering Moore, Treasurer of the National Life Insurance company, has bought the B. L. Heath eight room brick residence, recently completed, at 565 South avenue, Glencoe, lot 125x172, through Gilbert D. Johnson & Brother, for a reported $25,000.

Other north shore deals reported by this frm are: Six room Dutch colonial residence at 847 Grove street, Glencoe, 99x200, sold by Albert W Storms to Edward T. Wilder, of Wilder & Co., wholesale leather, for $15,500; six room stucco house at 610 Cherry street, Winnetka, sold by George E. Gibson to Thomas McCall, of Miller, Starr, Brown, Packard & Peckham, attorney's, for $15,000; seven room new stucco residence at 1285 Ashbury avenue, Hubbard Woods, 50x150, sold by George Gonsalves, builder, to George Sunderland for $14 500.

Paper Firm Moves to New South Canal Street District

Parker, Thomas and Tucker Paper company, one of the oldest and largest wholesale dealers of printers' paper in the city, now at Franklin street and Lomax place, have leased substantially half of the eight story Janeway & Carpender building at 520-26 South Canal street for six and one-half years at a term rental approximately $100,000. P. E. DuCharme of Edgar M. Snow & Co. was the broker. It is understood that this is the first of several concerns who are figuring on moving to the new South Canal street business district.

Boston Store Manager to Build $35,000 Residence

Henry Hart, manager of the Boston Store, is having plans drawn by Holabird & Roche for a $35,000 brick and tile residence in Glencoe

PLAN INNOVATION FOR GOLFING FANS AT DIXMOOR CLUB

New Homewood Course to Be Public-Private.

Chicago golf fans are going to have what is claimed will be an innovation in this section—the combination public-private club. A tract of 123 acres at the southwest corner of West 175th street and the Dixie highway in Homewood, directly across from the Calumet Country club, has been bought by a group of business men and golf experts, for a price said to have been $650 an acre. On this an eighteen hole course will be laid out by Tom Bendelow and a one story clubhouse designed by Woltersdorf & Bernhard will be built. Around $300,000, it is claimed, will be spent on land and improvements.

A corporation known as the Dixmoor Golf club, Inc., will own and operate the club and offer stock for sale at $100 a share, the holder of five shares to be considered a member and entitled to all the privileges thereof. The general public will also be admitted for $1 to $2. Any profits will be paid as dividends to the stockholders. According to Hefter & Wells, who represented the buyers, this method has been successful abroad and in the east, where good sized profits have been earned on several courses. Gostlin, Meyn & Hastings of Hammond, Ind., represented the sellers.

Chick Evans is a director. Others are Raymond W. Beach, Al Weinburger, A. J. Kendricks, Clarence C. Upham, and Frank C. Wells of Hefter & Wells. Ground will be broken March 1, with the hope of having it open late in August. Ravisloe, Flossmoor, Idlewild, and Olympia Fields are in the neighborhood.

North Side Scientists to Build Reading Room

The Twelfth Church of Christ, Scientist, has bought 54x167 on the north side of Grace street, 120 feet east of Broadway, from Sanfrid Harnstrom for $6,000, and will erect within a few weeks a two story reading room from plans by Coolidge & Hodgdon. The church edifice will be built a block and a half east on the opposite side of Grace street, next spring.

GRAIN PRICES CLOSE HIGHER THAN WEEK AGO

BY CHARLES MICHAELS

Liquidation was on in December wheat early, and prices declined readily, but the break brought in an excellent run of buying orders and an advance of 1⅞@2¼c from the inside figures followed, with the close within a fraction of the top with net gains of ¼@½c., the latter on May, which finished 3¼c over the December. Coarse grains were easier, and, while rallying with wheat, closed with corn ⅛@½c lower. Oats were unchanged and rye ½c lower.

Grain prices were on the up grade a good part of the week, with a broadening in the outside interest. The close on wheat was well toward the top, with net gains of 4¼@5½c, as compared with a week ago, but corn lost the greater part of its gain and finished ⅜@⅝c higher, while oats were ⅛@⅜c higher. Provisions were affected by grains, and hogs and lard closed 5@10c and short ribs 15@ 17½c higher for the week.

Foreign Markets Weak.

Weakness in foreign markets and general realizing sales were responsible for the early decline in wheat. Many local longs went out of their lines on the way down and there was a slightly less bullish sentiment prevailing. Strong commission houses absorbed the offerings of the May on the way down, and toward the close a move to even up for the week by shorts carried prices up sharply. At the finish May was off around 3c from the high of the previous close.

The partial failure of the Japanese and Chinese rice crops attracted much attention, as the trade believe that the far east will be a big factor in the world's situation, as they will require a large amount of wheat. The continent was after Manitobas and bought 500,000 bu during the day, but there was no fresh business reported in hard winters, although a cargo of 220,000 bu on passage sold at equal to $1.27½, and a message from the southwest indicated that bids were close to a working basis.

Dry weather continues in Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas, and damage reports are increasing and attracting much more attention than they did a short while ago. Australia and India have received some rain. A New York interest estimates that world's takings of wheat so far this season are 24,000,000 bu in excess of last year so far. Liverpool was lower on large Australian shipments and the increase in the Canadian crop estimate. Milling demand remains rather slow, with mills in the southwest operating at reduced capacity. Minneapolis continues to bid for hard winter in the west and southwest.

Corn Under Pressure.

Corn was under pressure and decline to around the lowest figures of the week in the early trading, December touching 48¾c, but when wheat rallied corn followed and the finish was on a fair upturn from the low, with December going to a wider discount under the May, due to scattered liquidation and also a little pressure from cash interests. Country offerings were not large. Export demand for corn continues good.

Oats held within a range of around ⅝c and closed about the top, due to buying induced by the late rally in wheat. The December-May spread showed a tendency to widen, due to scattered liquidation in the nearby delivery. Shipping demand was less active and the spot basis was somewhat easier as compared with the December.

A fair trade was on in rye, and while prices were off 1½c early the close was stronger in sympathy with wheat. No export sales were reported.

Provision Prices Lower.

Lack of demand and scattered selling resulted in a lower range of provision prices. A belief that arrivals of hogs this next week would be heavy, due to the live stock show, had a depressing effect, Cash trade was only fair. Closing trades were at net losses of 7½@15c on lard and 10c on ribs. Prices follow:

The day of high yields

Authorities agree that the day of high interest rates on bonds is drawing to a close.

With money becoming more plentiful, investors will no longer be paid so well for the use of their money.

Today you can buy safe, conservative bonds which yield 7% to 9% and more. Today, the opportunity that comes but once or twice in a generation is still open to you.

Tomorrow, perhaps, interest rates will fall, and your opportunity will have passed.

The bonds listed are all sound conservative investments that are representative of today's opportunity.

They are available in denominations of $100, $500 and $1000, and may be purchased outright or by the partial payment plan. Prices are subject to change.

Closing hog trade was highest of the week, largest shipping orders for any Saturday in several months being the strengthening factor. Packers also purchased freely. Closing top at $7.15 stood 15c above a week ago and the average at $6.95 showed 25c gain over previous Saturday.

Smallest week's receipts of hogs in ten years, comparing with corresponding week in other years, was disappointing to the trade, arrivals at 143,700 being 66,000 below the ten year average. Estimated average weight last week at 221 lbs was lightest in over two years, going below the corresponding week a year ago for the first time in more than twelve months.

After advancing 50c@$1.00 the first half of last week, the cattle market weakened, closing with fully half the advance lost. Week's top stood at $12.00 and average price of good beef steers $7.35, standing 25c above previous week, when the average was lowest since 1915.

Lambs Advance Sharply.

Lambs met with a brisk call during the week, smallest supplies in several months forcing best lambs up to $10.10, or 70c above previous week and highest in about two months.

Next Monday's receipts are estimated at 19,000 cattle, 50,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 30,194 cattle, 37,244 hogs, and 28,336 sheep the corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts are 62,000 cattle, 185,000 hogs, and 79,457 sheep.

Various estimates place next Monday's probable hog run at 43,000 to 60,000. Lester Armour marked 43,000; E. R. Gentry, 47,000; W. H. Overman, 48,000; G. M. Nicoll, 51,000; F. R. Burrows, F. W. Waddell, and W. S. Nicholson, 52,000; J. M. Waters and E. S. Waterbury, 53,000; Edward Morris, 54,000, and W. Garrett, 60,000.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The rapidity with which wheat rallied after the early break inspired local operators with considerable confidence after the close, and a majority of them continue to predict higher prices. It is expected that the visible supply will show some reduction in domestic stocks Monday, while the supply of Canadian in bond will probable show a large increase, more than offsetting the reduction of around 3,000,000 bu at Fort William and Port Arthur.

The continued lack of an aggressive milling demand is not affecting the cash markets to any great extent, as offerings on spot are small. Attention was called, however, to the reports that Minneapolis was bidding freely for hard winter in the west and southwest, which may divert considerable grain that way that under normal conditions might go to Omaha and Kansas City. Owing to the slow flour demand many mills in the southwest are now operating on short time, and little change is looked for until after the turn of the year.

Drought reports are coming again from southern Argentina, and as the crop there generally went into the ground later than usual there may be some damage unless rains are received shortly, as many traders see it. There is still a disposition noted to avoid the buying side on the bulges.

It is estimated that 10,000,000 bu wheat remains to be shipped from Fort William and Port Arthur by Nov. 30, and vessel agents claim 7,000,000 bu in addition is already booked for December shipment. Deliveries on November contracts at Winnipeg yesterday were 1,000,000 bu No. 3 northern, making 3,000,000 bu in three days.

The break in corn was regarded by many traders as due more to a lack of aggressive buying than anything else, although there was considerable pressure put on the market during the day. It is doubtful, according to some operators, if there has ever been a time when every interest in the grain trade, the producer, bankers, and the government, wanted to see higher prices for corn, and with it is sentiment crystalizing rapidly they believe that there is only one side to the market as far as the ultimate trend of values is concerned. The War Finance corporation will hold a meeting here Wednesday and important developments are expected. Yesterday's break carried prices off to a level where 40c could no longer be paid at Illinois points for spot grain.

There is evidence that Duluth is after corn for winter storage purposes, and bids of 45¼c for No. 2 yellow and 44¾c for No. 2 mixed, net track Duluth, were made for December shipment yesterday.

In commenting on the press cables indicating a crop failure in Germany, a local trader whose children are being educated in Munich, Bavaria, said that he is sending crackers over to them all the time, as they could not be bought there. Soap is also very scarce and white bread almost impossible to obtain.

Protection Under Blue Sky Law.

Before the amended securities law of Illinois was adopted a great many securities were being sold under various names, such as oil, mining, or gas leases, units or shares in leases, investment contracts, etc., with the purpose of evading the necessity for qualifying under the law. It frequently is brought to our attention, through letters from our readers, that such securities still are being sold to purchasers, who are led by the salesmen to believe that these can legally be sold in this state without qualifying under the blue sky law. Such is not the case, however, as the new law specifically defines the word "securities" to include all these and many more of the favorite subterfuges for selling stocks under another name that could not qualify under the law.

For the benefit of the large number of our readers who are not familiar with the provisions of the present blue sky law, we quote from paragraph 2 of the Illinois securities law:

"The word 'securities' shall mean and include stock, treasury stock, bonds, debentures, investment contracts, notes, evidences of indebtedness, participation certificates, certificates of shares or interest, preorganization certificates and subscriptions, certificates evidencing shares of or interest in trust estates or associations, profit sharing agreements or certificates, or any certificate, contract, or instrument whatsoever, representing or constituting evidence of, or secured by, title to or interest in, or any lien or charge upon, the capital or any property or assets of the issuer thereof, and any oil, gas, or mining lease, and interests, units, or shares in any such lease or leases."

The law then provides that, in order to sell any such securities in this state certain information must be filed with the secretary of state, and that this information must receive the approval of the secretary. It further provides that every sale and contract of sale made in violation of any of the provisions of this law shall be void at the election of the purchaser, and that the seller of such securities, together with every solicitor, agent, or broker who knowingly furthered the sale, shall be liable to the purchaser in an action at law or in equity for the amount paid and also for attorney's fees necessary to such action for recovery.

Bridge Builders

of the Time of the Pioneer

H. O. STONE

EVERYBODY IS WATCHING the marvelous work of the builders erecting the new bridges at Wells and at Madison Streets, while the old bridges remain in use. So it is timely to look back to 1835—the year H. O. Stone settled here—and see Chicago's First Drawbridge.

Primitive and crude though everything else then was, the Dearborn Street Bridge stood as a monument to the skill of the men who erected it. Its length over all was 300 feet, its width 16 feet, and, like the bridges of today, it had a double draw.

There were other great builders in Chicago of '35—the builders of our first courthouse—our first public school—our first fire department—our first highway—and H. O. Stone, first builder of the real estate investment house of H. O. Stone & Co.

On the foundation he laid in 1835, you can build today. As an investor, large or small, as a man or woman determined to save, you can add solid stones to your structure of independence, prosperity and happiness by investing in the First Mortgage Real Estate Serial Gold Bonds of H. O. STONE & CO.

Every investment in these Bonds is safe—every dollar of principal and interest always has been paid when due. These Bonds pay 6% and 7%, and your investments in them will prove profitable and free from loss, depreciation and worry.

If you wish, you may buy these Bonds on our Systematic Saving-Investment Plan in amounts of $100, $250, $500 and $1,000—10% down, 10% a month—and get full Bond interest while you save.

The New York Times.

New York, Nov. 26.—[Special.]—Further moderate advance in prices, both for stocks and bonds, today was of interest chiefly as showing the market's trend at a time of week when realising sales are apt, temporarily, to reverse the previous movement.

The really noteworthy picture in the field of changing values is provided by comparison of the week-end prices for investment bonds with those of a week ago. No upward swing of values approaching this has been witnessed in any week since the war ended—even in the "January reinvestment period" of this year or 1919. The week's rise of nearly 2 points in the "average" by no means tells the story, for individual advances of 3 points, of 4, of 6, or more, have occurred in two score or three score separate investment issues.

Government Bonds Move Up.

Gains of 1 to 2 points preponderate in such usually slow moving securities as the Liberty bonds and foreign governments. These foreign bonds have this week very generally reached prices 10 per cent or more above the year's low figures; so have the United States war loans. With the railway and industrial bonds the scope of recovery extends in many well known investment securities to 15 per cent or more.

Today's movement in the bond market was somewhat more irregular; but most of the Liberty bonds, many foreign securities, and a substantial number of home company loans reached the highest price of the year to date. On the stock market also the course of the day's prices, though irregular, was generally upward at the week-end. Naturally, no such series of net advances for the week appear in stocks as with investment bonds, for the stock market's mood has been uncertain and changeable. But on the whole, even when the movement was of small proportions, it was generally upward.

Foreign Exchange Rates Firm.

Today's was a strong market in foreign exchange also, although sterling did not reach the $4 mark again, and the French rate did not recover all of Friday's losses. The mark, after having on Friday all but touched the period's low level, rose a substantial fraction. It would seem that the 0.42 prices is now as hard for the German mark to cross on the decline as the $4 level is for sterling to pass on the recovery.

Today's cotton market indicated a halt to last week's renewed and vigorous advance. It is not without significance in its bearing on cotton prices that the week-end trade statistics, showing results of the previous downward reaction in those prices, report heavy reduction in the marketing of cotton from the farms, but the largest takings by northern spinners of any week since the season began.

Bank Reserves Fall Off.

A decrease of $15,053,560 in surplus reserves of the New York clearing house banks is shown in the weekly statement of actual condition, made public today. Reserves in excess of legal requirements now stand at $14,536,410. Loans decreased $29,250,000 and deposits about $2,500,000. Government deposits are about $11,500,000 lower than last week. CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Considerable activity took place in the motor issues, Packard being in good demand around 7 and closing firm at 6¾ bid with offerings at 7¼. Paige improved four points to sales at 15 and eased off slightly at the close at 13¾@14½. Reo also advanced to sales at 20½, declining slightly later to stock offered at 20¼ with bids at 19½. Stearns ruled steady at 23 to 25.

Among the miscellaneous group price changes were erratic. Creamery Package common sold up to 24½ and at latest quotations was wanted at 24 with limited offerings at 25. Butler Brothers was unchanged at 34½ to 35¼ and Kellogg Switchboard and Supply was quoted at 42½ to 43¼. Consumers common advanced to sales at 8¾, closing with stock offered at this price and buyers at 6¾; the preferred was quiet at 64 to 66. Moline Plow preferred was weak, declining to low sales at 3. Avery common was neglected at 20 to 22, but the preferred was traded in at 50. Bucyrus preferred was neglected at 82 to 87, while the common was wanted at 14, with offerings at 16. Burroughs Adding Machine was traded in between 133 and 136. Beatrice Creamery, however, advanced to sales at 157; stock was in demand at this price at the close with offerings at 190. Northwestern Yeast continued to improve to 310 bid, with no stock offered at current quotations.

The local unlisted bond market was exceptionally strong throughout. Among the packing house issues the greatest strength was displayed in the Wilson 1st 6's, which improved about 5 points to a close of 98 bid, offered at 98½. The convertible 6's were strong, improving fractionally in the late trading. Armour 7's were one-half a point higher at 102⅛ to 103. Swift 7s of 1931 advanced a full point to 102 to 102½. The other packers were all in good demand with no changes fractionally higher.

The Commonwealth Edison issues led the public utility issues in strength and volume of trade. The 5's sold up two points to 93 to 93¾, while the 6s closed at 101½ to 102¼ and the 7s at 103 to 103, up three-quarters and one-half a point respectively. Chicago Railway 5's showed the greatest rise among the local tractions, advancing to 69½ to 69¾ up 3½ points. Public Service 5's closed at 83¼ to 84½, an improvement of one point. The rest of the list was featured by an exceptionally strong demand for long term noncallable issues.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled $437,500,000, a decrease of $148,800 from the preceding week, which was largely due to the fact that last week contained the Thanksgiving holiday, but also a decline of $94,600,000 from the corresponding week in 1920. Balances last week totaled $34,000,000, a decrease of $3,600,000 from the preceding week and also a decline of $8,200,000 from the corresponding week in 1920. The figures for last week, day by day, follow:

The "Limitation-of-Armament" Conference is in full Swing!

We now propose A Limitation-of-Price Conference for the entire clothing industry!

Guaranteed All-Wool $35 Suits and O'Coats — $25

Guaranteed All-Wool $40 Suits and O'Coats — $30

Guaranteed All-Wool $45 Suits and O'Coats — $35

We believe a definite limit of retail clothing prices should be fixed. Based simply on the raw cost of woolens, materials, workmanship. Foreman & Clark have eliminated middleman and jobber! But if these go-betweens must continue in the industry as a whole, if people must pay four profits on a suit or overcoat bought in the ordinary way, then, for the good of everybody, limit those profits! We cannot clothe every man in the United States, but we would like to see the four profits which other men pay (on clothes sold the average way) limited as rigidly as the one profit 400,000 men pay here!

We believe that every factor of the clothing industry, every maker, jobber and retailer, should adjust himself to the new clothing situation as quickly and honestly as his particular conditions permit!

We have created conditions in and around this manufacturing-and-selling business which make our own adjustment swift and certain! Week after week, as the woolen market dropped, we have bought finer woolens at lower prices. We have found labor cheaper, linings, trimmings, buttons, thread—in fact, everything that goes into a suit of clothes—much lower in price, enabling our three New York factories to put constantly greater value into our guaranteed prices of $25, $30 and $35!

This is a fast-moving organization which sells clothes direct to you . . . turns over its stocks completely every six weeks . . . and enables us to take advantage of every change in the market instantly and pass it on to you!

We do not wish to use our position or success unfairly in reflecting on others. We do not ask the clothing industry to duplicate our standard of a dollar, but we do urge them to give up the abnormal profits of abnormal times.

We believe that if every factory of the clothing industry were grouped in serious conference, and each man asked himself a few straight, honest questions, no single reason could be found to justify the $50 or the $60 price.

Trade Upstairs and Save $10

We conduct three great factories and a chain of upstairs stores from coast to coast on the principle of one small profit on each purchase, totaling 400,000 sales for 1921!

We are today the largest makers-and-retailers of men's clothes in the entire country. No standards or ideals in the building of fine clothes go farther or higher than ours! It is not physically possible to put more careful, personal attention into a suit of clothes or an overcoat than we put into every Foreman & Clark garment! We consider nothing too good for our product! $3.50 and $4.00 woolens go into these clothes. The finest linings, the most expensive trimmings, the choicest hand tailoring . . . material and workmanship twice as expensive as the average maker can afford to put into garments at OR NEAR our retail prices.

We make clothes to meet the most rigid guarantee ever put behind a suit or overcoat! We make clothes which have GAINED for us 100,000 additional sales in 1921—through the personal recommendation of our customers and friends.

The real character of this business lies right there . . . in our contact with our customers! We know the public, and we are proud of it! It puts a feeling of responsibility into this organization clear back to the factories. WE are making clothes for people we KNOW, or are GOING to know in a friendly, cordial, personal way! The average maker has no idea WHO he builds his clothes for! It makes a big difference!

We hold in our files the personal record of every man who ever bought a Forman & Clark suit or overcoat! 83 out of every 100 of these are steady customers! In other words, we know our customers AFTER we sell them, we know them WHEN we sell them, and, getting right down to brass tacks, we know 83 out of every 100 of them while their future clothes are still in a stage of manufacture! Under these conditions . . . knowing that the public is responsible for such success . . . wouldn't YOU build clothes so conscientiously, watch over each detail of production so CAREFULLY . . . that you could AFFORD to back each garment with the strongest guarantee of satisfaction in the world?

HEAD OF WALLACE INSTITUTE—This is Wallace, whose reducing system has become a national institution. People in every state of the Union get thin to music under his direction because he employs dictated records which carry his instruction to any home where there is a phonograph. (Photo by Keedy)

DO YOU WANT TO REDUCE to normal weight? Would you accept absolutely free proof that you can? In a few weeks. No matter how stout you now may be. And the way is NOT by starving.

FOOD DOES NOT CAUSE FAT; some stout men and women eat less than a child. Excess flesh means your system is turning too much of what you DO eat into fat. Until such a condition is changed, you will stay stout!

GET THIN TO MUSIC and Nature will make your bodily proportions normal, and keep them so. My reduction course on phonograph records—set to music—brings instant and PERMANENT results. It causes your system to use every bit of nourishment for blood, bone and sinew. NOTHING IS LEFT from which to make fat. Thousands of people have reduced by this interesting method. A majority had tried other means of losing weight without success.

I'LL REDUCE YOU 5 LBS. FREE to convince you, and I'll do it in FIVE DAYS' TIME. Before you pay a penny. Without any agreement to take my course. I will send postpaid, a full-sized reducing record and instructions. Send no money for this lesson—all I ask is to TRY IT.

How can anybody who really wishes to get thin decline such an offer of proof! Clip or tear off the coupon below: fill it in now; mail it today.

WALLACE, 178 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago: Please send record for first reducing lesson, free and prepaid. I will either enroll or return your record at end of five-day trial.

Why The Tribune has the largest morning daily circulation in America

DO PEOPLE read newspapers because of the ads? Certainly! Not only does the supremacy of The Tribune in circulation bring it advertising but its supremacy in advertising brings it circulation. Consider the Want Ads, for instance. The more than three million letters received by The Tribune annually directed to want advertisers who used "box numbers" instead of addresses give some idea of the extent to which even the most obscure advertising is read. Advertising is market news of an intensely practical kind—making each copy of The Tribune vastly valuable to readers—enabling them to save money, make money and purchase efficiently

W. E. DONAHUE directs a force of sixteen men who sell advertising to department stores, local shops, real estate dealers and financial institutions. He has worked on four Chicago newspapers in the editorial, circulation, auditing, mechanical and advertising departments. He began work on The Tribune as a Want Ad salesman 17 years ago. He is an expert not only on advertising, but also on retail merchandising.

W. J. MERRILL used to get his picture in The Tribune some fifteen years ago because of his prowess as an athlete at the University of Chicago. Now he fills The Tribune with National Advertising gathered from every part of the country by a staff of twenty-five salesmen. He came to The Tribune nine years ago to develop Merchandising Service to advertisers, having had previous experience cutting mahogany in Yucatan and with advertising agencies.

J. M. CLEARY has charge of the Business Survey which handles market research and promotion work for the advertising department, publishes The Tribune's house organs, and writes advertising to advertise The Tribune. He began working as a reporter for The Tribune in 1907 after graduating from the University of Illinois.

E. W. PARSONS came to The Tribune from Lewis Institute in 1905 and began selling want ads at a salary of $8 a week. In six years he was made advertising manager. He originated Merchandising Service as now rendered by newspapers to advertisers, and made The Tribune famous for strict censorship of advertising. He has built up the largest organization in the world maintained by any one newspaper to sell advertising. And he makes it pay.

W. E. MACFARLANE was put in charge of Tribune Want Ads in 1910 after three years in the Advertising Department. He has developed a force of 234 men and women who cover Chicago intensively by personal calls and by telephone. Hotel, Travel, Amusement and Educational are other divisions of advertising also sold under his supervision.

CLYDE BENHAM handles the motor truck and passenger car advertising that appears in The Tribune. He was put in charge of this work in 1914 after four years in the Want Ad and Display departments. He is a perambulating encyclopedia of facts about autos and those who make and sell them.

O. M. BRODFUEHRER has charge of the service given to Tribune advertisers in the preparation of copy. He came to The Tribune shortly after graduating from Northwestern University in 1912. He is assisted by two copy writers and nine artists.

Read The Tribune Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday,

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, as well as Sunday!

WHICH IS WHICH?—The Duncan sisters and the McCarthy sisters have many points of similarity. They look, vaguely, alike and they sing in somewhat the same fashion. The Duncans are in "Tip-Top" and the McCarthys in "The Greenwich Village Follies." Memory test: Which are the Duncans and which the McCarthys, and what are their first names?

REDUCE RIGHT!

Take FAT Off Only Where You NEED To

Dr. Lawton reduced from 211 to 157 pounds in a short period.

A worn, haggard appearance often follows reducing by strenuous exercising, starvation, taking drugs or weakening baths.

There's no need for that. With Dr. Lawton's Guaranteed Fat Reducer you can lose flesh where you need reduction. You don't have to reduce all over if you don't want to.

No diet pains. No deadened muscles. No stolen vigor. No worn nerves. All you have to do is simply apply the Reducer to fleshy parts of the body for 10 minutes night and morning.

The Reducer's vacuum cup holds the flesh and by gentle massage breaks down fatty tissue, which is then eliminated naturally from the system. This easy treatment works wonders. It has given normal, healthy figures back to thousands in its five years of successful use.

Start Losing in 11 Days or Your Money Back

Dr. Lawton's Reducer is positively guaranteed to eliminate fat. The price you pay for it will be refunded cheerfully if reduction isn't shown taking place within eleven days. That is the full trial period. Results usually are shown in four or five days.

Why not start losing unsightly, unhealthy fat at once with Dr. Lawton's GUARANTEED Fat Reducer? Send $5, plus 20c for postage and packing ($5.20 in all) TODAY and receive your Reducer by return mail in a plain wrapper. Nothing else to buy. Don't put it off. Write now.

Reduction wherever you need it.

What causes hangnails

LEFT to itself, the cuticle at the base of the nails will grow fast to the nail. As the nail pushes forward, the cuticle stretches until it can stretch no more. Then it splits—and you have a hangnail.

To prevent hangnails, therefore, you must constantly detach the cuticle from the nail, but this must be done without severing it in any way or you will have worse hangnails than if you let it alone.

This thin fold of scarf-skin is like the selvage edge of a piece of cloth. When it is cut or torn the whole nail rim gradually ravels out, just as cloth ravels when the selvage is cut. This is why you can never have smooth nail rims when you make a practice of cutting the cuticle.

Cutex Cuticle Remover will soften the cuticle, gently loosen it from the nail, and take off all hard, dry edges. If you will throw away your manicure scissors and begin to use Cutex regularly, you will never again have hangnails. Your very first trial will leave your nail rims smooth and even—however rough you may have made them by cutting.

Introductory Set—now only 15c

This very day send for the new Cutex Introductory Set and see what Cutex will do for even the worst treated cuticle. In it you will find samples of Cuticle Remover, the new Powder Polish, the new Liquid Polish, Cuticle Comfort, and emery board and orange stick. Enclose 15c and address Northam Warren, Dept. 177, 114 West 17th Street, New York.

What is it that saps your energy and shortens your period of youth?

Sleep uncertain—finicky appetite—easily tired out

These danger signals are now known to have one deep underlying cause

IT IS now well known that a run-down condition has many different symptoms—perhaps it is tooth trouble, or eye strain, or indigestion, or overfatigue. Whatever it is, it strikes you where you're weakest.

If we are full of health and vigor—with a temporary treatment we quickly recover from these minor troubles—we easily throw off the attack from the germs which are all around us.

But—if we are not in this buoyant condition we cannot resist minor ailments. We then fall off in health and perhaps pay heavily in later years by serious illness or even loss of life.

Scientists now know that the deep underlying cause of various ailments is often lack of one single element in food.

It is now generally acknowledged that the lack of one food factor—vitamine—is largely responsible for the lowered vitality of the many men and women who succumb to old age diseases before they are forty years old. Sixty thousand in this country alone pay this supreme penalty every year.

A familiar food with newly discovered qualities

Today thousands of men and women are getting this essential food factor by eating Fleischmann's Yeast. Fleischmann's Yeast richly supplies this needed factor, for yeast is its richest known source.

Fleischmann's Yeast is not a medicine—it is a food, assimilated like any other food. Only one precaution: If troubled with gas, dissolve the yeast first in very hot water. This does not affect the efficacy of the yeast.

Eat 2 to 3 cakes a day of Fleischmann's Yeast before or between meals. Have it on the table at home. Have it at your office and eat it at your desk. Ask for it at noontime at your lunch place. You will like its fresh distinctive flavor and the clean, wholesome taste it leaves in your mouth. Place a standing order for Fleischmann's Yeast with your grocer and get it fresh daily.

Fresh Yeast has received general attention from the public since recent scientific tests have proved that fresh yeast stimulates digestion, builds up the body tissues and keeps the body more resistant to disease. These original tests were all made with Fleischmann's Yeast. Beware of untested yeast-vitamine preparations that contain drugs or other mixtures. Fleischmann's Yeast (fresh) is a pure food, rich in vitamine, in which it measures up to the high standards set by laboratories and hospitals. The familiar tinfoil package with the yellow label is the only form in which Fleischmann's Yeast for Health is sold.

Eat Fleischmann's Yeast as a sandwich spread, dissolved in fruit juices, milk or water or just plain

Laxatives gradually replaced by this simple food

A noted specialist, in his latest book, says of fresh compressed yeast: "It should be much more frequently given in illness in which there is intestinal disturbance . . . " This is especially true in cases where the condition requires the constant use of laxatives.

Fleischmann's Yeast is a corrective food, always fresh, and better suited to the stomach and intestines than laxatives. It is a food—and cannot form a habit. In tested cases normal functions have been restored in from 3 days to 5 weeks.

Eat from 2 to 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast a day.

Skin disorders cleared up

Many physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast for impurities of the skin. It has yielded remarkable results. In one series of tests forty-one out of forty-two such cases were improved or cured, in some instances in a remarkably short time.

As Fleischmann's Yeast has a laxative action and as it acts very beneficially on all the digestive organs, it helps correct the basic causes of these common ailments—so often due to wrong eating.

Snow White and Rosy Red

Her beauty blooms triumphant over Time because she knows the secret of a healthy mouth.

Pyorrhea, which attacks youth's radiance as a grub destroys the budding rose, has passed her by.

Do you face your telltale mirror as fearlessly as she?

Four out of every five people who pass the fortieth milestone have Pyorrhea. Thousands younger are not immune.

Its danger signal is tender, bleeding gums. Quickly its deadly work is done, unless you halt it in its course.

The gums recede from the teeth. Germs attack the roots, seep through the system. Sickness follows, the teeth decay, loosen, drop out or must be pulled.

You can stop Pyorrhea abruptly in its course of havoc. At the first sign of warning, see your dentist for treatment.

Then go to your druggist, buy a tube of Forhan's For the Gums, and use it regularly.

Forhan's For the Gums is the scientific formula of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S.

It will prevent Pyorrhea—or check its progress, if used in time and used consistently.

Forhan's is a pleasant dentifrice that leaves the teeth white and clean, keeps the gums pink, firm and healthy.

Brush Your Teeth With Forhan's—How to Use It

Use it twice daily, year in and year out. Wet your brush in cold water, place a half-inch of the refreshing, healing paste on it, then brush your teeth up and down. Use a rolling motion to clean the crevices. Brush the grinding and back surfaces of the teeth. Massage your gums with your Forhan-coated brush—gently at first until the gums harden, then more vigorously. If the gums are very tender, massage with the finger, instead of the brush. If gum-shrinkage has already set in, use Forhan's according to directions, and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment. 35c and 60c, in the U. S. and Canada. At all druggists.

IN THE CASE OF BILL

by Josephine Daskam Bacon

The Brother Who Just Couldn't Settle Down Gives the Whole Family a Series of Shocks and Thrills

OF course it all depends upon what you think of the Family as an Institution. And I freely admit that the more you think about it the more confusing it gets. Take my sister's family, for instance. I don't see how a woman could consider her family more thoroughly or worry over it more efficiently than Clarissa does. And it is surely all the more credit to her because she has so many other objects and interests in life and so much more to worry about than the average woman.

You know my sister, of course—Clarissa Etheridge Elton. If you haven't read her novels and stories you have probably been to her plays, and if you are not familiar with either of these you probably know about her child-placing society. It's quite likely that in your own town at the present moment there are one or more children that have been adopted through the "Help a Home" society; well, my sister has done as much for the Help a Home by writing and speaking and organizing branches of it as any other one person.

I feel that I ought to mention these facts in the very beginning, out of fairness to Rissa, so that nobody will get the idea that she is one of those geniuses that neglects her family; how could she, feeling as she does about families? You can see that for yourself.

And there's no doubt in the world that Bill is and always was (and always will be, probably) a terrific problem. He is our brother, Rissa's and mine, and very much younger. He was a surprise to begin with—mother never expected him—and I suppose he got a little spoiled, maybe, on that account. I well remember trying to rock Bill to sleep when he had a sore throat once and I was so small I couldn't get him into my lap with all the blankets, too. It was me being rather small for my age and Bill being simply huge that made the trouble.

"He seems quite agile," said Rissa coldly, and I knew she was wishing she hadn't come. "It must be very difficult to pirouette like that and not break anything."

Nobody can blame Rissa for being a little impatient with Bill, and a little hard on him, sometimes. She's been so splendid about him and so generous to him and everything, that it is certainly rather trying to have him more trouble to her than her own three children put together. And he is; he certainly is.

You see Bill unfortunately seems to have inherited a lot of Rissa's brilliancy and fascinating ways without her common sense and managing ability, if you see what I mean.

"What's the good of his brains if he doesn't get anywhere with 'em?" she often asks me, and of course in a way she's right; what is the good of 'em?

I never had any brilliancy or any fascinating ways myself, and this makes it much easier for me, of course, as I've noticed for many years that both these things seem to get you in a lot of trouble. Always living with Rissa more or less, and seeing her through a great many difficulties (connected with different men, and the children, and her professional engagements and all the accounts of the Help a Home National Committee) I have necessarily got used to the artistic temperament, you see; and I don't mind admitting to you that sometimes when things have been at their most complicated (Clarry overdrawing her allowance at boarding school, for instance, and Penelope sneaking off to the moving pictures when we thought she was at dancing school, and little Sarlesy running an awful temperature and it was only a pound of milk chocolate he'd eaten), I don't mind, as I say, admitting that to have Rissa walking the floor tearing her hair at the imbecilities of the National Help a Home board and refusing to give a nice interview to the Theater Magazine man—with the photographer waiting in the hall and the drawing room all arranged for a simple domestic picture—I don't mind admitting, I have to repeat again, that I have sometimes felt that it would be almost just as well if there had never been anything like the artistic temperament in the world!

Having Rissa so well known has always made it hard for Bill in a way, too. He really writes very well himself and was an editor on the Harvard Lampoon, and I shall always feel that he might have been a real writer (though of course not so good as Rissa, probably, ever), except he was always too self-conscious about her, to do it very seriously, himself. And his acting was wonderful; I always thought he did the best girl's parts I ever saw a man do. But he would never do that, either, on account of Rissa's knowing so many theatrical people. Bill's awfully proud, you see.

It all started after that terrible love affair of his. Looking back, I can see that Rissa seemed to lose faith in Bill after that and not take much interest. I felt, myself, that we were lucky that she wasn't on the stage, or an adventuress, or something. Of course it was bad enough, her being married, but still in a way that was good, because Bill couldn't marry her then—and look at the people foolish young men marry!

I always thought that what made Rissa the most furious was the girl's being a Socialist and wearing glasses.

"It's so idiotic!" she said. "Just like Bill to go and make a fool of himself over a thin woman with spectacles!"

She had a baby, too, about two years old, and a very tiresome husband who didn't know how to manage her and played on the French horn to amuse himself—it really was annoying to have him make such a friend of Bill and not seem to care to try to do anything about it. He only seemed to want to be left alone to practice on that French horn.

It wasn't at all like a love affair in a book or a play; none of us knew how to go about it, exactly, because nobody was angry or tragic or made any scenes at all, except Rissa.

She made me go to see Mr. Witpen (that was his name) and try to get him to forbid Bill to come to the house, but I couldn't seem to accomplish anything, somehow.

"O, well," he would say, and after that "O, well . . ."

It really was very difficult.

Finally, when Bill was actually going to run away with her, Mr. Witpen seemed to wake up to it and settled the whole thing, after all, but how do you think he did it? Nobody would have dreamed of such a thing, and yet it was really very simple. He told Crystal (that was her name) that she must take the baby if she went, as he simply couldn't be responsible for her. It was a little girl, named Marigold. He was very firm about this, and of course Bill and Crystal hadn't planned to, the child being so young. Even Bill saw that they couldn't manage it, and then, while they were in the thick of it all, and I was getting notes to Suddenly there was a terrible clatter and the butler whirled entirely around and hurried away.

How MASTIN'S Yeast VITAMON Tablets Give New Health and Energy

Easy and Economical To Take—Results Quick

Every woman who has heard of the wondrous health and beauty-making power of vitamines in yeast, fresh vegetables and other raw foods will be glad to know of the amazing results being obtained from Mastin's VITAMON Tablets. These contain in highly concentrated form the three vitamines (Fat Soluble A and Water Soluble B and C) in an active state such as Nature originally provided them in fresh yeast and certain raw foods, and all of which are regarded as absolutely necessary for perfect health, vigor and proper physical development.

Mastin's VITAMON Tablets are now being used by thousands who appreciate their convenience, economy and quick results. Containing as they do all three vitamines, highly concentrated, Mastin's VITAMON Tablets are ideal for mixing with your daily food, as they supply all the needed vitamines which are so often lost in the cooking and preparation of many everyday foods, and which the body should have to make firm tissue, strong nerves, rich blood, clear skin and a keen, active brain.

Mastin's VITAMON Tablets do not upset the stomach—they are in no way distasteful and they also keep indefinitely. Under their influence pimples, boils and other skin eruptions seem to vanish as if by magic and the complexion becomes clear and beautiful. So remarkable are the benefits from these highly concentrated tablets that entire satisfaction is absolutely guaranteed or the small amount you pay for the trial will be promptly refunded. Be sure to remember the name—Mastin's VITAMON—the original and genuine yeast-vitamine tablet. There is nothing else like it, so do not accept imitations or substitutes. You can get Mastin's VITAMON Tablets at all good druggists.

The best way to satisfy yourself and prove exactly what MASTIN'S VITAMON Tablets will do for you is to make this simple test: First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Next, take MASTIN'S VITAMON—two tablets with every meal. Then weigh and measure yourself each week, and continue taking MASTIN'S VITAMON Tablets regularly until you are satisfied with your gain in weight and energy. It is not only a question of how much better you look and feel or what your friends say and think—the scales and tape measure will tell their own story.

If it isn't MASTIN'S it isn't VITAMON

come immediately, and Rissa was simply white as a sheet and perfectly speechless, which always worries me frightfully, Crystal finished the whole thing (though she never knew it) by calmly suggesting that Marigold should be placed for a while by the Help a Home till she was big enough not to be such a problem! I suppose it was being such a Socialist that made it seem so simple to her, but it shocked Bill terribly, though he never admitted it, and he told me that he had decided they were both too young to attempt to bring about such a big social reform and that, bad as the marriage laws were, people would have to be educated out of them gradually.

Of course it was a great relief, and I should have supposed Rissa would have been glad enough to let it go at that, but she never let Bill alone, from then on. She really almost nagged him, you might say. And of course he got rather sneering and made a point of being late at the office and kept hinting at oil stock he was going to buy, and teased Rissa generally. It got very unpleasant and I finally spoke to him about it.

"Why will you act this way, Bill?" I said. "You know as well as I do how sweet and reasonable Rissa always is if only you manage her a little. What is the use of exasperating her?"

"My dear Flops," he said, in that absurd man of the world way, "not having made the management of our celebrated sister a profession, as you have, I can't quite see why I should take it up now. She can't expect to have the entire population of the globe kotowing to her, you know."

"That's perfect nonsense and very unfair, Bill," I said, but he only sneered and put his hands in his pockets like John Drew.

"You know that Rissa only wants——"

"I know that she only wants her own way. She is the worst spoiled woman on this planet," he interrupted me.

"She certainly has a right to what she wants in her own house," I said, "and since you and I live here I should suppose that the least we could do——"

"Ah," he said, "now you've said it! Too many of us live here, I suppose you mean. Well I've felt that for some time and I agree with you that I'd better leave."

"Why, Bill, how can you say such a thing?" I said. "You know I never meant——"

"But I meant," he said, "and as a matter of fact I've already made arrangements, so there's no use of jawing about it, Flops."

"What other arrangements?" I asked. I was quite worried, for you never know, with Bill.

"I am going in with two of my friends, and we are going to have some rooms together."

"O," I said. "Have you—how are you—are you going to be able to——"

"O, by the way, Flops," he added, "can you lend me a few hundred to begin with and my share of the furnishing and so forth? I'm a little low just now."

Wasn't that exactly like Bill?

It just happened that I had only a few dollars in the bank myself. It was after Christmas and the children all get behind then, and Rissa is strict about their allowances, which is perfectly all right, of course, only it never works, so they borrow it from me and make it up when they can. And it seems very silly, seeing how well I know the Help a Home, but I had just been to a big meeting where Rissa spoke for it, and she got me so wrought up that I subscribed for six months of a probationary child before I knew what I was doing.

Well, I went to Rissa and simply said, "Can you lend me some money, dear?"

And she said, "Why, certainly, Florrie, just make it out with the other checks. You know how much we can stand this month—don't forget the school bills are coming, that's all."

That's just like Rissa. She'll give you the shoes off her feet if you need them. And never asks what for.

So I lent Bill two hundred and fifty, and as a matter of fact he always pays it back. Only he always says he'd rather borrow from me than Rissa, which is absurd, she being generosity itself. I offered to help him pick out some things for the new apartment, but he didn't want any help, he said, he had his own ideas. I was a little worried about that because it's not to be expected that three young men should make a really satisfactory interior, you know, but really, when I went there to tea with them I had to admit that they had done very well indeed. And they said it was all Bill's ideas, too. He'd been poking about at auctions and picked up some real bargains, surprisingly cheap.

Of course Rissa was furious. She thought he shouldn't have gone away and got quite angry with me because I said that after all he wasn't a baby, and young people had to decide those things for themselves. Sarles agreed with me.

"Let the boy go, Rissie," he said, "it may be the best thing for him."

Sarles is Rissa's husband—I don't know if I mentioned him before—and a very nice man. There's not much to say about him. He's quite a well known throat specialist and very fond of chess. He always got on very well with Bill, but he always admitted he was spoiled.

"If only he'd show some real bent for something—anything!" Rissa used to say. "I don't care what it is—if only he'd even had a hobby! Why, he never even collected stamps! He doesn't care for music, he doesn't go in for sports, he hates business; of course medicine and law are out of the question—how can a human being have so few interests?"

"He loves to fish," I would remind her.

"Fishing!" she would fling back at me, "fishing! He likes fishing, in my opinion, because it's the laziest sport there is! I believe he just lies in the boat and smokes!"

I often wondered myself just what Bill did at the office. He was in marine insurance and went into New York every day, but it never seemed to interest him at all. Rissa used to complain that he never talked about it at home.

"Talk about it?" he said, "what is there to talk about, sis? Did you want to insure the Phantom?"

The Phantom is our canoe, and the children all laughed and Rissa got rather vexed. There's no doubt Bill was difficult.

One reason I was glad that Bill left was that I was afraid he was getting a little too accustomed to having everything done for him. You see, after all, he only made thirty-five dollars a week, and although he always paid in fifteen of that every week, which was the most he could have afforded, still he wouldn't ordinarily have had the services of a butler for that, you know, and his clothes taken care of, and a lift into town nearly every day. And yet, as Rissa always said, why shouldn't he have all those things? With three able bodied men servants attached to the family, why should Bill press his own trousers? There really had to be three, you see: Houghton, the butler, and the two chauffeurs—Rissa's and Sarles'. Of course Sarles had to have one to get him to the hospital and his clinics and the calls he had to make. And if he was using Eldredge in town, how could Rissa get any good out of him in Oak Ridge? How could she ever go anywhere? So Joseph did most of the repairs and really looked after both cars, and Eldredge, who used to be a valet, took care of Sarles' clothes. And Bill's clothes weren't much more for him to do, and as a matter of fact, Eldredge adored Bill and would rather fuss over him than Sarles. Bill did him more credit, he said. But all the servants adored Bill. He was ever so much loftier with them than Sarles was and I must say they seemed to like it. Bill teased Houghton dreadfully and Houghton only blushed and laughed and said:

"'Certingly, Mr. William, certingly, sir. 'Ow you do go on, sir!"

Bill was always joking him about the money he made. You see Houghton had a great deal of spare time, like all butlers, and he was always improving it. As Rissa used to say, if only Bill could use his odd minutes as Houghton did, she'd have more respect for him!

"Odd minutes!" Bill would reply, "heavens above, Riss, all that man's minutes are odd! He's a joke. The heaviest job he has is to look like a butler. I'll admit he does that to the queen's taste. But if he ever had to do any real work he'd die of surprise."

"He's a very efficient man. You have no idea what you're talking about, as usual, Bill," Rissa would say. Then they would go at it and argue for minutes together.

One day at the shore Bill came up to my room with a sheet of typewriter paper in his hand. He was grinning from ear to ear, and quite pleased with himself I could see.

"Look here, Flops," he said, "I think I may say I've got this question of Houghton's time pretty well settled. I made a point of keeping tabs on him all day yesterday, and here's the result. Now perhaps I'm wrong!"

The ridiculous boy had a regular timetable of what Houghton had done all day and really it was rather amusing.

"In the morning," said Bill, "he got up at seven thirty, had his breakfast at eight, waited at ours, at eight forty-five poked about a bit in that pantry of his, answered the phone six times, made a bluff at arranging those flowers you brought in, and rowed Annie for upsetting his glass or something, and rowed Jessie for not dusting his bedroom, and rowed Asa Dodd for mislaying the row locks on his boat. That took all the morning. Then he waited at lunch. Then he had his precious 'time off.'"

"Well, Bill, you know we're always very particular about their time off at the shore," I reminded him.

"Gosh, yes, I know it," he said. "I sat in the apple tree and watched 'em going down to their dock for their swim. I nearly died."

It was rather funny. First Marietta the cook waddles down in an immense bathrobe, then Joseph (if he's free) and his two children, then Jessie (she's a beautiful swimmer and our guests often watch her diving with field glasses), then Annie in a scarlet suit and cap; then the kitchen maid, who is awfully pretty, and Mrs. Joseph is jealous of her, unfortunately; then Asa, the odd-job man. Eldredge's daughter is with me in the summer, so she goes in with them, too. Then last of all Houghton strides along, looking perfectly magnificent in his jersey and trunks. He is a very powerful swimmer and has two life saving medals he won in England. He gets into his boat and takes one or two of the girls and rows out like a varsity crew man beyond Dead Man's Reef and fishes there before he swims.

"Well," Bill went on, "after his majesty had his row and his swim he came back and changed, and then he sat in his shirt sleeves and made lace until tea time. Two telephone calls and one ring at the front bell. Then tea. He hustled you through with that double quick and got Nellie to set his dinner table, because he was late with a lace order that had to go off parcel post insured last night. After dinner he read one of Rissa's stories to Nellie and Marietta and he brought Sarles' Scotch and soda at ten. He's a bird, he is."

"Why, Bill," I said (I couldn't help laughing), how did you see all this? Did you——"

"O, I snooped about and Sherlocked around. I can usually manage when I have to, Flopsy," he said.

It is rather funny about Houghton's lace work. To see him with his tiny bobbins and hundreds of fine linen threads, sticking pins into a cushion with those big, broad tipped fingers of his, is quite a shock till you're used to it. His mother made and repaired lace in England and taught all her children—there were eleven of them—how to do it. And Houghton took it up for a sort of a wager, to prove that he could, you see, and Rissa heard of it and bought it—it was a lovely pattern, like a Spanish Rose Point, a sort of mixture, the best he could remember. And then some of our guests ordered some, and soon he got all he could do. He has a book of patterns under the silver cleaning drawer, and some of the people who come to the house always remember him and bring him new ones.

"You don't seem ever to remember, Bill, that if Houghton wasn't ready in the afternoons he'd be of no use," I told him. "Suppose he was cleaning the floor or polishing the door knobs, and a lot of people came to call? That's what a butler is for."

"So I understand," he said. "But if Sarles had any sense he'd take Houghton's job and send Houghton over to his office; then he'd get time to write those histories of his cases he's always jawing about!"

"Don't be absurd, Bill," I said, though I had to laugh.

"Absurd!" he answered, "don't fool yourself, Flops, my dear, it's not absurd at all. It's plain common sense. Why, see here, how much does he get?"

"Servants are terrible, Bill, nowadays. He gets a hundred. We had to raise him this summer. He's wonderful about sorting out strangers and reporters."

"A hundred! Gosh! And his board and clothes! Why, I don't make that!"

"Well, of course, you aren't a butler. You have to remember that. Would you like to wait on the table?" I asked.

"Humph!" was all he said, and walked out reading his ridiculous timetable.

Of course after Bill took his rooms in town we saw much less of him, as was to be expected. He came out pretty regularly on Sundays, though, and one day he sent us all into fits of laughter telling us how Houghton, on his afternoon off, came over to see him and made quite a call. Houghton was much interested in the little apartment and cleaned all the silver for them and showed them how to arrange the pantry more conveniently, and gave the woman who managed for them a regular lesson in cooking and serving at once. He told them how he began as knife boy in a big English house where his sister was what they called a "tweeny," and how he worked up to a second man and finally to butler—a complete history of buttling, Bill said. He showed them his English references from Lady Somebody or other. He made a number of different drinks for them, too, and gave a regular lecture on how to serve them. Bill said that he and George Hanksworth learned a lot that day! Bill said that it was wonderful, the way Houghton was paying a visit and at the same time never overstepping his position by a centimeter.

"And we tried to make him, too," said Bill.

"I don't doubt you did," Rissa answered, rather snippily, "but one of you, at least, had a sense of propriety!"

They hadn't been in that apartment three months before the crazy things sublet it and moved to another—an unfurnished one—and furnished it all over again! I say they were crazy, but really, when you come to think of it, they weren't exactly, because they got such a big rental for it that they bought all the things for the new one and still had a lot left! George Hanksworth's uncle liked the rooms so much that he took them for the rest of the year. And George and the other boy said it was all owing to Bill's cleverness in furnishing it, and insisted on his taking most of the money. He speculated with it, I'm sorry to say, and made four hundred dollars, and paid me the two hundred and fifty I'd borrowed from Rissa. He also gave me a lovely dark blue morocco handbag.

Of course this was perfectly sweet of him and I simply loved it, but all the same I was worried a little. You see, whenever Bill gives me a nice present like that, I can't help wondering what he's going to do next!

So when we learned that they had sublet this new apartment, after two weeks, for more money than the first one, even, and that Bill was dragging them on to a third, and keeping away from the office to buy bargains for it, I thought that this was why I got my bag, naturally. Little did I guess!

Even Sarles got a little worried over this.

"If the two sub-tenants skip off and leave those boys with two leases on their hands, there'll be a nice mess," he said. And that was quite a criticizing sort of thing, for Sarles.

Bill came up for Sunday, and I thought he seemed very nervous and inattentive, even for him. Every time the telephone rang he'd jump up and go to it, and if Houghton got there before him, he'd wait about while Houghton was talking and say:

"Who is it? Who is it? Do they want to see me?"

"Do you expect a call, Bill?" I asked finally, and he grinned rather sheepishly and said, "Well, yes, Flops, as it happens, I rather do."

So, of course, I guessed that it was a girl, and that Bill was in love again. I did hope she wasn't married.

At last Houghton came up to Bill.

"A lady for you, sir," he said, looking a little puzzled. "I couldn't get the name, sir, unless it might be Blair?"

"Oh, yes, yes, that's it," said Bill, and jumped off.

"It was in the matter of a ——"

"Yes, yes, that's all right. I know, I know," Bill interrupted, and ran into the little telephone room.

"Beg pardon, Mr. William, but that receiver's out of order—I've put you on in the libr'y," said Houghton.

"Oh, fudge!" said Bill.

He was plainly very much embarrassed, and I couldn't help feeling that this must be the real thing, this time, because Bill was never embarrassed about a girl before. I've heard him talk to one on the telephone and "jolly another one," as he calls it, right in the room, at the same time!

"Yes," we heard him say (Sarles and I were in the morning room), "this is Mr. Etheridge, yes, indeed, Miss Blair . . . yes, she asked me to take it up with you . . . oh, immensely busy, of course, yes . . . anything we can do to take things off her, as you say.

"Oh—a long time, yes—several years. Absolutely . . . not a fault, so far as we know. . . . Of course we are, terribly sorry, but what's the use? The city, you know! Oh, no, we've made other arrangements. Any time that suits you. Not at all. Good bye!"

He turned away from the telephone, looking very relieved and happy.

"There!" he said, "that's done!"

"For heaven's sake, Bill, what deviltry are you up to now?" Sarles asked.

"Rissa's upstairs, you know, if anybody wanted her," I put in.

"Deviltry!" said Bill, "how little you know me, Dr. Elton! As a matter of fact, I've just arranged one of the most sensible, practical, really useful things I ever did in my life."

"Of course, that's saying a great deal," said and a suit of armor on the landing, into a simply enormous drawing room all full of gold furniture. Rissa kept saying:

"For heaven's sake!" under her breath, and glancing at me, but I couldn't answer of you," Mrs. Plympton gasped, and Rissa gasped, too.

"I am, of course, deeply grateful for his commendation," she began, but Mrs. Plympton kept on.

MILK — By Henry B. Fuller

THE Haviland twins are now sturdy girls who are going on five, and who can eat and drink almost anything. Their capacity is the surprise—and concern—of their father, a "literary man" of limited means, who has other mouths, both older and younger, to feed. There are brothers and sisters, including a boy of two, who is but a little beyond the point where his sisters were when their daily regimen became such an acute concern for father and mother alike.

The twins, at his age, subsisted principally on milk. Well, milk is a common, well known beverage and usually easy to come by. At five in the morning a man clatters up the black stairs in the court of your apartment building and leaves a bottle or two by your kitchen door. The milk is fresh and sweet and cold—especially cold—and there is nothing more to do or say about it except to drink it and pay the bill at the end of the month.

The coldness presupposes ice, somewhere, and ice is as easily come by as milk in the city. It is rarely that either fails. We all recall the indignation roused when the milk dealers decided to make but one delivery a day, at about nine or ten in the forenoon; and we remember the more than indignation when the icemen, on top of that, indulged in their last strike. It is commonly in midsummer that such things occur, and then the press rages over the suffering and fatalities among the tenement babies. Well, the milkmen and the icemen, after a few days devoted to baseball in the public parks, were brought to reason and restored to the human race.

Thus for the town. Now for the country. There really are districts, for city folk at least, where milk is hard to get and ice almost impossible. Every June, when the Havilands were preparing for their three months in the more primitive parts of Michigan, such considerations came unescapably uppermost. Not all of Michigan is primitive, of course—witness Grand Rapids and Ann Arbor and Battle Creek and sumptuous Charlevoix, and the various highways flooded with Detroit cars. But the Havilands couldn't afford civilization in the summer time; besides, they didn't want it. "Give us the wild and the remote," they said, "Nature with her hair still in a tangle. We must have a place where we can wear out our old clothes and brace ourselves for the coming round in October."

The Havilands usually reached their cottage—or shack—about the middle of June; and the summer heats, which would assert themselves whenever the wind was southwest, arrived about the first of July. Of course, there were bracing, tonic, roaring days from the northward; but the Havilands, to whom boat and railway fares for seven or eight were a consideration, really got only within the mere penumbra of northern coolness, and weather noticeably warm might last for a week. Their part of Michigan was sand—even the most productive parts of the state do not escape the sand ingredient altogether, and sand can add appreciably to the heat.

They were miles from anything, even at the end of so restricted a flight. They did without a doctor, for Dora Haviland, familiarized with colds and temperature, was almost a doctor herself. And they did without meat—except an occasional chicken. And vegetables—well, they could be got by foraging among the farmers, even if these were sometimes reluctant. But the one great question remained: "Can Mrs. Billman give us milk,"

Mrs. Billman had somehow contrived to provide milk for the twins during their first summer and was now looked to for the same service during their second. Mrs. Billman, personally, was almost a myth. Some of the Havilands had never seen her but once or twice and more of them had never seen her at all. They saw instead her husband. Jacob Billman was a shabby, unkempt little creature, but simple, good natured, and faithful. He had never had anything to speak of in his life, and he was never to have anything to speak of; yet he gave out, now and then, gleams of hopefulness and even of contentment. What we don't know we don't miss. Jacob Billman knew nothing of life and the world outside Hayward county. Possibly he thought that everything which ought to come his way was coming, poor fellow. Is it wrong to pause for a moment in pity?

The Billmans lived on the top of a bare hill. It was less a hill, however, than a promontory which was on its way to face the great lake with a sloping yellow bluff not without a greatness of its own. The Billmans' farm was up some five hundred feet in the air and lay just on the line where the soil was giving up being soil and was beginning frankly to acknowledge itself as mere sand. You could cultivate things on it; O, yes, you could. But heavens! Such wheat, such beans, such cabbages! How much work they took and how little support they gave! A sort of sandy road ran within a quarter of a mile of the house, and at rare intervals one of the Detroit motors was seen—and heard—as it crushed its way through, wondering why it had ever tried and wishing it hadn't. This road, save for the wide, uninterrupted view, was Sarah Billman's one link with the outside world. And this road she used but by proxy.

The house and its yard—how find the heart to dwell upon them? A brown, weather-beaten, shadeless shell, whose curtainless windows stared out on a foot trodden acre or two littered with the rusting implements of an unsuccessful husbandry. There was a barn, even more run down than the house. There was a neglected, decaying windmill—what could have been expected from a windmill atop a sandy hill? Somewhat lower down there was a well. A few chickens commonly walked round it sadly, and sometimes two or three shabby, shockheaded children played there with a despondent dog. Farther off, a few cows. Yes, real cows, and by some miracle they gave good milk, and the Billmans delivered it unadulterated to the country below. At least it was usually good when Jacob Billman started out with it.

The amenities were acknowledged through one bed of portulacas—most futile and impracticable of flowers.

The remaining amenities were more distant. Beyond a fold in the hill one saw the tops of trees, and above the trees was the wide expanse of the lake, with a horizon vague or sharp, as the weather determined. And out on the lake a small, stubby steamer was sometimes seen, shopping along the shore.

But Sarah Billman cared nothing for the water, the landscape, the marine traffic. She would have been puzzled, in particular, to trace any possible relation between herself and the steamer. She saw little, in fact, beyond her milk house. This was but a flimsy, woeful shed, with a few benches and shelves. Ice she never saw the whole summer through. Some farmers in such circumstances manage to do something with concrete pools and inside pumps. But Sarah Billman's inventiveness never went beyond a few buckets and some scraps of disused blankets. To keep the milk sweet and to get it delivered so—this was her sole concern for four months in the year. This was her summer connection with the world. For the rest of the year she had no connection at all.

"I suppose you and your wife will be going to the county fair this week?" said Mrs. Haviland suggestively one hot August forenoon at her back door.

"Don't believe so," replied Billman. "We're pretty busy at home. And fifteen miles is a long ways. Besides, we ain't exactly city people."

Muskotee, the county seat, boasted twelve thousand people. Billman had been there once in his life—about the mortgage. He had been city shy then and he remained no less so since.

Mrs. Haviland cut short her flight of fancy. She also sacrificed a bolder flight—one that carried Sarah Billman with her across the lake to a city indeed. But she saw without aid the poor creature's panicky stare and her awkward attempts to ward off any such sensational venture. "I ain't got nothin' to wear. . . . I wouldn't know how to behave . . . I couldn't leave the children—and the cows . . ." Yes, she saw and heard the whole defense.

It is quite possible that Billman this summer might not have come their way at all if a sort of hotel had not been opened in the Havilands' neighborhood. To get to their house from the hotel meant only a scant mile more. But what a mile! Sandy and shadeless, and the poor little old mare, already tired, forced to work her way through sandier sand than ever. No way to hurry, no use in trying to hurry—just slog, slog, slog through the deep, dry tracks, the August sun burning down, and the water soaked scraps of blanket doing what they could to keep the milk sweet a few moments longer.

"A hot day," said Billman, wiping his brow.

"It is, indeed," said Mrs. Haviland, preparing to lower the pail down the deep shaft under the kitchen floor. "How is your wife doing?" she continued.

"She's anxious. These long, hot trips. . ."

It was little to do the milking itself, among flies and swishing tails, little to lug the heavy buckets across the littered farm-yard, little to keep an eye on fretful and ailing cattle; but it was everything to devise means for combating the summer heats during those long, slow trips through the heavy sand.

"She's tried 'most everything," said Billman, resigning all claims to any inventiveness of his own, and willing to believe his wife a paragon of ingenuity.

Mrs. Haviland sighed. Conditions were indeed untoward, but some method, it should seem, might be arranged.

"The milk usually gets here in good condition," she said kindly.

"Yes, God knows she tries," declares Billman. "I hear there's some new cottages going up on the point," he added, as a bit of civil, neighborly gossip.

"More houses for you," she suggested.

"I dunno, I dunno," he returned. "We're doing just about all we can with what we've got."

His tone struck a new note in the theme of general destitution; it showed a complete lack of apparatus, mental and material.

Yes, there was new building; the county, during the last few years, had begun to fill up—even their own part of it, hitherto not greatly favored. The county authorities had become aware of the general movement, and their appreciation of it was showing in the annual tax bills. For the first year at Summer Rest taxes had been hardly more than nominal; Haviland had laughed at the ludicrous figures on sending his check, with full pomp, to the Hayward county treasurer. Lately the amount had shown a disposition to increase, and he had bestirred himself to ask why. First a bridge, then a school, and now a new wing for the insane asylum.

"Well, well," he observed, "Why that, I wonder? The population remains about the same hereabouts, and seems pretty normal, too. Where is the institution, anyway?"

He learned that it was twenty-five miles away, on the other side of the county. He learned later that the proportion of farmers' wives among the inmates was unduly large.

"I've met that point before," he mused. "Might write something about it, perhaps."

"I'm afraid it's commonplace," said his wife uneasily. "Perhaps things are better now, with the telephone and the movies. We might go up to the farm some time," she added.

"Four miles!" he objected. "What conveyance?"

"Walking would be easier and quicker than driving."

"U'm," he replied.

Within a day or two they walked up. Walking was a suitable and inexpensive amusement, and they might walk in one direction as well as another. There were wild flowers on the way, and perhaps a few belated blackberries. And the view from the top must be quite glorious.

Yes, the view was glorious. The hills rolled, the lake glittered, the sun shone, the breezes blew, and the white cloud masses sailed along with them. Sarah Billman met them in her kitchen door with a shy reluctance—a spare figure in a spare dress, and anxiety of several sorts in her tired brown eyes. They praised her view, looking at it industriously. She seemed to prefer that they should see as much of her view as possible and as little of herself. And she was glad when their attention went to a freckled, barefooted little boy and to a strapping 15 year old girl called Rosey.

"I hope the milk is getting to you all right. Some of these hot days—" She paused. The problem almost stated itself.

"O, mother!" said Rosey. There seemed no escape from the subject.

"Usually, yes," replied Mrs. Haviland. She would not gloze the fact that once or twice it had not got to her all right. There was last Thursday, for example, when Alice and Daisy had made a rather painful scene.

At the door of the milkshed the word ice came to mention. Sarah Billman spoke not, but looked at her visitors as if a descent of the Angel Gabriel would be easier and likelier. "She might have suggested Charlevoix for us!" said Haviland afterward, contritely.

"M' wife is a little tired today," Billman put in presently. "Up all night with a sick cow. Lost her cud. But she"—he threw out his thumb toward Sarah—"got it back. Without a vet," he added proudly. "Pretty far to come, when they will come; and pretty high, too. Well, we didn't need him," Billman concluded complacently.

His wife had little to add to his account of her feat, and little to present on any topic. When the visitors left she picked a few of the inept portulacas and offered them to Dora Haviland.

"Not much to say for herself," observed Haviland on the way down. "But no longer a myth. Not tired, are you?"

"I don't feel that I have the right to let anything make me tired—now," she returned.

They did not realize that their visit was the one event of Sarah Billman's year. What they said, what they wore, how they acted—all these things nourished Sarah's mind through the fall and the long, dragging winter and helped to keep her sane for several months more.

During the last week in September the Havilands laid away their porch screens, dismantled their pump, battened down their doors, and returned to town and its interests. Haviland dropped any possible investigation into the figures for insanity among farmers' wives and went back to his comments on matters of current interest. They thought little of Summer Rest beyond wondering whether the chimney was still standing and speculating as to how thick the snow might be lying on the porch, until the following May. They began the regular plannings for June. Alice and Daisy were now beyond the milk zone, but there was a little Robert, aged 7 months, who would chance his first summer in the wilderness.

Last year's new hotel had just opened, and the Havilands were obliged to fall back on it for a few favors in starting up their own ménage. A dozen guests were sitting on its porch or strolling aimlessly, as if too early come, over the varnished floor of its ballroom. There was little for them to do, and there were few faces for them to see. The Havilands found it easy to have speech with some of them.

Of course, there are always grievances at every summer hotel, and this season's first grievance had appeared early. A large, plump blonde lady, with two interesting children of 6 and 8, related to the Havilands protestingly how, only yesterday afternoon, some country woman—perhaps a farmer's wife—had strolled about the porches, looking rather wild, and mumbling and crooning softly to herself. "'No danger,' I was told; but really I haven't brought my children here for anything like that. I spoke to the proprietor, and he said: 'No danger'; but really I haven't brought my children——"

Mrs. Haviland gave a start and thought of little Robert. She looked toward her husband, but nothing was said.

"No danger," but possibly a poor creature was now on the track of the children she had served yet never seen.

The next forenoon Jacob Billman brought the first milk. The same rickety cart, the same tired but persevering old mare, even some of last season's familiar blankets.

"Quite a nice, cool day," he said pleasantly, by way of welcome.

"How is your wife?" asked Dora Haviland, in trepidation.

Billman paused. "Well, you know, she isn't just quite right in her mind. Went wrong last month. Thinking of the milk again, maybe. Or perhaps not enough company during the winter. Or——"

He went on, objective, reconciled. Things had turned out so; that was all.

"And what——?"

"Well, I'm waiting for a few days. The new wing is finished, over at Otsaukee, and if I can find time next week—they say it is a real pleasant place."

Dora Haviland was ashamed of her coming question, but it had to be put.

"And the milk will——?" For there was little Robert.

"O, that will be all right, I guess. There's Rosey. She's 16 now. She's got a young man," Billman went on with a modest, appealing half-grin; "but I tell her this is no time to be leaving us. She'll stay and look after you. We're getting up a new kind of cooler, and I don't think you need fear."

"Of course, that's saying a great deal," said Sarles, in that funny dry way he has.

Bill grinned.

"You sounded as if you were giving a reference for a waitress, or something," said I.

"I think he's selling a dog for somebody on a commisison basis," said Sarles.

Then Bill sat down on the floor and laughed till he choked. We had to laugh, too, he kept it up so.

"You are the two funniest people on the face of the earth, you old idiots," he managed to say, at last. "You ought to be in the Secret Service and wear tin badges!"

I shall always remember the queer, settled sort of look that came over Rissa's face when she got his note, a day or two after that visit. It was a very worrying little note. He wrote in the airiest possible way that he'd left the Marine Insurance for good, as he never had liked it, really, and never got enough time to himself, there! He had enough money to live on for a while, he said, and meanwhile he'd look about with a view to going into something entirely different, ultimately.

"Don't be alarmed, Flops," he ended, "it's nothing to do with a girl!"

He also said he'd look in on Sarles from time to time, to reassure us all.

"Very well," said Rissa quietly; "that's enough. I'm through."

Of course, I knew she didn't mean it, but she looked awfully settled.

"I don't think I'd let it upset me, Flossie," Sarles said very calmly, "the boy's twenty-seven, you know. I was a married man at his age."

But, of course, Sarles was different.

I slipped up to the new apartment, a few days later, and took them some rhubarb jam and some nut-cakes. George Hanksworth was there, and he didn't seem at all perturbed about Bill. He admitted to me that he hadn't the remotest idea what he was doing, but that he had no doubt it was all right.

I couldn't make out whether Bill was actually living there, but all his things were there. Even the clothes in his bureau drawers.

Sarles called up the Marine Insurance and they told him that Bill, though a young man of undoubted ability, had not seemed for some time to be noticeably adapted to office routine of their particular kind.

"Nor to routine of any kind," Rissa said, and put her lips together very tightly. When she does that she looks almost her real age, though usually much younger.

Bill asked me to tea with him at the Ritz one day the next week, and looked very well and happy, though rather mysterious and excited, I thought. Hardly had we got seated before he jumped up and said the table was tippy and he wanted another one. I hadn't noticed it, and it's usually quite enough to put a bit of paper under the leg, anyway, but he insisted upon going over into a corner, absolutely under the orchestra. He turned his back squarely on the room—you would have almost thought he didn't want to be seen. Only that isn't at all like Bill, and even if it was so, why go to the Ritz?

But there was no good asking him anything: I knew Bill when he was in that state of mind. You've just got to take him on his own terms. So I did (which Rissa said was disgraceful) and we had the most delicious almond pastry, and Bill was very nice about my hat.

After that I determined not to worry.

Goodness knows how long it might not have gone on if it hadn't been for the "Help a Home." They had just formed a new upper West Side Manhattan local committee, and Rissa went up and made a big speech in the ballroom of one of the big hotels there. The chairman was a Mrs. Plympton, a very rich woman indeed, and the National Board was much thrilled, and when she asked if some one from Headquarters could come up and talk with her personally about the work they asked Rissa if she would go, since, after all, it was her speech that had got the woman so interested. Of course Rissa agreed immediately, and I went with her.

Mrs. Plympton lived in an enormous white stone house on the Riverside Drive. There was a great stone hall all full of red velvet and palms and a large marble statue and a tall footman. We went up a wide marble staircase with rugs hanging over the rail and a suit of armor on the landing, into a simply enormous drawing room all full of gold furniture. Rissa kept saying:

"For heaven's sake!" under her breath, and glancing at me, but I couldn't answer anything because I was so busy trying not to fall over the head of the polar bear rugs, which always make me frightfully nervous. By and by Mrs. Plympton sailed in, in a beautiful but rather elaborate dress, wearing a great many pearls and diamonds, but really a very kind, good sort of woman, all the same.

"O, I am so pleased to meet you—for so many reasons!" she burst out, and Rissa smiled very sweetly and thanked her very easily; she is so accustomed to that sort of thing, you see, it means nothing to her. I should be embarrassed to death, I know.

"You have given us all so many beautiful and interesting things, Mrs. Elton, but your last gift, though only we have the benefit, is such a treasure to us!" the lady gushed on.

Rissa looked a bit bored, but I was really puzzled—I thought maybe Mrs. Plympton had adopted a baby through the Help a Home.

"I can't thank you enough—O here is my daughter," she went on. "Marjory, this is Mrs. Elton—Mrs. Clarissa Etheridge Elton, you know."

Such a lovely girl came in, with chocolate brown hair and beautiful, clear brown eyes and a very high color, like an English girl.

"Shame on you, Miss Blair, for knowing your place no better than you d ! Get out of this pantry!"

"She is going to tell us all about those dear, poor little babies," said Mrs. Plympton; "my daughter Marjory, Mrs. Elton, Miss Etheridge. Is the tea coming, dearest?"

"Yes, mother, he—it's just here," said the girl, and I saw the butler, myself, far down the room, stepping carefully over the polar bears, just as I had done. Indeed he was trying to peer over his large silver tray, to see them. I turned away my face, so as not to smile, and suddenly there was a terrible clatter and clashing, and the butler whirled entirely around and hurried back again as fast as he could go!

"Why, what is that?" said Mrs. Plympton, looking nervously around. Her daughter stared and half got up and then sat back again.

"I—I don't know, mother," she said. She looked worried, I thought.

"He seems quite agile," said Rissa coldly, and I knew she was wishing she hadn't come, "it must be very difficult to pirouette like that and not break anything!"

"He never did it before," said Mrs. Plympton, staring at us. "Do you suppose it could have been the shock of seeing you?"

"Th—the shock of seeing me?" Rissa repeated, sitting up about a foot higher in her golden chair and looking rather terrible. "My dear Mrs. Plympton, what can you mean? Butlers have withstood the shock before, at any rate."

"Oh, no, mother doesn't mean . . . she means . . ." poor Marjory tried to explain.

"I ought to have told him you were coming," Mrs. Plympton went on very mournfully, "but, to tell the truth, I thought he would be so pleased——"

"Pleased! Pleased!" Rissa repeated, flashing an awful glance at me. (I knew she would say, "Why did you bring me to this mad house?" the minute we got into the car.)

"Yes. He always speaks so beautifully of you," Mrs. Plympton gasped, and Rissa gasped, too.

"I am, of course, deeply grateful for his commendation," she began, but Mrs. Plympton kept on.

"And I'm sure he would be pleased, really."

"He takes an extraordinary method of displaying it, to say the least," said Rissa. "I think, Florence, we must——"

"Oh, don't go!" cried Marjory, "the tea is here, now—please don't go, Mrs. Elton!"

A very pretty parlor maid with yellow hair came hurrying over the polar bears, which she managed very cleverly, and put down the tray on a golden table with twisty legs. She was breathing fast, but otherwise calm.

"Ah, now we shall feel better," said Mrs. Plympton. "May I give you cream or do you take lemon, dear Mrs. Elton?"

"I take it clear, thanks," said Rissa.

"Marjory darling, pass the muffins to Mrs. Elton. Ettie, what is the matter with——"

"He had a turn, Mrs. Plympton, a bad one. He is very sorry, but it's passing off," said the girl, with a queer, quick glance at Marjory.

"Oh, mother, perhaps I'd better——" Marjory looked quite concerned and got up again.

"Nonsense, sit still," said her mother. "Did he have them with you, Mrs. Elton, ever?"

Rissa put her cup down very decidedly.

"My dear Mrs. Plympton," she began, as cold as ice and sharp as a razor, "I cannot imagine what you can possible mean. I never, naturally, saw your butler before, and his constitution is entirely a mystery to me!"

"You never saw Houghton before?" cried Mrs. Plympton and Marjory, staring at us curiously. "Why, Mrs. Elton, how can you say such a thing, when you sent him to us, and I have seen your references—yours and Lady What's-her-name's!"

"Houghton?" said Rissa, "Houghton?"

"Certainly, Houghton. Your old butler, Houghton," said Mrs. Plympton firmly. "You admit that he left you, I suppose?"

Rissa turned and glared at me.

"Unless he has left since he waited on us at luncheon, I can hardly admit it and retain my reason," she answered.

"But we've had him a month!" wailed Mrs. Plympton.

We all looked at each other.

"I am afraid some one has been dec]ving you, Mrs. Plympton," Rissa said, chilly, but very polite. "These things do happen, unfortunately——"

"Mother! I must go!" cried Marjory suddenly, and she jumped up and hurried down the room.

"My dear," her mother began, but the parlor maid dropped the little tray that I had noticed was shaking in her hand, and stamped her foot.

"Indeed, your dear is not the only one that's been deceived in this house!" she burst out, and dashed off after Marjory and passed her at the door.

Poor Mrs. Plympton was utterly stunned.

"Why, why, this is terrible!" she murmured. "I don't know what you'll think of us, Mrs.——"

Just them we heard a loud, angry scream that quite echoed through the house. We all jumped and Rissa got up and walked straight out, past our hostess.

"I think our little talk had better take place under more favorable circumstances, at some later date, Mrs. Plympton," she said. "Come, Florence," and I came.

Unfortunately, in order to avoid the bears (though Rissa stalked grandly, right through them) I turned off to the right and went down the wrong red stairs. I pushed nervously at a dark red baize door and tumbled into a big, beautiful pantry. The butler was sitting all bent over in a chair, with Marjory leaning over him, and the parlor maid trying to drag her away.

"Houghton! Houghton! What does it all mean?" Marjory was saying, half sobbing, and the maid screamed out:

"Shame on you, Miss Blair, for knowing your place no better than you do! Get out of this pantry!"

In her excitement she slapped Marjory's arm, and the girl turned on her, caught both her wrists and shook her like a doll. She began to cry and scream, and the butler turned around—and it was Bill!

"Oh! B——" I cried, but I never got it out. His look stopped me. Even in my fright and confusion I realized that he looked just like Rissa. It was one of her terrible, lightning looks, and my voice stuck in my throat.

"Get out. Get out," he said, very low. "I'll see you tomorrow. Get out, for God's sake!"

I turned right around and started for the door, and as I turned I heard him say very sharply:

"Ettie! Shut up! Go out of here, you little fool."

I turned back as I pushed through the baize door, and I saw him looking at Marjory, and I felt very queer suddenly at something I saw in his eyes. I realized all at once that Bill was a man.

"Marjory," he said, "listen to me . . ."

I stumbled up the stairs and when I got to the drawing room door I glanced in, not thinking, really.

There sat poor Mrs. Plympton in the big gold chair, just as we had left her, with her mouth open like a scared pink and white rabbit, and all her pearls and diamonds shining!

I plunged into the car and Rissa was waiting, perfectly furious.

"Another moment, and I should have sent the police into that mad house!" she said. "Home, Joseph."

Bill turned up the next day. We thought he would be quite chastened and ashamed, but he wasn't at all. He told us all about it. He said it dawned on him when he made that time-table about Houghton that there was the only job where he'd get any leisure. He wanted time to plan out furnishing apartments, he said, like Houghton's lace making, and he thought it would be a lark, anyway. So he borrowed the English reference and wrote one from Rissa and went about till he found a new rich person who didn't know much about butlers, and then he simply did everything just as he liked. Mrs. Plympton had married again and Marjory's father had been quite different, though poor.

She had fallen head over heels in love with Bill, though she didn't know it, and when the crash came, he realized that he was in love with her, too. And he was. He never looked that way at Mrs. Witpen.

And so all Rissa's plans for disciplining him simply went for nothing, because Mr. Plympton thought it was a rich joke and gave Marjory a million immediately and told Rissa that she might write plays, but Bill acted 'em! He has a big insurance department in his business and he put Bill right into it and his salary is five thousand a year to begin. And if that isn't enough, as he says, Bill can always be a butler!

the bread for the birds. He rested one hand on her shoulder.

"He thought of everything, too," was his comment, "even down to the birds. It's extraordinary! No detail was too small for him!"

"He was remarkable, Robin," answered the girl soberly, "there was something magnetic about his personality that made people like him. Even now that he is dead, even in spite of what we know, I can feel his attraction still. And the whole house is impregnated with his personality. Particularly this room. Don't you feel it? I don't mind being here with you, Robin, but I shouldn't like to be here alone. I was dreadfully frightened on Sunday evening when I came here. And when I saw the curtains move—O, I thought my heart would stop beating! Dear, I'm glad we are giving this place up. I don't feel that I could ever be happy here even with you!"

"Poor devil!" said Robin. And then again he said: "Poor devil!"

"It was terrible to die like that!" replied Mary.

"It was terrible for him to lose you!" answered the young man. She gave his hand a little, tender squeeze, but relinquished it quickly as the door opened.

Mr. Manderton was there, broad shouldered and burly. Behind came Dr. Romain with a purple nose and eyes watering with the cold, Horace Trevert in plain clothes, Mr. Bardy, the solicitor, plump, middle aged and prim, with a broad, smooth shaven face and an eyeglass on a black silk riband. In the background loomed the large form of Inspector Humphries, ruddy of cheek as of hair. Lady Margaret did not appear.

"Now," said Mr. Manderton with a long shrewd look that comprehended the company, individually and collectively, and the entire room, "if Inspector Humphries will kindly close the door, we will reconstruct the crime in the light of the evidence we have collected."

He turned round to the desk and pulled back the chair—Hartley Parrish's empty chair.

"It is just on five o'clock on Saturday evening, November 27," he began, "and growing dark outside. Mr. Parrish is sitting here," he tapped the chair, "with all the lights in the room turned off except this one on the desk.

"The assumption that Mr. Parrish spent the afternoon, as he had spent the morning, over papers in connection with the business of Hornaway's, in which he was interested, is not correct. Mr. Archer, one of Mr. Parrish's secretaries, who brought down a number of papers and letters for Mr. Parrish to sign in the morning, states that as far as Hornaway's or any other office business was concerned, Mr. Parrish was through with it by lunch. This is corroborated by the fact that no business papers of this description with the exception of one, which I am coming to directly, were found on the desk here after Mr. Parrish's death. Nor were there any traces of burnt paper in or about the fire. These two facts were established by my colleague, Inspector Humphries.

At this everybody turned and looked at the inspector, who blushed until the tint of his hair positively paled by comparison with that of his face.

"What Mr. Archer did leave with Mr. Parrish, however," Mr. Manderton resumed, looking round the group and emphasizing the "did," "was his will and this letter"—he held up a typewritten sheet of slatey blue paper, "which, a straightforward business communication in appearance, was in reality a threat against his life. It was with these two documents that Mr. Parrish spent the last few hours before he was found dead in this room."

Mr. Manderton paused and then, with the deliberation which distinguished his every movement, walked round the desk to the window.

"The fire in this room," he said, turning and facing his audience, "was smoking. The butler will testify to this and state that Mr. Parrish complained about it to him with the result that the sweep was ordered for Monday morning. Owing to the smoke in the room Mr. Parrish opened the window. His finger prints were on the inside of the window frame and a small fragment of white paint was still adhering to one of his finger nails.

"The window, then, was open, as it is now. Mr. Parrish sat at his desk, read through his will, and wrote a letter to Miss Trevert, informing her that, under the will, she was left sole legatee. This letter, with the will, was found on the desk after Mr. Parrish's death. Presumably in view of the threat against his life contained in this letter"—the detective held up the slatey blue paper—"Mr. Parrish had either in his pocket or, as I am more inclined to think, lying on the desk in front of him, his Browning automatic pistol. This pistol was fitted with a Maxim silencer, which was sent to Mr. Parrish by a friend in America some years ago, and which he kept permanently attached to the weapon."

Mr. Manderton came to an impressive full stop and glanced round his circle of listeners. He had marshaled his facts well and his measured advance towards his denouement was not without its effect on his audience. Dr. Romain, nursing his knee on the leather settee; Horace Trevert, a tall, slim figure, eagerly watching the detective from his perch on the arm of the chesterfield, and Robin and Mary, standing close together behind the empty chair at the desk—each and every one was listening with rapt attention.

And here Mr. Manderton raised his head and looked out towards the frost strewn gardens.

"Maybe he hears a step, more probably he sees a face staring at him out of the dark. Much to his surprise he recognizes Jeekes, his principal private secretary—I say to his surprise, because he must have believed Jeekes, who had the week-end free, to be in London. And at that, perhaps because he thinks he has made a mistake—in any case to make sure—he gets up."

The detective suited the action to the word. He pushed back the chair and rose to his feet. They saw he held a large automatic pistol in his hand.

"He has had this threatening letter, remember, so he takes his pistol with him. And he reaches the window."

The detective was at the window now, his back to the room.

"He speaks to Jeekes, angrily, maybe—the butler heard the sound of loud voices—they have words. And then. . . .

There came a knock at the library door. It was not a loud knock. It was in reality scarcely more than a gentle tap. But it fell upon a silence of Manderton's own creating, a rapt silence following a pause which preceded the climax of his narrative.

"Who is that? What is it?" rapped out Dr. Romain irritably.

"Don't let any one disturb us, inspector!" called out Horace Trevert to Inspector Humphries, who had opened the door.

Bude's face appeared in the doorway. He had a short altercation with the inspector, who resolutely interposed his massive form between the butler and the room.

"What is it, Bude?" asked Robin, going to the door.

"It's a letter for Miss Trevert, sir!" said Bude.

"Well, leave it in the hall."

"But—but, sir," the butler protested. Then Robin noticed that he was trembling with excitement.

"What's the matter with you, Bude?" Robin demanded. Humphries had stood on one side and Robin now faced the butler.

"It's a letter from that Jeekes!" faltered Bude, holding out a salver. "I know his writing, sir!"

"For Miss Trevert?"

Robin gathered up the plain white envelope. It bore a Dutch stamp. The postmark was Rotterdam. He gave the letter to Mary. It was bulky and heavy.

"For you," he said, and stood beside her while she broke the seal. By this they had all gathered round her.

The envelope fluttered to the floor. Mary was unfolding a wad of sheets of writing paper folded once across. She glanced at the topmost sheet, then handed the bundle to Robin.

"It's a confession!" she said.

From beyond the grave the little secretary had spoken and spoiled Mr. Manderton's denouement.

The Lost Paradise — By Frederick Boutet

Translated by William L. McPherson

GUEULIN felt a little tremor of excitement as he saw through the deepening shadows the lights of his favorite tavern. Involuntarily he quickened his steps. With a keen sense of satisfaction, he pushed open the glass door. But he was in a way ashamed of the pleasure it gave him. His joy was tempered by something like remorse.

It was the first time he had entered the place since the death of Pauline, his wife. They had been married fifteen years before, and from that moment on he had never had words with her except on the subject of the tavern. The bar there was Gueulin's vice, and Pauline's bete noir (if one can speak thus of an object so brilliantly illuminated). She had never been able to prevent her husband from visiting it, and this was the one point on which she was not absolute master in her home. Gueulin, a stalwart blacksmith and a good hearted fellow, adored and feared this serious minded little woman, who had remained slender and pretty in spite of having borne five children. Whenever she looked at him with her big blue eyes and expressed an opinion he capitulated at once.

Except for the tavern, that is. With regard to it Pauline had never had her way. It was the sole remnant of the big blacksmith's independence, and he clung obstinately to it. He didn't abuse it, however. He went there once a week only, on Saturdays, after the shop had closed. But once there, he never knew when to leave. He was always detained by comrades or by chance acquaintances, whom he treated with the liberality of a good workman making good wages.

These innumerable treatings, which he had to settle for, contributed powerfully to Pauline's exasperation when she came to look for him. The same scene was reënacted every Saturday. The young wife, having prepared dinner, awaited his return, knowing that he wouldn't come, and getting more and more angry as the minutes passed. When the clock struck eight, she got up and took her youngest child on her arm. Having confided the others to the care of the eldest daughter, Amélie, she set out for the tavern. Everybody there knew her, and even the most disreputable habitués made way for her when she entered. For they also knew Gueulin and were aware that he was not a man to be trifled with regarding the respect due his wife. Sometimes he saw her coming or somebody signaled her approach. At other times, in the heat of political discussions, he didn't notice her presence. Then she went up to him and touched him on the shoulder. In her small, clear voice and very politely (for it is always necessary to respect one's husband in public) she used to say:

Gueulin gave a start, reddened, and turned around.

"Well, well, here you are! Sit down and take a glass."

Usually she refused and remained standing, hinting thus at an immediate departure. But sometimes she took a seat, accepted a little glass of currant wine, and sat there, silent, serious, and disapproving. The baby in her arms had an air as austere and virtuous as hers.

For Gueulin, then, the tavern lost its brilliancy, his comrades their verve, political discussion its charm, and the rounds of drinks their flavor. In the first years his comrades had tried to thaw out Mme. Gueulin. But the experiment had failed miserably. Genial pleasantries or bold compliments only heightened her reserve.

"Ah! no, not that!" she said. "It is enough that I am here. Gueulin, tell him to stop!"

He had nothing to do but obey. After a wait of some minutes, which he judged necessary to sustain his dignity as a man, he paid his score, got up, and left the place. They didn't laugh at him until he was outside, for he trembled before nobody but his wife, and his powerful muscles intimidated the most hardy.

They walked along the street side by side. Gueulin, bending down so as to be on a level with her, toyed with the baby in order to conciliate the mother. But it was all in vain. Pauline and the child remained offish and unreceptive until they reached home. The blacksmith trailed along with them, discomfited. He knew well that they would all be freezing toward him until the next day.

All this came back in memory to Gueulin this evening as he installed himself in the tavern, shaking hands with comrades who were happy to see him again, and who eagerly offered him the best place. Suppressing their noisy jokes and ordering their drinks in low tones, they sought to manifest their condolence like well bred people who know exactly how to conduct themselves. And Gueulin, appreciating their sympathy, felt his bereavement the more keenly and uttered a deep sigh.

"Come, Gueulin, we must look at things reasonably. Won't you have a little glass of absinthe, with sugar, as before?"

It was the proprietor who came to serve him. Gueulin, flattered, shook hands, emptied the glass offered him, and ordered another. Thus, pacified by the absinthe, he told about his misfortune.

"Yes, that morning she got up just like you or me. Nobody suspected anything. At ten o'clock they came to the blacksmith shop for me. She was taken as she was doing the washing. She fell into a chair without a word. What a terrible thing!"

"And the household, how have you arranged about that?" asked Bernard, the adjuster.

"The household? Well, I have Amélie, my eldest daughter, you know. The one who is twelve and a half years old. She has taken everything into her hands. I have nothing to do with running the house. 'I am going to replace mamma,' she said. 'I know how everything goes. I know how to look after the little ones.' And you should see how she does it! It is unbelievable. She cooks, dresses the children, makes them behave, and sends them to school. You would swear that it was her mother over again."

"And you can drink a glass now with your friends, without any one coming to interrupt you," observed Juin, the roofer, who was somewhat of a cynic when in his cups.

A disapproving silence followed. There are things which ought to be left unsaid. Gueulin almost flew into a rage, being all the more offended because at bottom he knew that Juin was only telling the truth. He adored Pauline. He was in despair at losing her. But he had come all the same to the tavern and was drinking tranquilly there. He was his own master. He couldn't be prevented from doing what he pleased.

"Come, give us a round of drinks," he said at last, with a fresh sigh, the invitation summing up his reflections.

They drank the round. Juin, repentant, ordered another. Bernard, in his turn, ordered another. Gueulin, smoking his pipe, began to feel happy.

"Aren't you coming home? It's eight o'clock. The children are hungry," said a small, clear voice behind him.

It was the voice of Pauline. He jumped up in alarm, turned around, and thought he saw her standing there, trim, erect, stiff mannered, neat and pretty, on her arm her baby, a little fretful and batting its eyes in the too brilliant light. But the blacksmith's terror lasted only for a second. It was replaced by a glacial chill of despair. He had recognized Amélie, his eldest daughter, the model housekeeper. He understood. She was replacing her mother. She came to look for him. She had prepared the dinner, had waited, and at eight o'clock had taken her smallest brother in her arms and come.

"Well, sit down and take a glass," Gueulin said, mechanically, as he used to do to his wife.

But the little girl had resolved to strike a decisive blow. She pursed her lips.

"Thank you, papa," she answered deliberately. "I don't like currant wine before dinner. And then this is no place for me. I came only to look for you."

"Ah! you're not out of words! Here's a little vixen," said Juin with a grin, chucking her paternally under the chin.

"Ah! no—none of that, if you please. Papa, make him stop!" cried the small, clear voice.

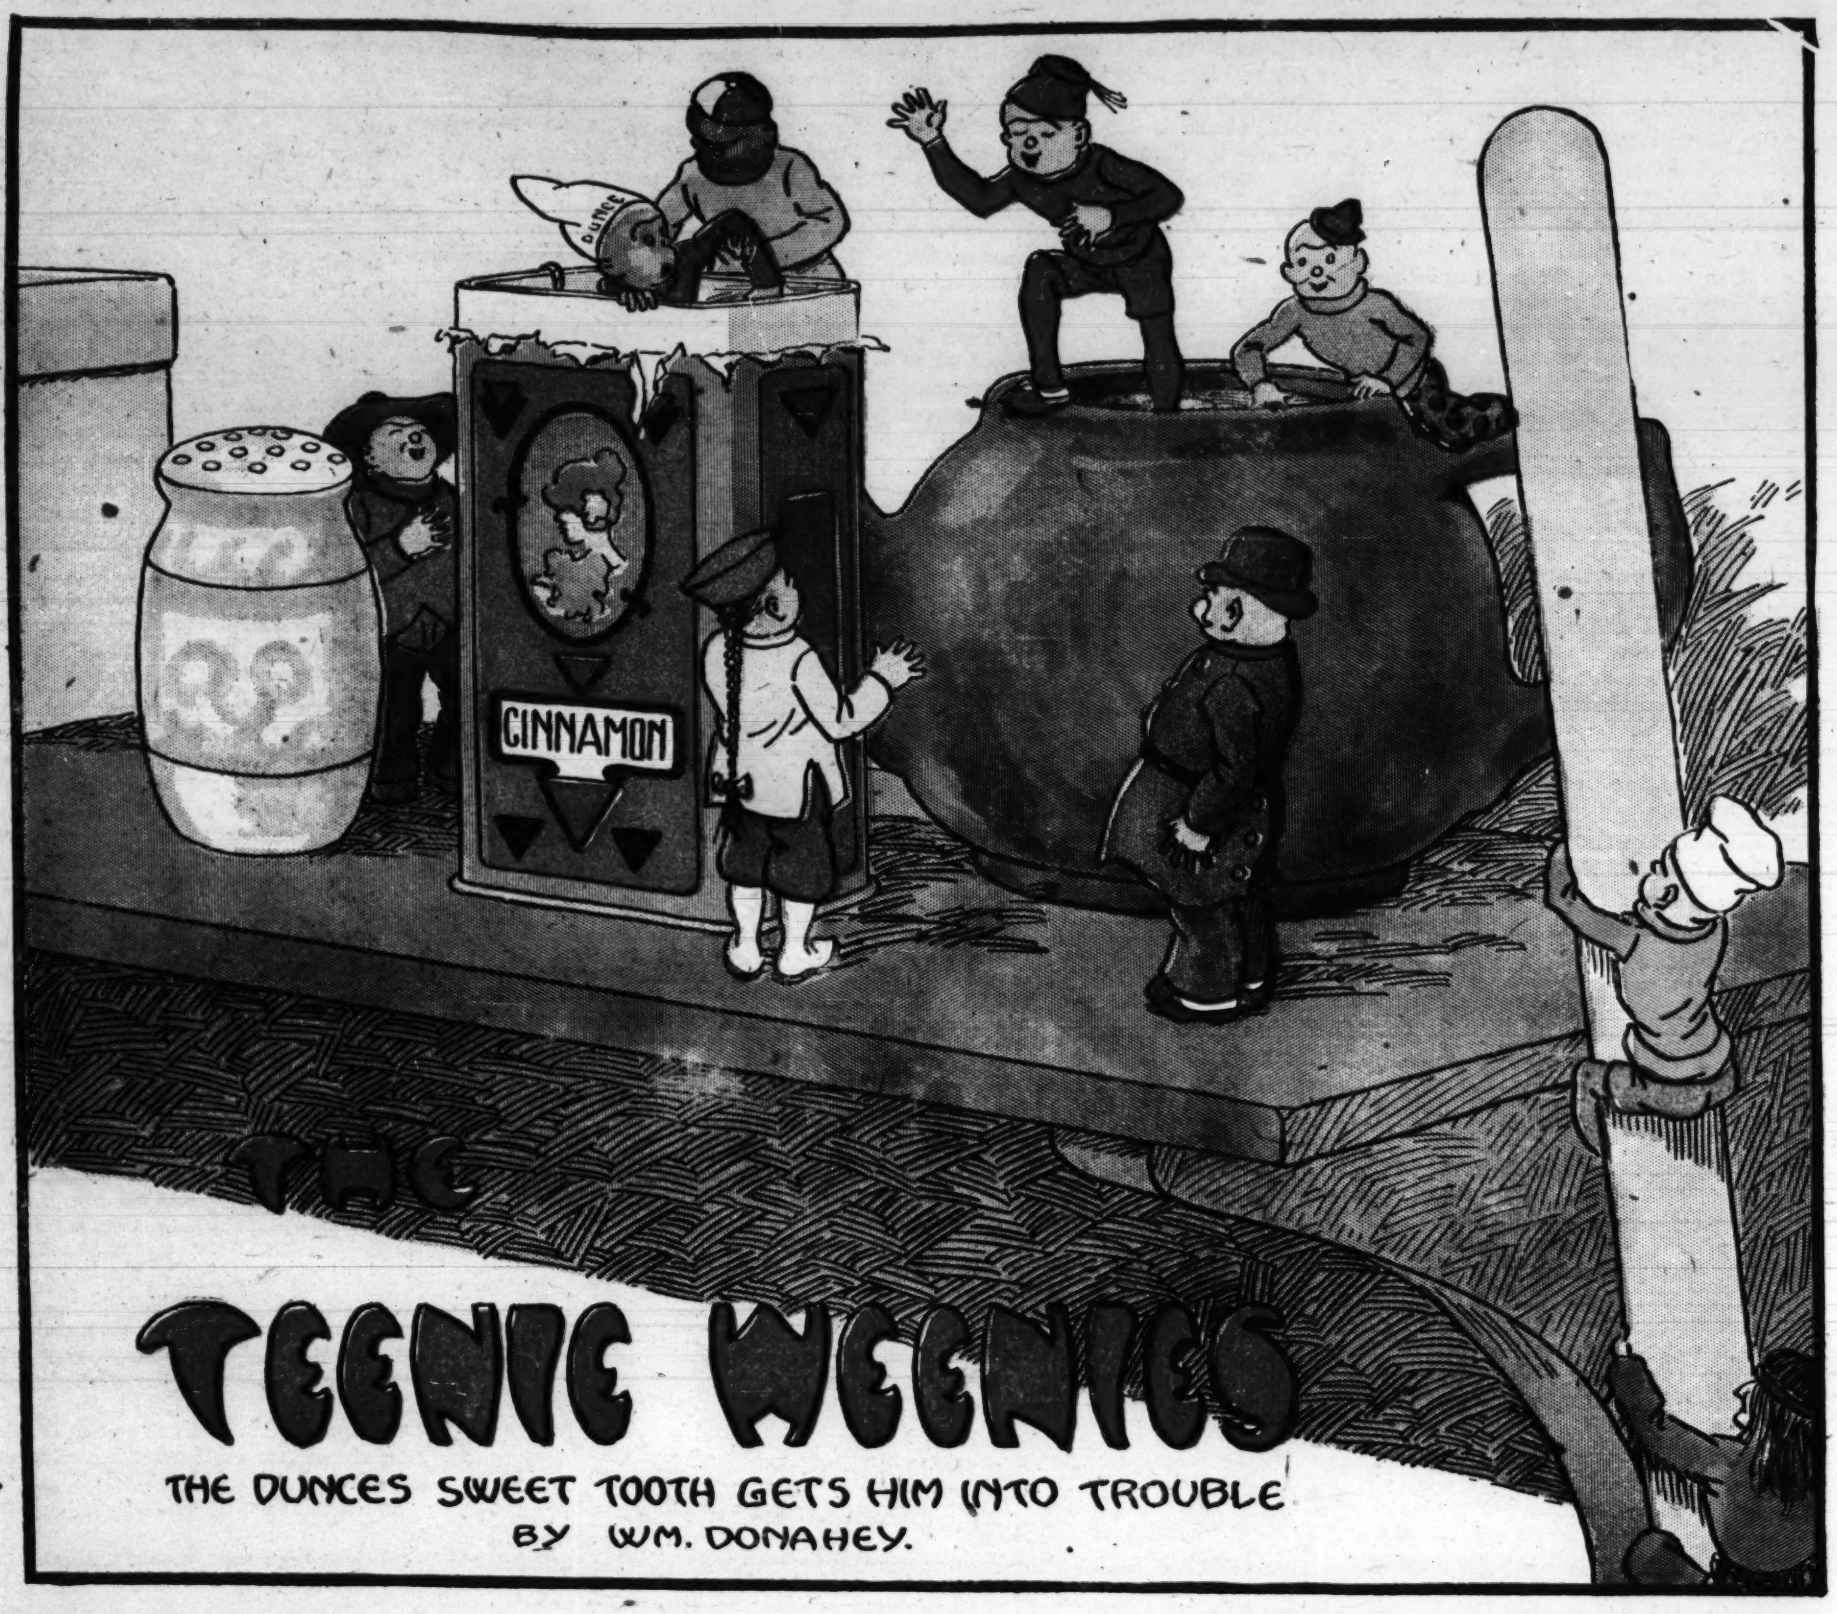
"Her mother, the image of her mother," Gueulin groaned.

He arose without another word. He paid his score and said good-by to his comrades, expecting that one of them would say something sneering and make him angry. But they were all as serious as judges. He walked out side by side with Amélie.

"Are you going to come for me like this often?" he asked, when they were in the street.

"Every time you go there," the little girl answered calmly, "since I replace mamma."

The blacksmith said nothing. He was lost in admiration and consternation. He felt himself definitely vanquished. Turning his head, he cast a last look at the lights of the lost paradise, now barred to him forever by the serious, erect, and pretty little creature who trotted alongside him, with the baby nestling in her arms.



IT was Saturday afternoon under the rose bush, and it was rather quiet in spite of the busy little folks who lived there.

The Chinaman and Zip were scrubbing up the old tea pot in which they lived, the little ladies had gathered at Box Hall for an afternoon of sewing and gossip, and the General, the Old Soldier, Grandpa, and the Doctor were deep in a game of bridge.

"Jinks!" muttered the Dunce, as he sat down on a hickory nut shell near the shoe house and stared off in the distance, "it's as slow as everything 'round here. Nothin' to do but go to sleep or somethin'. Guess I'll go and ask the Cook for a cookie," and jumping to his feet he ran to the kitchen door, which he found locked tight as a drum.

The Dunce pounded on the tiny door with all his might, and presently the Cook popped his head out of the dining room window.

"What are you tryin' to do, knock the door in?" asked the Cook.

"I want a cookie," answered the Dunce.

"Well, you won't get one until dinner time," cried the Cook, and he slammed the window down with a bang.

"Ah, shucks!" grumbled the disappointed Dunce, and sitting down on the tiny stone step he held his small chin in his hand for some time.

"By jimminy, I'll do it," he muttered to himself. "I got to have somethin' to eat, somethin' sweet, too," and immediately he set out with long strides in the direction of a big house not far from the rose bush.

Presently the little fellow arrived at the house, and in a few minutes he had crawled through the crack under the door and entered the kitchen.

As he looked around the room he spied a shelf high above his head. A broom leaned against it, and in remarkably fast time the Dunce climbed up to the shelf.

A tea pot, several boxes and a salt shaker sat there.

"That's me!" exclaimed the Dunce, as he read the lettering on one of the boxes. "Cinnamon! If there's anything I like better than cinnamon it's more cinnamon."

The little chap climbed the tea pot, which stood quite near the cinnamon box, and easily stepped over to the top of the box from the spout of the pot. There was no cover on the box, and the Dunce made up his mind to get some of the cinnamon. Holding onto the edge of the box with one of his hands the foolish fellow tried hard to get some of the cinnamon, but he could not quite reach it. Suddenly he lost his balance and tumbled head first into the can.

His head and shoulders went into the soft, powdery stuff, filling his eyes, ears and mouth; and that was not the least of his troubles, for he found that he could not get out of the box without help.

It was several hours later before the Dunce was missed at the shoe house, and, of course, the General at once ordered the Teenie Weenies to find their lost friend.

After much hunting they finally found the silly Dunce, and Gogo quickly pulled him out of the box. The poor Dunce certainly was a funny sight when Gogo pulled him out. He was covered with the brown cinnamon, and the Teenie Weenies nearly fell off the shelf with laughter.

"Well, you don't need to laugh!" cried the Dunce. "I'll bet you all wouldn't like to spend the afternoon in a cinnamon box."

"Well, why did you get in, then?" asked the Turk.

"I-I-I-I didn't get in," cried the Dunce. "I-I-I f-f-fell in. Jinks, but I was scared! When I was sittin' in there I kept thinkin' wouldn't it be awful if some one picked the box up and dumped me into some hot apple sauce or somethin'!"

The poor Dunce was taken home, and after he had been given a bath he was sent to bed without his supper, and that was only part of his punishment, for the General ordered that he should not have a bite of dessert with his meals for a week.

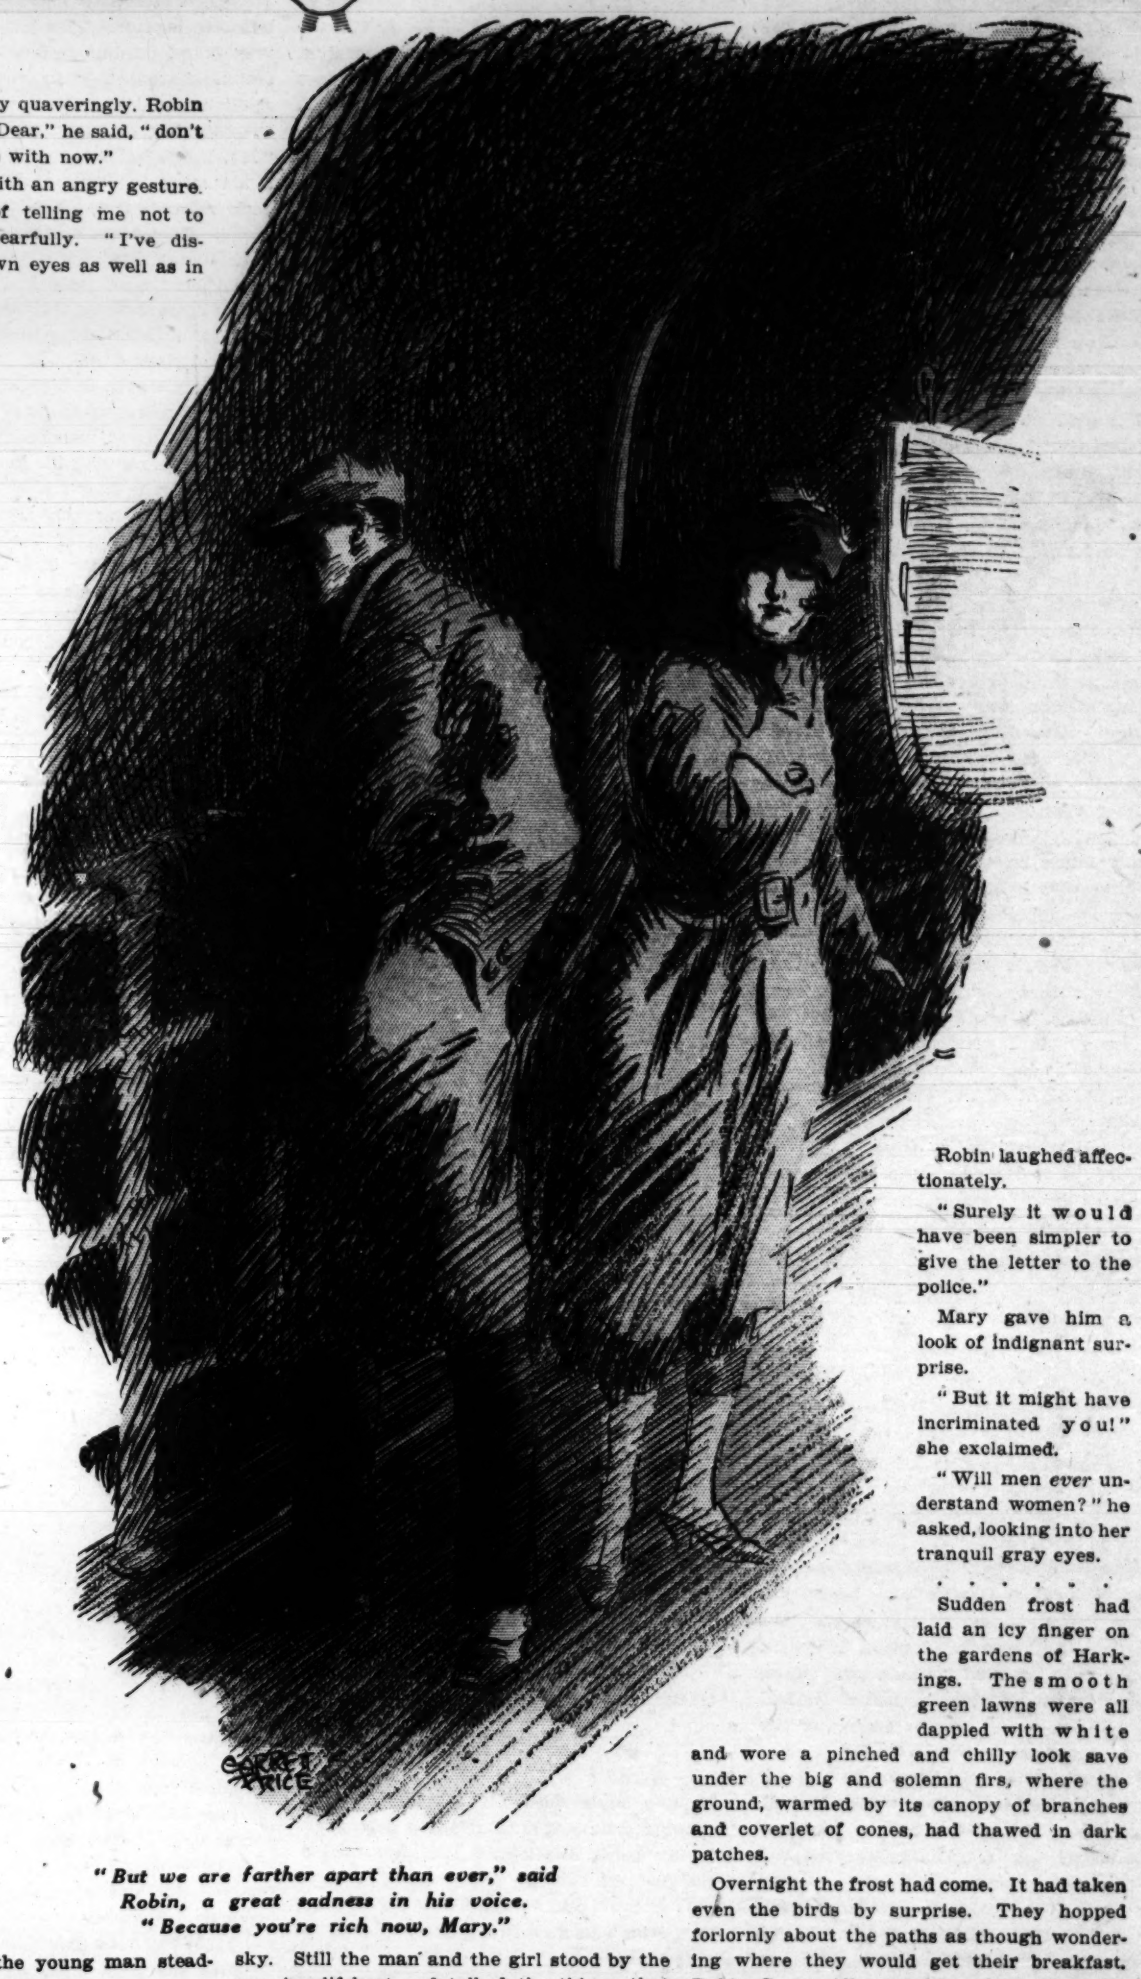
The YELLOW STREAK — Blue Ribbon Novel — by Valentine Williams



"But we are farther apart than ever," said Robin, a great sadness in his voice. "Because you're rich now, Mary."

SYNOPSIS.

Hartley Parrish, war millionaire, is found dead in the library of his country place, Harkings, with his revolver in his hand. Robin Greve, who had left Mary Trevert, Parrish's fiancée, in anger when she admitted mercenary motives were back of her betrothal, is suspected of some connection with the apparent suicide. He finds a mysterious blue paper beside Parrish's body, and advances the theory Parrish was murdered. Bruce Wright, a former employé, tells him of Parrish's career in South Africa, of Victor Marban, a possible enemy; of certain blue letters that Parrish feared, and of a Maxim silencer that disappeared from Parrish's automatic. Detective Manderton, who has been trailing Robin, declares peace and asks help. He reveals that Jeekes, Parrish's secretary, has tried to place Robin in a bad light before Mary. Robin declares Parrish probably was slain by blackmailers, who were responsible for the blue letters, after he had fired one shot from the silenced automatic. Mary visits Ernest Dulkinghorn, solver of secret codes, with one of the blue letters. He sends her to William Schulz of Rotterdam, that the source of the letters, Elias van der Spyck & Co., may be hunted down. Jeekes denies knowledge of any blue letters, but later sends a mysterious telegram to Rotterdam, whither Robin flies by airplane. Robin is on his way to Elias von der Spyck & Co. when he is astounded to meet Jeekes. Mary receives a bogus message and goes to "William Schulz's country place," where a sallow faced man of the name of Victor drugs her. Robin, trailing Jeekes and Victor's chauffeur, arrives just in time to rescue Mary. Routing the sallow faced man, he also is obliged to cow Jeekes, with Mary's help, before he escapes with her in a motor car to Rotterdam. There he finds a note from the real William Schulz, who is the head of the British secret service, masquerading as a German. Schulz reveals that Dulkinghorn has warned him that Victor Marbran, Parrish's old enemy, and his band probably are connected with Parish's death. Schulz also discloses that Parrish was the "brains" of a war syndicate, masking as Elias van der Spyck & Co., that enriched itself by trading with the enemy, and that Marbran was one of Parrish's chief aids, who had been double crossed. The mysterious slip of blue paper that Robin found beside Parrish's body proves the key to the secret code in which the blue letters are written. The key reveals that the last blue letter received by Parrish contained a death warning. Mary, questioned by Robin, recalls that she heard the click of the silenced shot that preceded the one which killed Parrish, and Robin gets a telegram showing Jeekes had bought an automatic of the same caliber as Parrish's. Robin and the others, reinforced by Detective Manderton, speed to Marbran's country place—but arrive too late. Marbran has fled and Jeekes has hanged himself.

THIRTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

Mary Makes Amends.

IT was a still, starry night. The Flushing boat stood out of harbor on a calm sea. The high arc lamps threw a blue gleam over the deserted moles and glinted in the oily swell lapping the quays. From the fast receding quayside the rasping of a winch echoed noisily across the silent water. On the upper deck of the mail boat Robin Greve and Mary Trevert stood side by side at the rail. They had the deck to themselves. Above their heads on the bridge the captain stood immobile, a square black figure, the helmsman at his elbow. Otherwise, between the stars and the sea, the man and the girl were alone.

Thus they had stood ever since the mail boat had cast off from the quay. Robin had made some banal attempt at conversation, urging, but without much sincerity, that, after her experiences of the day the girl should go to her cabin and rest. But Mary Trevert had merely shaken her head impatiently, without speaking.

Presently he put his arm through hers. He felt against his wrist the warm softness of her traveling coat and it seemed to him that, though the girl made no sign, some slight answering pressure met his touch. So they leaned upon the rail for a space; watching the water fall hissing from the vessel's sides as the steamer, jarring and quivering, met the long steady roll from the open sea.

Then Mary Trevert spoke.

"Robin," she said gently, "I owe you an apology."

Robin Greve looked at her quickly. But Mary had her eyes fixed seaward in contemplation of a distant light that flared and died with persistent regularity.

"My dear," he answered, "I've only myself to blame. When you told me you were going to marry Hartley Parrish I should have known that you had your reasons and that those reasons were good. I should have held my tongue."

This time the girl stole a glance at him. But now he was gazing away to the horizon where the light came and went.

"All this misunderstanding between us," he went on "came about because of what I said in the billiard room that afternoon."

The girl shook her head resolutely.

"No," she answered, "it was my fault. I'm a proud devil, Robin, and what you said about Hartley and other women, Robin, hurt and—and made me angry. No, no, don't apologize again. You and I are old enough friends, my dear, to tell one another the truth. You made me angry because what you said was true. I was selling myself, selling myself with my eyes open, too, and you've got a perfect right never to speak to me again."

She did not finish the sentence, but broke off. Her voice died away quaveringly. Robin took her hand in his. "Dear," he said, "don't cry! It's over and done with now."

Mary shook herself with an angry gesture.

"What's the good of telling me not to cry?" she protested tearfully. "I've disgraced myself in my own eyes as well as in yours. If you can't forget what I was ready to do. I never shall."

Very gently the young man turned the girl towards him.

"I'm not such a prig as all that," he said. "We all make mistakes. You know I understand the position you were in. Parrish is dead. I shall forget the rest."

Slowly the girl withdrew her hands from his grasp.

"Yes," she said wearily, "you will find it easy to forget!"

She drew her fur closer about her neck and turned her back on the sea.

"I must go down," she said. And waited for the man to stand aside. He did not move and their eyes met. Suddenly, like a child, she buried her face in her arm flung out across his chest. She began to sob bitterly.

"That afternoon in the billiard room," she sobbed, "you will forget that, too, I suppose."

Robin took her face in his hands, a hot, tear stained face, and detached it from the sheltering arm.

"My dear," he said, "I shall have to try and forget it. But I know I shan't succeed. To the end of my life I shall remember the kiss you gave me. But we are farther apart than ever now!"

There was a great sadness in his voice. It arrested the girl's attention as he dropped his hands and turned back to the rail.

"Why?" she said in a low voice without looking up.

"Because," replied the young man steadily, "you're rich now, Mary."

The girl looked up quickly.

"Will men ever understand women?" she cried, a new note in her voice. She stepped forward and, putting her two hands on the young man's shoulders, swung him round to face her.

"I'm as poor as ever I was," she said, "for Hartley Parrish's money is not for me."

"Mary!" exclaimed the young man joyfully.

"Robin Greve," cried the girl, "do you mean to tell me you'd stand there thinking I'd accept money made like that?"

But now she was in his arms. With a little fluttering sigh she yielded to his kiss.

"O, the man on the bridge!" she murmured, with her woman's instinct for the conventions.

"Come behind the boat then!" commanded Robin. And in the shadow of a weather stained davit he kissed her again.

"So you'll wait for me after all, Mary?"

"No," retorted the girl firmly. "We'll read the riot act to mother and you must marry me at once!"

The wind blew cold from the North Sea. With a gentle rhythmic motion the vessel rose and fell while the stars began to pale and faint grey shadows appeared in the eastern sky. Still the man and the girl stood by the swaying lifeboat and talked the things that lovers say. Step by step they went over their thought for each other in each successive phase of the dark tragedy through which they had passed.

"And that van der Spyck letter," asked Robin, "how did you get hold of it?"

"I found it in the library," replied the girl, "on the desk. It had got tucked away between two letter trays—one fits into the other, you know."

"I wondered how Jeekes had come to miss it," said Robin. "But when was this?"

"On Sunday afternoon."

"But what were you doing in the library?"

The girl became a little embarrassed.

"I knew Mr. Manderton was suspicious of you. I heard him telephoning instructions to London to have you watched. So I thought I'd go to the library to see if I could find anything which would show what they had against you exactly. And I found this letter. Then I noticed some one hiding behind the curtains and, as I had the letter in my hand, I hid it in my dress. When I discovered that Bruce Wright was after it too, I pretended I had found nothing. I wanted to make sure for myself why you had sent Bruce Wright, for I guessed he had come from you, to look for this letter. So I thought I'd go to Rotterdam to investigate."

Robin laughed affectionately.

"Surely it would have been simpler to give the letter to the police."

Mary gave him a look of indignant surprise.

"But it might have incriminated you!" she exclaimed.

"Will men ever understand women?" he asked, looking into her tranquil gray eyes.

Sudden frost had laid an icy finger on the gardens of Harkings. The smooth green lawns were all dappled with white and wore a pinched and chilly look save under the big and solemn firs, where the ground, warmed by its canopy of branches and coverlet of cones, had thawed in dark patches.

Overnight the frost had come. It had taken even the birds by surprise. They hopped forlornly about the paths as though wondering where they would get their breakfast. Robin Greve, idly watching them from the library window, found himself contrasting the cheerful winter landscape with the depressing conditions of the previous day.

In wind and rain the master of Harkings had been laid to rest in the quiet little churchyard of Stevenish. The ceremony had been arranged in haste, as soon as the coroner's jury had viewed the body. Robin Greve, that morning arrived from Rotterdam, Bude and Mr. Hardy, the solicitor, had been the only mourners. As Robin looked out upon the wintry scene, his mind reverted to the hurried funeral.

Beneath the window of the library, its shattered pane now replaced, a cluster of starlings whistled gayly, darting bright eyed glances, full of anticipation, at the closed window.

"He used to give them crumbs every morning after breakfast," said Mary. "See, Robin, how they are looking up! It seems a shame to disappoint them."

As though relieved to be quit of his dark thoughts Robin, with a glad smile, turned to the girl. Dipping his hand into his pocket, he produced a bit of bread and put it in her her hand.

"You think of everything!" she said, smiling back at him prettily.

He pushed up the window and she crumbled

FUR IS NEVER OUT OF PLACE

by CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The English have an expression which came vividly to my mind the other day when dining at one of the smart new luncheon places. This is, "Nothing to write home about." There certainly was not at this fashionable retreat. It was one of those places where you don't mind a bit being near sighted and where you can give all the attention in the world to the earth shaking question of whether to take the cake with the green flower on top or the chocolate one in the shape of a pin wheel.

Here were the plainest little suits and the plainest of wraps. The millinery was the kind you seem to remember as bending over your perambulator. No more notable were the furs or frocks. One asked herself the question, "Where are the beautiful new clo's we have seen in the shops finding a home?"

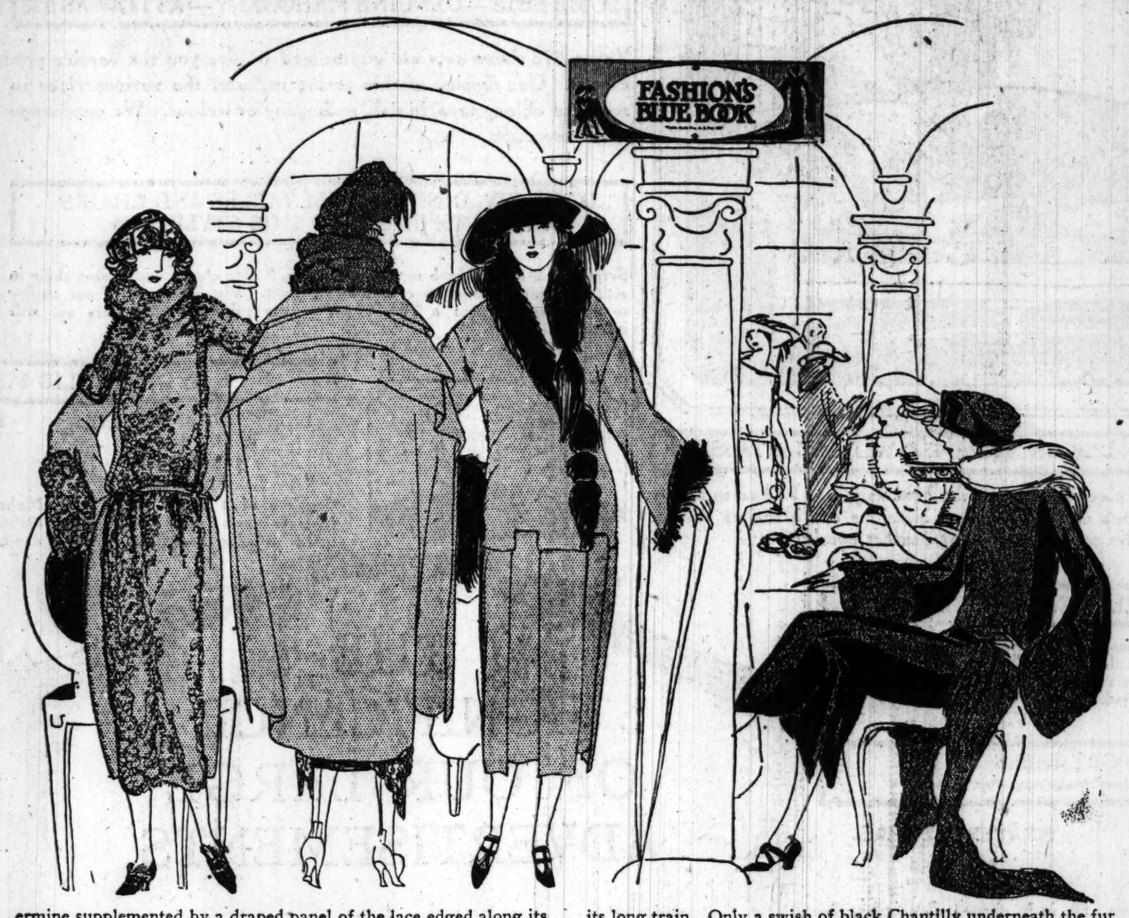
There were only a few garments to lift one from this field of gloomy speculation. One of these was the black crepe satin frock which we have pictured at the right. This had a back and a front panel of black crepe embroidered in lacquered thread—green, red, and blue. The cuffs of the huge sleeves had been treated to the same embroidery, and the hat with its turn back brim of black panne showed a crown repeating the same brilliant lacquered designs. With this was worn a scarf of white fox.

More and more, indeed, the Chinese influence which was expressed by so many of the great French designers at their openings is gaining authority with fashionable New York. This influence, responsible already for one of the smartest millinery shapes of the season, is directly felt also in the Lucie Hamar hat at the left of the sage. Not only does its line rely upon the inspiration of the celestial kingdom but here again between the ribs of black velvet on the crown we get the brilliant lacquered color which does so much to relieve the sobriety of our dark clothes.

In the picture it is providing a message of cheer to a gray kasha duvetyn coat trimmed with gray astrakhan. Speaking of fur, one sometimes feels that all we need is the sledge. If we had that little accessory we should look quite a great deal like a picture of the inhabitants of Labrador. It isn't merely the fact of using fur in great tracts which calls forth this comparison. The likeness gains its chief strength from the queer places where you find your pelt trimming. Behold here, for example, the panel ending in its yoke and collar, and note above all the great plasters attached to the outside of the sleeves. The strange part about it, too, is that, though we may make fun of these creations, they are really tremendously effective.

Here is only one illustration of the many and bizarre appearances of fur. Another is the fur tunic, showing beneath the jacket edges of a suit, a mode sponsored, I believe, by Jenny. Another is the suit composed of jacket of pelt with the cloth skirt banded in matching fur. And the most extravagant example yet provided is in the shape of evening gowns. This month one of our most famous New York designers came out with two creations which looked like Ingomar the barbarian having a flirtation with the Queen of the Fairies.

Imagine these frocks, if you please! One has a bodice of cream Venise lace with a draped collar of ermine describing the off the shoulder line and effecting a cataract of tails on one side only. What is more, the skirt is composed of a half portion of ermine supplemented by a draped panel of the lace edged along its diagonal front slope by the tails of the fur.



Of course, there is nothing new about the introduction of ermine as trimming. For a long time now we have been using these to punctuate the centers of our lace patterns and, whimsical as is the thought, there is nothing more charming than this dotting of white and black on the surface of gold or silver lace skirt.

But the other evening gown shown by this designer is even more enterprising. Here Beauty and the Beast are almost completely the same person, for a tunic of Hudson seal makes both the corsage, with its diagonal decollete, and the overskirt, with its long train. Only a swish of black Chantilly underneath the fur skirt shows any departure from the designer's purpose. Of course, both of these gowns are far too radical for the most of us, but they show the mighty conviction which sways us all this season. It is that fur is never out of place.

There are a great many people wearing the new short fur coats with the bloused upper section and the short peplum. These long waisted affairs are often caught by a fanciful girdle, although the practical nature steers away from constructing this cincture of metal. For the metal girdle is naturally hard on any perishable pelt. However, if your garment be of the hardy caracul you can afford to be a bit reckless. One of these smart new coats which I saw recently was of black caracul with collar and cuffs of kolinsky.

THAT Beauty and the Beast are now thoroughly reconciled is evinced by the coat of gray kasha duvetyn trimmed so extensively with gray astrakhan found at the left. A Lucie Hamar hat of black velvet and brilliant lacquer embroidery emphasizes the mode Chinois. Next, a cape of tan duvetyn collared in beaver is distinguished by three deep tucks over the shoulders. Third, a suit of gray kasha duvetyn trimmed whimsically with skunk exploits four floating panels on its skirt. Last, a frock of black crepe satin reiterates the Chinese influence by its panels and cuffs of black crepe embroidered in lacquered designs.

Right here, indeed, one must mention the omnipresence of this crinkly pelt. It is used today for some of the smartest coats, both long and short. Nor is its activity limited to the realm of sports wear. Far from it. To be sure, the natural colored caracul continues to make some of the most dashing of these sport wraps. However, the black coat of this kind when trimmed with some more costly cousin is being donned for the formal afternoon occasion. And as trimming it is used again and again. On the navy blue or black frock of wool for general wear this crinkly pelt is ideal, but it is employed most effectively also on the crepe frocks.

One of the whimsical administrations of fur is illustrated on the stunning suit third from the left. This suit of gray kasha duvetyn with its floating panels on the skirt is set off by skunk, not in the usual formal bands but in a form reminiscent of its native state. The hat worn with this suit is a black panne trimmed effectively with glycerined ostrich brought around from the top to the under side of the brim.

Before leaving the subject of furs one must not omit mention of the popularity of mole. There is none of the characteristic underground work of this beastie in today's fashions. It works right out where everybody may watch, and it works overtime. Thanks to the pliability of mole, it permits many variations of treatment.

The garment made up of a checkerboard pattern of small squares is, for example, widely exploited. A beautiful evening coat of the fur which I saw the other night was wrought entirely of these checks, and the collar and deep cuffs intermingled squares of ermine with the original pelt. Still another formal wrap of this type showed the ruche collar which has been observed in several ermine creations.

Leaving the fur flung battle line of today's modes, one comes to the subject of lace. This is used on all types of frocks, but, of course, it gets its widest opportunity in the evening gowns. Black Chantilly continues to chant, and at a recent exhibition of new gowns it sang all over the place. It was used here as bodices, as flounces, as aprons, and the draped frock of brocade was not free from its influence.

One of its most arresting models has a corsage of black Chantilly held by vivid red velvet shoulder straps and draped over silver cloth, combined with a skirt made of flounces of silver lace and sashed in silver cloth. This brings one to a decided tendency of late styles. It is toward the evening frock where bodice and skirt are of different materials. For example, your corsage may be of velvet and your skirt of white satin. And, of course, there is often a separation of color as well as of material.

1165—Child's dress. Sizes 2, 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 8 requires 1¾ yards of 32-inch or wider plain material and 1 yard of 32-inch or wider material for the figured part.

9875—Woman's house dress. Sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 36-inch material.

1210—Woman's and miss' jumper dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3 yards of 32 or 36-inch material and 4 yards of binding. The guimpe requires 1¾ yards of 36-inch material, if long sleeves are desired, and 1⅛ yards for short sleeves.

How to Use the Patterns

PLAID or figured material, combined with a plain, in some one of the lightweight woolens, will make a most attractive dress by pattern No. 1165. The sleeves and side parts of the waist will be of the figured and the balance of the plain material. Compare the child's measures with those on the pattern before cutting into the cloth, and remember to allow for a deep hem around the bottom of the skirt.

Turn in the edges of the plain material where it is to be joined to the figured, and carefully baste down. Then lay your work out flat on a table, and pin the plain to the figured material. Pin it accurately, and do careful basting, taking small stitches. Then stitch twice, once close to the edge and the second time a little distance down.

Perforations on the pattern show the depth of the opening in the back, and the pattern directions suggest finishing this opening with a continuous facing. This makes an excellent finish. The only point where one might have trouble is at the lower end. When basting and stitching around the end, hold the opening out straight so it makes one long place, and clip at a point each side of the end a short way, so there will be no puckering there. The seam should be extremely narrow as the end is reached. After the first stitching the opposite edge of the strip is turned in and basted down over the seam and hemmed by hand. The stitches should not come through to the right side. One side of the facing is turned under to make a faced hem, and the opposite extends out, making the extension hem.

Pattern No. 9875 is a smart looking design for a house dress, with its long-waisted effect, unusual cut of the waist and pretty sash ends. The dress is intended to be slipped on over the head, so the troublesome work of finishing an opening is done away with.

The center front and back of the waist are in one piece, and the sides and sleeves in one, a style that is bound to be becoming to many. In attaching the middle back and front to the side pieces a little fancy braid, such as rick rack, can be set in under the edge so that the points on one side of the braid extend beyond the seam, or the edges of the front and back can be bound with some contrasting color, or the seam edges can simply be turned in and stitched down, in which case embroidery would trim attractively, although one does not wish to put too much work on a house dress, even though one wishes it to be attractive.

Any of the wash materials will be ideal for this pattern. The sash ends are set in at each side under the lower edges of the front and are tied in the back.

The skirt is a straight, gathered pattern, and measures two yards at the bottom for size 36.

This pattern would be just the thing for an afternoon dress made of challis, taffeta, or wool jersey.

Pattern No. 1210 is the still popular jumper design. The dress is in two pieces, has pockets that are set in each side of the front, and with the dress is worn a narrow belt.

It would be difficult to speak of any material that would not be suitable for this style dress. Any of the tub cloths will make up beautifully and would be appropriate in the house all winter. With such a dress a blouse of handkerchief linen, batista, or organdie would be the thing. Then there are pongee, other wash silks, satin, or taffeta, or serge, tricotine, wool jersey, crêpe, velvet, or velveteen. It depends entirely for what purpose you wish it. A blouse to wear with any of these materials would be appropriate made of crêpe de chine, georgette, chiffon, or wash satin.

Braiding or some kind of embroidery may be used to trim, or the piping or binding around the armholes and neck is enough.

MLLE. MADELEINE.

WHILE serving with the A. E. F. I made the acquaintance of a lovely French girl by the name of Madeleine B., who was doing clerical work for Uncle Sam. She had found quarters in our hotel, which had been established for American girls, and seemed lonely. I made it a practice to talk to her whenever possible, and always sat next her at table.

One evening I missed her, and the girls told me she was entertaining an American soldier friend. Leaving the dining room after supper I passed the old garage in the courtyard which had been turned into a sort of receiving room for the girls' guests. The little table was daintily set for two and Maideleine, with a look of radiant happiness, was serving a soldier boy who sat in a wheel chair.

The next day she told me about him. He was an aviator who had been injured by a fall. She had met him several months before while visiting in a hospital, and only recently had he been able to get about in the invalid chair. Her visits and encouraging words had been his only ray of sunshine.

Often she would secure the use of a government car, and with the aid of the chauffeur make the boy comfortable among pillows and wraps. A dainty little lunch was taken along and a happy day spent in the country. Quite often I went with them, and we always had a happy time. The only shadow was the boy's extreme sensitiveness over his crippled condition. When we chose the spot for spreading our luncheon we would walk down the road a short distance so as not to be present when he painfully dragged himself from the car with the chauffeur's assistance. In many ways we tried to spare him the agony he seemed to feel at having others witness his pitiful helplessness.

Shortly after I learned of Madeleine's friendship with the boy, he was sent back to the states, and she told me she was soon to follow.

One day, several months after my return to America, I was surprised and delighted to meet Madeleine, who was serving as a clerk in a lingerie shop. After an exchange of greetings, I spoke of the aviator. An expression of sadness came to her face as she told me that after his return to the states she had never heard from him. I tried to tell her that something had probably happened to his letters.

While visiting an army hospital, I was surprised to observe Madeleine's soldier. I talked with him for a few minutes and finally mentioned Madeleine. The same look of sorrow I had seen upon her face at mention of his name overspread his countenance. He told me that he had never written her after his return to the states.

"In those days in France I did not realize what I was asking of her," he said: "what it would mean to her to spend the rest of her life with a useless and helpless cripple. Why should I ask a beautiful young girl to spend the rest of her life with me? But no one can realize how I long to see her and hear her voice."

After much deliberation as to whether I was doing the right thing, I finally asked Madeleine to go to the hospital with me. Just outside the door of the room where her friend was, I told her to wait. Inside I talked with him and after a few words the conversation again drifted to Madeleine, and while he was again telling me of his longing to see her, she came running impetuously into the room and threw her arms about him. Amid happy tears she told him of her love and faith, and he murmured broken words of endearment.

Silently I stole from the room, and at that moment I was sure that I had done the right thing in bringing them together again. E.B.

Try Sulphur on an Eczema Skin

Costs Little and Overcomes Trouble Almost Over Night.

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment without delay. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

An Ancient Problem Solved

How to produce a perfect and unvarying flavor in cheese had been a problem for ages.

Kraft solved it by the simple process of blending—by taking selected country cheeses, testing for moisture, butter-fat, etc., and combining just enough of each cheese to produce a perfect cheese—a 100% cheese.

You first had this inimitable flavor in Kraft Cheese in Tins, but now comes a still more remarkable achievement, the Kraft Loaf Cheese, whereby the same unvarying perfection and exquisite flavor is given to cheese in bulk form.

Kraft Loaf Cheese has become popular almost over night. It has reached a sale of over 2,000,000 pounds per month, and has forever banished the disappointments in cheese buying. Ask for Kraft Loaf Cheese—the name is on the protecting tinfoil wrapper. Three varieties—American, Pimento and Swiss, sold by the slice, pound or loaf, at about the price of the best bulk cheese. No rind—no waste—no preservatives.

Every good grocer and delicatessen sells it.

To Keep Hair Wavy, Lustrous, Beautiful

The use of the hot curling-iron cannot be too strongly condemned. It means death to the hair eventually. Moreover it is entirely unnecessary. The hair can be kept beautifully wavy and curly to any extent and in any form desired by using the simple and harmless Silmerine method. Liquid Silmerine should be applied to the hair before doing it up, using a clean tooth brush. In about three hours you will find that a very pretty "natural" wave and curliness has resulted, and the effect will last quite a considerable time.

Liquid Silmerine is really beneficial and is not sticky nor greasy. Neither does it streak the hair nor stain the scalp. You need get only a few ounces from your druggist. The best way is to divide the front and back hair into from four to six strands and to moisten each strand separately from root to tip.

Hair Must Either Be Bobbed or Look It says Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.] — Remember way back when you shrugged your shoulders, raised your brows, and said You, no, not You, would ever appear in skirts above ankle length? 'Member how you closed your boudoir door one day later, basted the hem up a few inches above the ankles jes' to see how it looked and felt? Yes? 'Member a short time later you walked boldly forth feeling younger, looking younger, in hems skirting the ground by fourteen inches?

Well, it looks as though that's what's going to happen with bobbed hair! Looks as if we'd all be doing it before long!

It has met and still is meeting with opposition from some folk, but glancing over a theater audience or a smart dance affair the first thing you know you're running back home, taking down your favorite tresses, pulling them out around the ears, and tucking them up and under the back of your neck and wondering—well, wondering just how much courage your wavering soul doth possess.

Curious to know just how busy the scissors are, I inquired at several smart hairdressing establishments. Everywhere they told me the same tale. Instead of a reversion to the style, there seems to be no checking it. I expect it is like the short skirt—too comfortable, too full of youthful promise (whether it works out that way in every case being quite an aside in the matter), to be curbed by the conventionals.

In these smart beauty parlors I saw them young and I saw them not so young and I saw them white haired being divorced from their brown or red or blonde or black ringlets with no single air of martyrdom about them, emerging triumphantly, in fact, with an air of "Well, that's done, thank heavens!"

More Popular Every Day.

Said Charles, who has a reputation here as the smart coiffeur of New York and to whose establishment in the Ritz-Carlton come celebrities in the social, business, and theatrical worlds for advice and adornment:

"I average about 150 bobs a day. They come from Philadelphia, from Baltimore, from Boston, from Detroit, and from Kalamazoo to have it done. They're smart women, too. It makes me laugh when people say it has become too common a style for the ultra to follow now. It is becoming more popular every day.

"It is American," he added, "distinctly American. The style has come to stay as long as the short skirt style, and that is for many, many moons. You hear a great deal of talk about the skirts being worn longer—but do you see them?" he asked.

"What was against the bobbed hair in the beginning was the inefficient manner in which the shears were applied. A head was laid on the block—presto! and a straight line from ear to ear in the back was considered enough.

"Not now," he added. "Not here in my establishment. I study the contour of the neck and head, and the hair is cut to bring out the best lines for face and all. The line of the hair has so much to do with improving the face that one cannot ignore this item.

"Few women and girls improve their looks by the straight across cut. Not one girl in ten thousand can wear the regular 'Dutch' bob, uncurled and banged and worn like a doll's wig. She is a rare and unusual type who should attempt it."

Marcel Must Be Loose.

The photograph accompanying this story is of Charles' daughter, and it illustrates his point of argument. He has a trick of his own of "shingling" to suit the face. He calls this particular shingling the "pineapple" cut, and the principle of it is to build a symmetrical line from the chin to the rear top of the head and at the same time present a pleasing picture from the back.

The shop window, tightly marceled, and minutely correct style of "coiff" he assures me has gone into the limbo of style once forsaken, wherever that overcrowded place may be.

Simplicity is the keynote, whether bobbed or not. The marcel must be loose and large and as unmarceled appearing as only the artist hairdresser can accomplish. In fact, it would better be totally unwaved than waved too tightly.

Others Imitate the Bob.

The bobbed hair is directly responsible for this revolution. For those of us who cannot face the shears for reasons peculiar to ourselves, he advises the smart thing is to imitate the bob as cleverly as possible. We must either sacrifice the long hairs in the direct vicinity of the ears, leaving the back hair unshorn and French rolling it or somehow concealing it beneath a top layer so that the contour will present a bobbed head effect.

So our poor weather beaten old psyches seemed doomed to oblivion. I pleaded with him to spare the older woman, whose face perhaps might not stand the test of the clipping. Whereat he presented me to one who admitted she was 52 and I had to admit her beautiful white hair was extremely lovely with his particular art applied to the shingling. But I could imagine any number of women, and not necessarily white haired ones, who would not be such a credit to him.

It's the Smartest Way.

The main obstacle which has spared many a good head of hair to date, that of ridicule or criticism, seems to have been surmounted and undoubtedly is responsible for the rush to the barber shop.

Of course, now, I do not wish to be responsible for any rash doings on the part of my readers. When it is becoming, I love the style, but "when it is not it is horrid." So I would recommend, in the face of its growing popularity, that you try the bobbed effect and try it often before the final separation is agreed upon between you and the clipper.

But there's nothing wrong with following the present dictates of simple hairdressing. For, like the simpler lines in clothes, it usually proves more becoming to the average woman.

And, unquestionably, I glean from observation and from queries in places where such information may be relied upon, it is the smartest way to do it up these days.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

MATRON: WRINKLES ARE DUE to a natural loss of subcutaneous fat, and in later life the skin tends naturally to become somewhat relaxed so that it does not maintain the tension of youth. If it is illness or a loss of flesh that causes them, the system must be rebuilt first of all. Local help may be obtained by massaging the face with a good skin food and allowing a certain amount of it to be absorbed. Send a. a. e. and I will mail you formula for skin food and instruction on facial massage.

MRS. P. G.: THERE IS MUCH claptrap charlatanry about mysterious and marvelous discoveries in exercises. There is no mystery about exercise requirements and the "marvelous" systems really owe any merit they may possess to the muscular movement they require; that is, arousing the individual to activity. If one is so mentally constituted as to require "hoakum" to spur her on to effort her staying power will be missing in all probability. No system can claim a monopoly of the idea of completely using the machinery of the body. If you want exercises for keeping fit send me stamped, addressed envelope and I will mail you a series of daily setting up ones. There's no mystery about them—just plain common sense.

X. Y. Z.: A GIRL 5 FEET 1, 25 years old, should weigh about 120 pounds. A girl 5 feet 6 of the same age should be 135, according to standard weights and measurements.

At Her Feet.

I sallied out to lunch one day several years ago with the latest in footgear—extremely high laced boots with high heels. At the busiest corner at the busiest hour I caught my heel in the car track. I twisted and wriggled my foot to no avail. All traffic was stopped. Seeing the mob around me, the traffic officer rushed over with fire in his eye. All other means failing, he stooped down and unlaced the boot, while a million people, it seemed to me, stood looking on. I then stepped out of the shoe, he wrenched it free, and I hobbled to the sidewalk, with his assistance. I went on my way, not rejoicing, but wondering how I had lived through the ordeal. I. L.

Shy.

When a young girl I had a caller one afternoon, and I was nervous and shy and did not know what to say or do. So after a while I arose and crossed the room for my album. When sitting down again I missed my chair and sat down on the floor. You can imagine his surprise and my embarrassment. A. D.

Traced.

As I am only a freshman co-ed, it seems to me I am blessed with many most embarrassing moments. The last one was not only embarrassing, but disagreeable as well. I am being rushed for a sorority and, of course, try to look my best. The girls had fixed up a date with a popular fraternity man and I was anxious to make a good impression.

I did my best in dressing, but my shoes were plain, so I dyed the tips of by oxfords black. We went to a movie. The dye had a strong odor, and the heat in the show soon scented the room until it was almost unbearable. The man remarked how terrible it was and I agreed and said some one surely just had a shine.

We let the matter drop at the show, but when we got home and he noticed my odd shoes, he said, "So it was you who had a shine."

I had to admit it, and then I was lost forever, as it was a joke around the house and at his fraternity. F. W.

Her Hair Was Home.

I had had a fever and lost most of my hair.

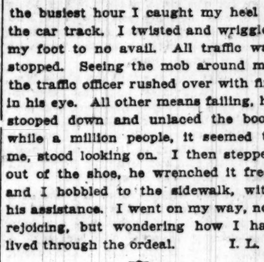
One evening a friend called and asked me to go to church with her.

It was late, and she said: "O, don't take time to put on your false hair; just wear your hat."

Arriving at the last moment, we were forced to take seats near the front.

When the meeting opened the minister said, "Will all the ladies please remove their hats?"

All hats went off but mine, and all eyes turned toward me. I sat with a burning face during the entire service. L. M.



THE time to watch the health of the girl most carefully is when she is entering young womanhood. Much depends upon the proper functioning of the organs of elimination. INSERTION IN TATTING.

THERE are always many uses for attractive insertions and edgings, and they make fine pickup work, long lengths being finished before one realizes.

A half wheel edging and a daisy insertion, done in tatting, are given here and will not be difficult for those who do that kind of work.

Double stitch (ds) two half stitches made with the shuttle, forming one stitch.

Ring (r), a number of double stitches made with shuttle thread only, drawn into a ring.

Chain (ch), a cord made with the ball thread on the shuttle thread, both drawn into a ring.

Picot (p), a loop left between stitches

Directions for roll tatting: With thread in order for a chain make 1ds, small p, and 4ds, for finger hold and joining. With short thread pass the shuttle over the ball thread and back under it, close to the left forefinger. Continue this, winding the ball thread on the shuttle thread. Keep thread tight, and push up the stitches under the left thumb often. One roll counts as one stitch. With one set of rolls made, push up tightly; if at all loose, roll the first end, between thumb and finger, from you, hold tight, and make 1ds. All picots are small, with 1ds before and after.

Melinda, my goddaughter, is fond of animals. I took her to the zoölogical garden and she was pleased with the different birds, fishes, and quadrupeds.

Finishing our walk, I took a chair and, taking her into my lap, asked her which animal she liked the most, the tiger, the monkey, or the ostrich?

"It is godfather whom I like the mast among 'em," she said. H. D.

There was a new brother at the home of Joan and Barbara and when I went to see the baby I asked Joan if I could take him home with me.

We entertained a man at dinner one Sunday. Our guest, Bobby, his father, and I made just four who sat down at table. In the afternoon son and his father and our guest took a walk.

On their return Bobby rushed into the kitchen and brushed one of my handsome goblets to the floor, where it broke. He was speechless for a moment.

Then he hastened to excuse himself and comfort me, saying: "It's all right, mother. Don't feel bad. There are just three of us and it will be all right if he doesn't stay to supper."

George was an appreciative child and rarely failed to make people understand that he was grateful for all favors. Some days after Christmas we were in a street car. When he slipped off the seat and without a word of explanation advanced upon a benevolent looking man who wore a fur coat and a full gray beard.

"Thank you," said the child, "for all those beautiful presents you sent me. I—I was a good boy."

There was silence for a brief second, and then the laughter broke, high pitched and unrestrained. The old man's color heightened, but with charming dignity, said: "I know you have—I know you have been a good boy." H. V.

Jack is an American lad. He was born in a Chinese city, and is visiting the United States for the first time He uses the Chinese language as freely as he does English.

Not long ago he was attracted by a baby girl who doesn't talk at all. He fell in love with her at once and wanted to make friends with her, so he began speaking in English, but, of course, he received no reply. Not daunted at this, he tried speaking Chinese. Still there was no response. Then, disgusted, he turned away and said: "She must be Jap." S. A. B.

When James walks out with mother she often has many errands and a limited time in which to do them. Consequently the little man soon grows tired.

His father occasionally takes him out in his leisure moments and they have great fun.

DINNER ROLLS.

THE formula: Four cups of flour at room temperature, one cup of milk scalded and cooled, two ounces of butter, one-half teaspoon of salt, one-fourth cup of sugar and one-half ounce of yeast, or use a whole ounce for quick work, and one-half cup of tepid water in which to soak the yeast.

It is safely within reason to say that any imaginative or skilled cook could get at least one hundred effects by different manipulations of the materials in this formula, along with the addition of fruits, nuts, icings, glazings, and by the use of different baking utensils. As to the forms into which the dough made might be made, from simple biscuit, pocket book, crescent, bun, muffin—French and other, braids, wreaths—are there not a score of them?

The formula is short, the art of roll making is long. A description of the process of putting together the ingredients, and their treatment along the way to the roll pan, if written in the best French manner would take pages. To get a quick strong dough we need to keep a sponge or dough at a temperature favorable to development, and protected. The best temperature is about 78 degrees Fahrenheit. The fireless cooker is not only more sanitary but safer than the blanket as a perfect protector of the rising mixture.

The Raising Process.

The correct treatment of a mixture of flour and liquid impregnated with yeast is truly a vital affair. The yeast is alive and growing. It must be given the best possible chance to grow. The flour will feed it, but it cannot utilize flour as quickly as it can sugar, therefore a little, or considerable, sugar in a dough gives the raising process a quick start.

No woman needs more than one real recipe, or formula, for making raised rolls, but she needs to grasp thoroughly this point about temperature and its results, and besides that she must know what she can do after the yeast has worked for her. The batch of raised dough might be compared to egg white which has been whipped up to only a first stage, when it is full of large and small or uneven bubbles and is wet. By further whipping the size of the bubbles are evened, and then by further beating, a dry texture is obtained—a dry mass uniform throughout. It is by beating a dough that we get what may be compared with the second stage in white of egg manipulation, and by kneading that we get a finished texture. Skill, art, judgment, interest, enjoyment, all help when we come to this part of the work, but it is not the end of our labors on the roll.

The summum bonum—the greatest good thing you know—for a perfect roll is a thin, crisp crust. To get this crust you not only need to have dough of fine elastic, velvety texture, but you must bake your roll in a hot oven. One up to 500 degrees is good for small rolls and fifteen minutes is the time required. At such a heat rolls might blacken in fifteen minutes while the inside would not be thoroughly cooked. To prevent this, rolls may be brushed with plain water or milk or diluted egg yolk—glazing—or even buttered or brushed with other wet mixtures like water and corn starch.

Get the Oven Right.

"We had the oven heating a long time," said a young woman in answer to the question about the perfectly baked rolls she served of an afternoon. It is the only way to get a gas oven approximately like that perfect baker's oven with heavy backings of brick which hold the heat even and long at a given point. A solidly hot oven is what we need for baking, no matter what the temperature required for a given piece of work.

Counting all these operations as behavior on our part, we are not through when we take the pan of rolls from the oven. If we wish to have the delight of that perfect thin and crisp crust, backed by a reasonably dry crumb safely digestible and one that will not become doughy when masticated, we must serve our rolls on the minute. There is moisture in the interior, which bursts out of the roll when we break it open, but is condensed as the piece cools, gradually penetrating the crust and taking the crispness out of it. Reheating the roll will drive the dampness out, but a reheated roll is never quite like one freshly baked. It is better toasted. An English muffin is a good deal moist in the interior, therefore it is split and toasted even when freshly baked. But the evaporation is greater from tinier pieces of dough, and well kneaded, therefore the crumb of a small roll has a quality that is different, but comparable in perfect quality to that of the thin crisp crust.

For Perfect Flavor.

When working for perfect quality in making a roll, to make something well shaped contributes its sort of attractiveness. Of course, it must be fine grained and white. That whiteness may be compared to the whiteness of popped corn. The rather fierce heat has popped the fine grains of flour which were heated with some slowness because wet, then heat and steam fluff them as the same elements fluff corn. Gray, slaty looking bread and rolls have not been correctly baked or the flour was too soppy.

But above everything else, that perfect light roll should be sweet with the sweetness of the wheat. This sweetness is brought out by both the quick, perfect rising and the quick baking. But perhaps only one person in one hundred knows this gratifying flavor. Hundreds of bushels of rolls are sold every day in which this delicate flavor has never been developed or it has been developed and lost through carelessness. It is as illusive as an essence. In weak, and also what the baker rightly calls "rotten dough," it has gone glimmering. Every woman should know what the wheat kernel tastes like, and in working for perfect breads her effort should be to get that taste. Go to the seed store buy a pound of wheat, wash a little of it, and chew it. It will chew because of the elastic gluten in it.

A scientific bread maker, teacher and writer on foods, says: "The value of a good quality of yeast bread as a contributory factor in a satisfactory diet can hardly be overestimated." I want to say that same thing in some even more emphatic way. While hundreds of women are striving for some false art in foods for parties and nice occasions, getting truly "dinky" effects with pimento, paprika and such foodless things, fine breads cry to be made.

Good Breads Rare.

More distinction, I believe, can be given to an afternoon tea or an evening party by serving as a part of the refreshments superlatively good and dainty home made breads, in nice small roll shapes, than by any other type of refreshment whatsoever. They are among the rare things! The plain yeast dough is all that is needed. One simple little way to give a plain roll, made up in biscuit shape, distinction is to stick a little piece of candy, a candied cardamon seed, or something like that or some broken rock candy, in the middle when it has risen and is ready for the oven. The sugar heats hot in a short time, and brings the center of the roll to a peak. A few wet sugar crystals which will not melt and caramalise and run down over the roll, are best. Different colors of sugar may be used, and a plate of rolls will then look like a bouquet, even though made up in the simplest way and molded in this simplest of round biscuit forms.

One formula worked with until all its characteristics and all its possibilities are understood will do more to prepare a woman for making easy work of serving a pretty bread for any occasion from a simple tea to a wedding breakfast than a thousand so called recipes. Get the foundation, then add the frills. The other way is like trying to learn "pieces" before you have limbered the fingers and mind in studying music.

Other things to do are many, but there is no real substitute for the bread roll. Yet there are nice things to be done with egg pastes, the most difficult of which is, next to puff paste, what is called choux paste, or what the cream puff is made of. The making of this to perfection is a rare accomplishment. But among the rarest and least showy bits in an elaborate evening collation, recently partaken of, were chicken sandwiches made of little cream puffs split nearly open, with little pieces of sliced chicken inserted.

Another form of this paste which fulfills a breadlike service is that tiny marble of it called a profiterolle, which is used in the consomme in place of the crouton. Elegant? Yes, it is considered highly so, but is not worthy that description unless it is as fresh as the hot roll!

Old Fashioned Soda Rolls.

A quick roll of an old type for which the iron roll pan is required in order to have in the end a crisp bit with almost no crumb is made by the following formula: One cup of twice sifted flour, one teaspoon of sugar, one-half tea-

Just What Mineralava Does That Is Different

The Use of This Beauty Clay As Delightful As Its Results

By Vernon Radcliffe

THOUSANDS of letters have asked us how Mineralava works. The best answer is contained in the trial tube of two generous treatments that Mr. Vivaudou offers to every woman for 25c to cover postage and packing. Mr. Vivaudou realizes that this greatest beauty treatment ever known is so different from any preparation you have tried—its results are so different—that you must actually put it upon your face, and look in your mirror, to understand its success. Do not delay in securing your trial tube. Let your mirror tell you. Like all other women, you will then thank the great Parisian expert for the trial.

The Full Treatment

The full treatment comes in two bottles—Mineralava Beauty Clay and Mineralava Face Finish—exactly the same treatment that exclusive beauty shops have been offering—exactly the same treatment that Mrs. M. G. Scott, the beauty specialist, herself invented and perfected.

Application

You apply Mineralava Beauty Clay with a dainty brush, over the face and under neck. It dries into a light, fragrant mask within fifteen minutes. Within this time you may relax or go about your tasks. As it dries it contracts.

Its medicinal properties penetrate the depths of the pores. The natural properties of mineral clay have been scientifically adapted to the complexion.

Results

You feel it withdraw impurities. Mineralava is the one preparation that insures a complete cleansing of clogged pores.

You feel the purifying blood tingle through each tiny vein. Normal blood circulation through tissues and muscles is restored, and a blooming youthfulness glows and radiates from the cheeks. Go to your mirror in an hour and this color is still yours. Continue the treatment regularly, and it is permanently yours.

You feel wrinkles smooth out and flabby skin become tight. The underlying tissues and muscles are upbuilt by good blood circulation and a well nourished skin defies wrinkles.

1—Mineralava:
Wash the face in lukewarm water and apply MINERALAVA Beauty Clay with the Brush. No injurious hot application necessary.

2—Cold Water:
Relax as the agreeable tingle tells of impurities being withdrawn from the clogged pores—when dry, wash off with cold water.

3—Face Finish:
Apply MINERALAVA Face Finish to nourish the skin and form a base for your powder.

Answers Modern Needs

Mineralava has taken the place of massage. Old-fashioned, unscientific massage has made more old women than age. To parboil your skin with hot water or steam, and knead and maul the muscles of your face is bound to be injurious. Massaging does not remove dirt and impurities from the place where they do the real damage—down below the surface of the skin. Your beauty specialist will tell you so.

Mineralava Beauty Clay is the one way to cleanse the pores, preserve the youthful contour and resist wrinkles—Nature's way—so startling, so evolutionary in idea, so different from any treatment that you have known that you cannot afford not to know it—to try it.

Mineralava Face Finish is a necessary skin food and tonic, acts as a mild bleach and forms a perfect base for your face powder. You apply it at the proper time, after the pores are cleansed.

Lasting Beauty of Complexion

Continue this treatment regularly twice a week and we guarantee, whether you are sixteen or sixty, a complexion of enduring freshness—a smooth, firm skin, beauty and youthfulness of contour, the radiant color of healthy childhood, and the defeat of such dread enemies of beauty as blackheads, pimples, enlarged pores, oily or dry skin, and wrinkles.

Go to your druggist or department store and ask for the two bottles—Mineralava Beauty Clay (sufficient for two or three months) and Mineralava Face Finish (sufficient for six to eight months). If your dealer is not yet supplied, inquire of Mrs. Scott on coupon below.

Trial Opportunity

You may try Mineralava Beauty Clay at once by sending 25c with the coupon. So sure is Mr. Vivaudou that two trials will make you as enthusiastic as all others, that he personally offers this opportunity. Thousands have sent the coupon and become users—send yours now.

Why Men With Strong Nerve Force Dominate Others—

And Fill the Important Positions in Life

Weak Nerve Force is often the sole cause of chronic ill health and lack of success in your undertakings.

How to tell if you are suffering from exhausted Nerve Force and what to do, explained by a physician for the benefit of readers.

Are you falling backwards or going ahead in life? If others pass you, it may be due to lack of sufficient nerve force in your nerve and brain cells to give you the physical power to forge ahead and the mental strength to think the thoughts that win.

A man, who keeps his nerve and brain cells filled with plenty of nerve force, makes his over-mastering presence felt the moment he enters a room.

Countless numbers of men, who started in life with youthful strength and vigor, determined to win, find themselves today on the verge of a physical and nervous breakdown, simply because they did not keep their nerve and brain cells filled with nerve force. In the mad race for success, they have allowed long hours, worry and overwork to drain from their nerve and brain cells that wonderful life giving fluid called "Nerve Force." Without plenty of nerve force, you lose your magnetism, force and courage, you feel your own weakness and others know that you are weak. The moment you enter an office to apply for a position, or try to sell goods, or put through a business deal of any kind, the man opposite you instinctively feels and knows that you are a weak character, and you are therefore doomed to failure, while the strong, courageous forceful, magnetic man, with plenty of nerve force in his nerve and brain cells, successfully faces and overcomes every obstacle and difficulty and goes on to great success in life, while you may sit, a nervous weakling, bemoaning your fate.

Medical science and chemistry have proven that nerve force is a distinct substance, similar to your blood. It is the most important fluid in your body. It gives life to your nerves and force to your brain. If you cannot think right, if your memory fails, if you are irritable and easily upset, trifling things annoy you, look into your nerve force. When your nerve force becomes weakened, all the vital organs of your body lose their normal strength and vigor, and as a result, all kinds of alarming symptoms may appear. From the pains across the back, one person thinks he has kidney trouble; another may think his spine is injured because of the tender spots which may occur thereon. The dull heavy pain in the lower part of the head or the back of the neck, leads another to think he is going to have paresis, and from the disagreeable fulness or pressure in the front of his head, another feels he is going to die from high blood pressure. Sleeplessness and nervous irritability, heart palpitation and indigestion are very common symptoms. Some people are born with a very small amount of nerve-vital fluid, because the nerve force has been squandered by the lives led by their ancestors. Others use up their nerve force faster than the body can make it, but in every case your nerve force is your capital in life, and when it is gone, your capital is gone, the same as if you had lost or squandered your capital in business. When you lack nerve force, there is only one thing that is going to help you, and that is more nerve force. In such cases it is worse than foolish to waste your time taking more stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs. Your starving nerves must have nerve food or something to supply increased nerve force, the same as a starving man must have bread to make new flesh and muscle. For centuries science searched for a nerve force food. At last a celebrated French physician brought to the attention of the Paris Academy of Medicine a remarkable product which contained the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force, in a form which most closely resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. This wonderful product was later combined with organic iron and other valuable ingredients under the name of "Nuxated Iron," so that today true artificial nerve force ready to be transformed into active living nerve force, the moment it enters the body, may now easily be had, simply by taking two tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day, with or after your meals. Organic iron, contained in Nuxated Iron is like the iron in your blood. It not only quickly enriches the blood, but it also stimulates the blood to manufacture a greatly increased supply of the nerve force, so that Nuxated Iron not only feeds artificial nerve force directly to the nerve and brain cells, but it indirectly increases the production of nerve force through the medium of the blood.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE—Over 4,000,000 people are using Nuxated Iron annually. From the remarkably beneficial results which it has produced, the manufacturers feel so certain of its efficacy that they guarantee satisfactory results to every purchaser, or they will refund your money. If you are weak, nervous or run-down, get a bottle of Nuxated Iron today, and if within two weeks you do not feel that it has increased your nerve force, and made you feel better and stronger in every way, your money will be refunded. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. Sold by all druggists.

The Luxurious Bedroom Is Gaining Favor

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

I WONDER if we are not feeling a certain reaction from the austerity practiced during wartimes. It seems apparent in the matter of home furnishing, which suddenly has taken on an unwonted luxuriousness. Particularly is there no stint of drapery fabric. The dressings of beds are extravagantly lovely. Canopies as well as especially designed spreads and pillow covers are simply the rage, and flounces are beginning to outdo each other. Women are even ordering negligés to correspond with their fluffy bed and chaise longue ...ts.

At the last meeting of the Women Interior Decorators' association several members described bedrooms that are being carried out for millionaire clients, and others spoke of things being done for lesser luminaries in the moneyed world, but all laid stress on the "particularity" of the bed trimmings.

A bedroom done in French taste with walls and carpets of biscuit color, with a Louis XVI. bed of French satinwood has a canopy and curtains of light mulberry taffeta, lined with a still lighter tint of mulberry pink. The canopy is at ceiling height, and the curtains fastened with rosettes to the wall at either side of the bedhead. The bed is flanked by two satinwood commodes holding glass candle sticks with pink silk shades. There is no foot board to the bed, but the legs at the foot are seen through corner slits in the taffeta spread.

This is made of mulberry pink silk trimmed with ruchings and edged with ruffles of deeper mulberry. A large piece of mulberry silk divided into intervals of thirds by rows of double shirring, and edged all the way around with narrow plaited ruffling, is laid across the pillows. At the foot of the bed instead of the ubiquitous settee is a simple Louis XVI. footstool, upholstered in mulberry cut velvet, having a pattern with small velvet squares raised on biscuit colored satin ground the legs being painted biscuit color.

Another decorator quoted among her novel treatments of the season that of inscribing in fine needlework on the lining of canopy curtains at the head of the bed some quaint old saw. Above the head of a client luxuriating in the sanitary comfort of a curtained four poster ran lines copied from an inscription in Speke hall, Lancashire: "Slepe not tell u hathe considered how thou hath spent y day past: if thou have well don thank God: if ether ways, repent ye." Another needled inscription reads: "I am old and have seen many things that have been, both quiet and peace, and want and increase."

In narrow rooms beds are placed sidewise of the canopy, as shown in the sketch herewith. This is part of a room far too ornate for the average taste. The bed spread, canopy, and lamp shades are of old gold silk, heavily fringed. The lamps are old ivory, the walls are parchment yellow, and the carpet nigger head brown. The bed is old ivory, but the little stands at the bed ends are of ox blood lacquer, and the frame of the hanging lamp is of ox blood enamel.

Delightfully quaint is a colonial four poster with an arched arrangement curving between the head and foot posts, which are of equal height, and an effect of stuffiness is avoided by having no side curtains. The arched piece is lined with café au lait sateen and trimmed with a valance of old fashioned chintz, having a ground of black with red, purple and tan flowers and green leaves. The chintz is repeated on a slip cover for the big wing chair, drawn up to the mullioned window, but not on the bed cover. Instead a colorful old patchwork quilt is used. No shams or pillow coverings are employed, but the quilt is drawn up over the flat pillows. At the bed head the quaintness is sustained by a little pie crust table, holding a red candle, with brass bowl and inverted bell glass shade. On the table, too, are a juglike water pitcher and tumbler. A bright brass bowl on the window sill holds a live ivy. The pansied walls and the casement curtains are in soft cream color, and the allover carpet is deep violet.

One of our decorators had brought back from France a little ciel de lit bedspread and cushions of orchid satin, exquisitely embroidered. The tiny canopy did not touch the bed at any point, but was used as a wall ornament. It consisted of a little round bracket from which the scarflike ends looped down and up again. Hanging above the bed inside of this draped arrangement was an oval painting in a dull gilded paint.

To the student of furniture history, extravagance in bedding brings a reminiscence pregnant with superstition. We remember that $75,000 spent was upon the laces, linen, and bedspread of Marie Antoinette's summer bed, and that her final furniture, entered in the burial register of the Madelaine, read: "For the coffin of the Widow Capet, seven francs."

J. A. M.: You could have a taupe rug in your bedroom. Have ecru silk gauze glass curtains with over drapes of striped repp, in sage green and old ivory. Have the lamp shades rose colored.

H. C.: First put your parchment paper on your frame, then paint it. After it is perfectly dry apply the shellac, just as it comes, with a brush. When this is perfectly dry apply another coat. Either orange or white shellac may be used—whichever you prefer.

...oon of soda, one cup of sour milk. ...et sour milk with egg beater and ...ix into it thoroughly the well sifted dry ingredients. Bake fifteen minutes in a 500 degree oven or one genuinely hot. Enough for twelve rolls of the right thinness. Remove from pan, which was well buttered, before they can sweat and lose their crispness. When well baked they come off from a clean, smooth iron perfectly.

Such rolls as these are palatable, if deftly baked, when six hours old for sandwiches. An old fashioned process which is perhaps best was to ...e the batter into the buttered iron and let it stand an hour or more. You can hear objections to this, but try it and judge for yourself. These thin rolls ... toasted are excellent.

Stir the wet into the dry. This can be managed most ... if the liquid part does not touch the sides of the bowl. When the dough is well mixed, cut into it three tablespoonfuls of just melted butter, using a spoon, and knead it in lightly with the spoon. This dough should be kneaded as little as possible, just enough to make it compact and so that it will roll out well.

Invert ... and put out on biscuit shapes on it, ... with the egg, and garnish with colored sugars or pieces of rock candy. Bake in a hot oven for twelve or fifteen minutes.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

For a Child of Nine.

"I wonder if it would be possible to obtain through your department a boy's three-wheeled bicycle for which there is no further use. It would have to be large enough for a child of 9 years. I would like to present this to a worthy child who has a great desire for one and who could not buy it. I hope I may be able to find one among the many grownup boys. MRS. S. M. O."

Would Like Quilt Pieces.

"I am greatly in need of bedding, and would like to get some cotton pieces for quilt tops. Anything in this line would be greatly appreciated. I would be glad to pay postage. MRS. G. F. L."

Baby Poorly Clad.

"I have a little girl 2½ years old, badly in need of winter clothing, and I can't afford to get her any now. I am a widow and out of work for the present. MRS. G. L."

Asks for a Dresser.

"The mother of a family of five, having only a chiffonier in which to keep their clothing, finds it hard to keep the clothing and home in order. Can some one help her out with a chest of drawers or a dresser? It will be greatly appreciated. M. G. H."

Who can satisfy either or both of these wants?

Leaves for Winter Use.

Can you tell me what kind of leaves are used to make the winter bouquets? I'm not referring to the lotus leaf, which curls into a roll, but the more open leaf, which we see so much now. What is the process of drying them and making them brisk enough to stand up and look smart with the curve of an ostrich plume. I would like to make some of these for holiday gifts. A quick reply would help greatly because some of these leaves are still green in the woods, but will not be much longer. "MRS. A. A. S."

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

THE NEW THEATER WRAP.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.] I had not seen the costume myself, and the artist was explaining to me how it went.

"It's a 'sortie de theatre,'" he mentioned.

"Well, she throws on something over it, I suppose."

"O, no—that's what 'sortie de theatre' means—it's a wrap, and she doesn't."

Yes; even I had gleaned that much of the French tongue after a prolonged residence among the "peuple Francais," but what troubled me was how she kept from freezing. It didn't look warm enough. That's a subject that troubles me quite a little in this capital of fashion.

"O, well," he answered. "Maybe she wears red flannels under it—I'm not responsible for that. But nothing goes on the outside."

If I were you, I'd put on my red flannels and go in for something with a line such as it followed. I saw a model later, and it makes you look slender, in spite of the fact that it follows the voluminous lines of the day. How to look slim though fashionable is one of the problems that is going to vex us, if the costumers continue to use somewhere near a bolt of material in each performance. The wrap is significant, too, in that it shows the prolonged continuance of the points which Vionnet started now almost two years ago. They are coming higher up on the figure, as the model demonstrates.

You know what lamé means? Worked with gold or silver wire. The material of this wrap is a hydrangea pink and silver lamé, the soft pink silken material being darned, so to speak, with the stiff silver wire. The wrap really consists of two pieces of material, one dropping in points fore and aft, the other on the sides. These points are edged with bands of brighter silver than the material displays.

The collar is awfully attractive in its irregularity. It is of the material, and reinforced with a double line of black satin along its center area. This black casts its influence over the entire mantle, bringing out the luscious pink and soft silver in contrast. The dress under it is of black tulle embroidered in black jet, belted with black satin ribbon, the end of which trails along the floor Poiret made the coat.

Over here we are not at all ashamed to wear artificial fur. The real is scandalously high, and there isn't any besides. A popular material is one that frankly looks inexpensive and depends on its shagginess and coarseness of its effect.

The accompanying model shows what Poiret can do with silk plush. The coat itself is brown. The skirt, gathered on the sides, keeps the fullness on the hips. The silhouette is flat front and back. The really theatrical effect comes in the mufflike collar and cuffs. They are yellow shaggy plush.

There is a material that is nothing more than a sublimation of our old beaver cloth, which in its greater depth comes to simulate the fur so that it cannot be told from a distance. And as for that most precious of all furs, afforded only by the rich and great, which costs more than you can afford and then wears out immediately, and isn't very pretty anyway, I think—of course, I'm talking about baby lamb—they have "got its number" and are making it so that the little seamstress is doing it up into garments that look like a million dollars. All that the owner needs is a white enamel motor car to carry out the illusion of great wealth in her appearance.

The third offering is a dinner dress by Worth in dark brown satin. Doesn't that sound like a queer color for a dinner dress? The day has certainly gone by when there is a sharp dividing line between the lights and the darks, that line falling on the stroke of 6 o'clock. The great departure comes not so much in the fact that you can't wear light clothes in the daytime as that all the old time street colors are now popular for evening.

And as for the light colors, I don't know whether styles have changed or it's only the French way of doing things, but they seem never to wear light colors at all. I used to long for the lovely pinks and blues of England when I first came over here. But now they look awfully "jay."

This brown satin dinner dress is softened and made dressier by a cape of brown lace with a black figure embroidered on it. The cape is circular and sews into the round neck line. Isn't it carrying the cape motif to the extreme limits to go putting it on evening frocks?

Capes are wonderful for actresses. They make them look so elegant and give them something to do with their hands. At the left side of the dinner dress under discussion there is a hanging something or other of ropes of black jet and beads with large things like grapes falling below the hem line.

The fourth offering shows what Paris is doing with real fur and with points, as well. You don't see them so often in fur, but these are extremely effective as they fall below the southern boundaries of either side. The fur is moleskin, and whereas the fullness of the day is wont to cluster to the sides, in this garment it all comes across the back. It has a gray fox collar.

Is Marriage a Failure?

Why do so many marriages go wrong? What are the underlying causes of happy marriages? Are there any happy marriages? What is the matter, if anything, with marriage, the institution?

W. L. George, the English novelist, investigated 150 marriages. One hundred and sixteen cases he eliminated as unsuccessful; in five cases the husband was unfaithful; in ten it was the wife; the husband disliked the wife in three cases and in seven it was the wife who did the disliking. Only nine marriages, Mr. George says, were "apparently successful." "Marriage," he adds, "is on its trial before a hesitating jury."

Look over the marriages you know yourself. How many are successes; how many are failures? And why?

The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published on the question: Marriage—what do you think of it? Address Marriage Editor The Sunday Tribune.

Play the Game.

Since the beginning of time poets and novelists have emphasized the ecstasy of the final clinch and then discreetly ended by asserting that they lived happily ever after. So each girl believes that if destiny only gives her the particular man she fancies eternal happiness follows as a matter of course. Sometimes the author does carry his hero and heroine beyond the minister's amen. In that case the course of true but wedded love is pictured as extremely rough until the great day when, caught sewing on a tiny garment, the wife blushingly whispers her secret, after which our old friend, eternal happiness, again is introduced.

That is utter bosh. Though I proudly believe most of our young people welcome the babies with enthusiasm, it takes gallant courage on the part of both husband and wife to meet the numerous physical, mental, financial, and social adjustments that the newcomers entail. Right here I say hats off to all the worn young mothers with shabby clothes and last year's hats; hats off to the harassed young fathers curtailing on lunches and cigars.

There is too much careless fiction, there are too many cheap movies. Most girls think marriage means a daily dream of romance, and that it is a cure all for sentimental ills. They must be taught it is simply a momentous mutual agreement.

I have noticed it is mostly young wives who find fault with marriage, while the young husbands find fault with their wives. Anything ceases to be romantic when it becomes commonplace. The wife, having the most need of romance, misses it most, and, consciously or unconsciously, blames her husband. The husband, the breadwinner, comes home tired, thinking of home as a haven. The wife expects him to be the perpetual lover. She contrasts him with the heroes of stories she has read or movies she has seen. She is prone to forget that it is her husband's long hours of toil that give her the leisure to read and go to the movies and to enjoy the finer things of life.

The average American man does not find fault with marriage. If his wife is reasonable he usually takes marriage and its responsibilities as he finds them and makes the best of them.

There is endless advice available for young people as to whom, when, and where they shall marry, but young men and women continue to marry the one they love, or think they love, as soon as they possibly can. Schools and parents should instill into the minds and hearts of youth a reverence for marriage as a sacred institution to be entered into with at least as much serious deliberation as would be given a business contract. Marriage is a spiritual contract and a business contract also.

There is nothing the matter with marriage itself. What is wrong is our attitude toward it. Gameness, stick-to-it-iveness, a spirit of fair play is admired everywhere, except in marriage. There the disgruntled mate at once refuses to play the game when he is displeased. Nobody expects anything different. There the trouble lies.

E. L. P.

Begs to Differ.

Well, no doubt it's O. K. if one finds the right life partner. Otherwise I think it must be like Sherman's famous saying.

I wish to reply to E. B.'s letter entitled "Thinks Unwed Are Failures." How any person with a reasonable amount of gray matter could suggest that the girls who remain single from choice should be placed on trial, I cannot understand. If marriage were made more difficult think of the smaller numbers of divorces, of unhappy homes, of weak minded children to fill hospitals. Each of us has the right to choose for herself on the question of single blessedness or marriage.

When I meet Mr. Right I'll have no objections to cooking him three meals a day or darning his sox. Am capable of supporting myself and nothing would induce me to marry merely to have a meal ticket. Prefer staying a bachelor maid. Does anybody else believe as I do? E. M. B.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

STRONG WILLED.

You possess such excellent discrimination and rare judgment, your mistakes are few when you follow your own inspirations. You do not often make the mistake of dividing your energies among different undertakings. You give constant, undivided attention to the matter in hand, and you do not rest until it is completed in every detail. This explains your success in any line of work.

You are ambitious to the ninth degree.

You have lovable qualities in spite of your will and determination to conquer and rule. You never interfere with matters that do not concern you, and you have the strictest respect for confidences entrusted to you. You are a delightful conversationalist, a mimic of unusual ability, are jovial and a good fellow with your friends. Somewhat of a stickler for convention you are, but you have a faculty for adapting yourself to the company you are in.

Suffering distresses you terribly, and you are never happy until you have done all in your power to relieve it.

Sagittarius women are so inclinned to industry that they become fretful or despondent if not kept busy all the time. They take a keen interest in their husband's business affairs, and are of immeasurable help when allowed to share it.

In selecting life mates the Sagittarius born should be exceedingly careful to marry on the same intellectual and spiritual plane as themselves. They are naturally high minded, and anything savoring of vulgarity, obscenity, and licentiousness will warp their souls. It is best for them to marry one born in the signs Aries, Leo, Libra, Gemini, and Aquarius. The children of such a union will be strong mentally and physically and usually brilliant.

The big lesson Sagittarius people should learn is to mix play with work in more generous measure. You must learn to avoid overexertion and to do things in a more moderate way.

The colors for your sign are indigo and green; your gem the carbuncle.

THE sign of the zodiac which governs you is Sagittarius. The planet which rules you is Jupiter, who is nothing if not lavish with gifts to his subjects, endowing them with mental qualities of a high order, including unusual powers of discrimination and a strong will.

You are so strong willed you never like to acknowledge yourself in the wrong, nor own to a mistake. As a consequence you are apt to make bitter enemies. In your own opinion you are simply infallible. You bend all your energies to the accomplishment of your purpose, and where success is attained, as it usually is, you wish to gather unto yourself all the credit. In other words, you wish to command the ship, although you recognize the ability of your crew.

You are fiery, determined, generally quick to act—but you can bide your time. You are possessed of so positive a nature that opposition arouses you. Your anger passes quickly, but the sting of your words is apt to remain.

With it all, you are strongly magnetic and hypnotic. Your intense personality imparts to your speech the power of deeply impressing others. You are an excellent and rapid speaker, though quite noticeably lacking in tact and diplomacy. Perhaps this is due to your hatred for deception and hoodwinking.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair of which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Try Being Kind to Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 17 and am unhappy in my father's house. We always fight together and I am always saying I'm going away with my friend. Some day it will happen. Do you think it is nice for a girl without a mother to leave home? Kindly advise me what to do.

"UNHAPPY."

I think it would be much nicer if you would try to avoid quarrels with your daddy. You must answer him back or there would be no quarrels. And wouldn't you be much happier if you could keep from arguing and threatening to leave home? I think you have it in your power to make your daddy and your home so happy you would never dream of leaving it. Why not try being extra kind to him and see if that does not make you happier, too? It will, I'll guarantee that.

Better Not.

"Dear Miss Blake: Dou you think it would be proper for a girl of 16 to give her photograph to a young man who has asked for it. He is a mere friend to me. NORMA."

No, dear, don't be generous with your photographs! It is most unwise, as I may well assure you out of the experience of hundreds of my correspondents. When there comes a break in the friendship, getting the picture back causes trouble. Besides, men are not always grateful for this kind of a gift. In fact, it is often extremely embarrassing.

WATCH DAILY PAPERS FOR OUR GIGANTIC SHOE SALE

"PIGTAILS"—By Mildred Burleigh.

How I Met My Better Half.

Do you remember when you met the Only Girl and decided that you need hunt no longer for the ideal life partner? Those were the happy days, weren't they? Why not tell about that joyous, romantic time, and share your pleasant memories with the folks who have had like experiences? Just take your pen in hand and write your story. Then send it to the Romance Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune. The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published.

Lost Balance, Then Heart.

Before autos had come in vogue a friend and I drove with a horse and buggy to a football game, and, as was customary in those days, drove as near the field line as possible.

One player, whom I had never met, did some star playing. In my enthusiasm and eagerness to see him making goal as time for first half was about over I stood up in the buggy and was leaning forward to see the finish when the horse took a step and I lost my balance. Reaching out, I took hold of the whip, which swayed with my weight.

The next thing I remember I had fallen over the wheels, and who should be picking me up but said football player, who, having made his goal, had caught sight of my tumble just as the umpire called "time up"?

The football hero has been my husband for fourteen years. E. S. E.

With the Help of Baby.

At the beginning of the late war I came east from Denver to meet my sister, who was going to take a position in war work at Washington. Her husband had just left for France, and I was to take her little son back home for my mother to care for.

In the train when I was returning with baby he behaved perfectly until bedtime, about 7 o'clock, when he commenced crying, and I could not quiet him. A young man in uniform, coming through the car, attracted the baby's attention. He at once ceased crying and watched the soldier with wide open eyes. As soon as he passed on baby resumed his howling with renewed vigor. The young man turned and looked at Billy, who again stopped crying.

Walking up to the seat, the man held out his arms and Billy threw himself into them.

"Guess the litte fellow wants me," the soldier said with a smile.

"It's your uniform; his father's a soldier," I explained.

The soldier took all the care of the child until we reached our destination, and I added his name to the list of boys to whom I was writing and sending candy and magazines.

After the war he came to see me, and as this is the story of how I met my better half the rest need hardly be told. A. P.

Two Pairs of Eyes.

Time: Ten years ago.

Scene: A crowded railroad station.

Cast: Brown Eyes, a reporter with notebook in hand; Blue Eyes, a mere man down to see a friend off.

Two pair of eyes meet—brown and blue. Register fascination.

Brown Eyes saluted by Passing Friend. P. F. also salutes Blue Eyes. Hold whispered conversation with looks directed toward Brown Eyes.

P. F. and Blue Eyes approach Brown Eyes—hearts and eyes aflutter. Introduced. P. F. in fadeout.

Blue Eyes walks away with Brown Eyes. E. E. B.

"DANDERINE"

Grows Thick, Heavy Hair

35-Cent Bottle Ends All Dandruff, Stops Hair Coming Out

Ten minutes after using Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant. One application of Danderine makes thin, lifeless, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous, and just twice as abundant.

KNOWLTON DANDERINE CO., Wheeling, W. Va.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for ever love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

SOME ONE LIKE DADDY.

DEAREST FATHER: Here we are after a beautiful trip. I had to write you this minute to tell you how happy I am. O daddy, dear, it all seems like a dream. To be in this wonderful place with the dearest husband in all this wide, wide world.

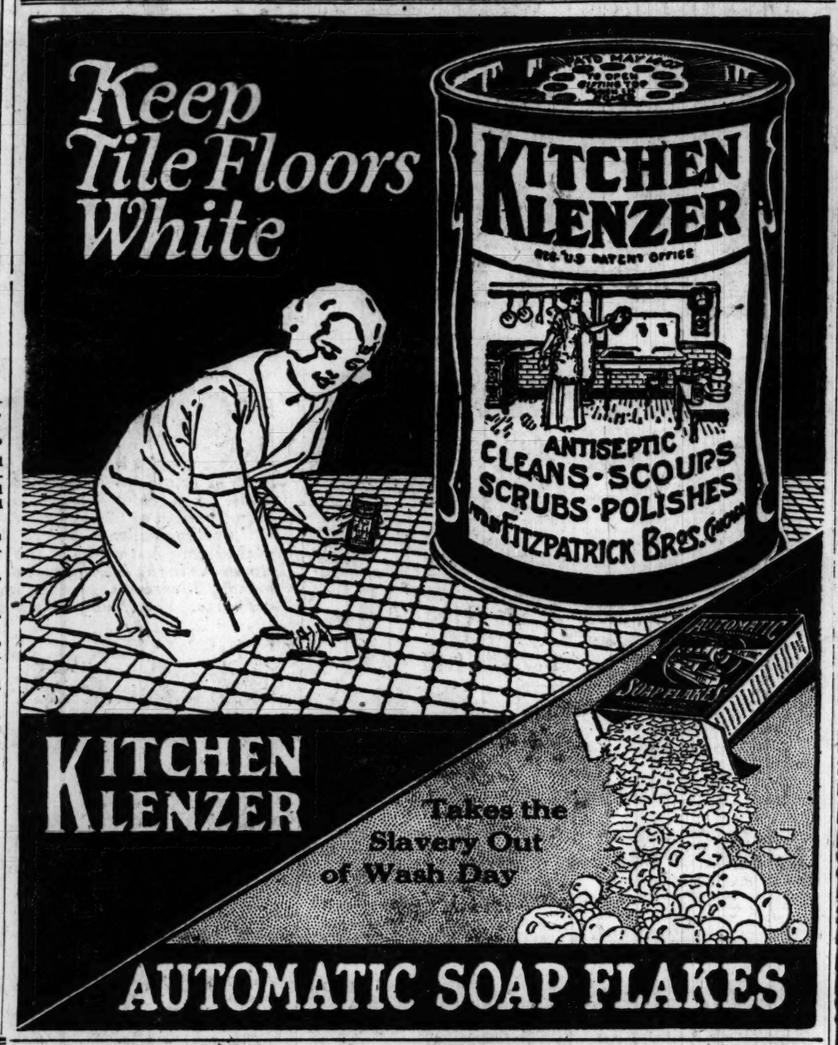
You know I have always said, daddy, that I would marry when I could find a man who was as wonderful a man as you are. I guess I have found him, daddy, for he is all to me that I could wish for.

But I must not rave on to you about this wonderful husband of mine cause this is a love letter to the dearest, sweetest father in the world. I want you to know how happy I am, and I owe all of it to you. You were both a father and a mother to me, and no one could have been more loving or devoted. I love you for it, daddy; you will never know what you have been to me.

You may think that, now that I am married, you will be forgotten. No, daddy, dear. I love you too much for that. No one can take your place from my heart. You have not lost a daughter. You have won the love and respect of a son. Dick thinks the world of his new father.

So good-by, daddy, darling. Remember I love you and will always be

Your devoted daughter, RUTH.



The Iron Food for Vitality

They need it—
"The Iron Food for Vitality"

Try Stewed Raisins with cereal—for instance, puffed rice—superbly delicious

"Iron Breakfasts"

—for high-powered men who forge ahead—delicious, served with cream

"Big" business men are usually of great vitality, robust and vimful—"Iron Men," so called because of iron in the blood.

Scores of them eat what they call "iron breakfasts" every morning to uphold their driving force.

For instance, stewed raisins — the luscious dish that's given to pale, tired, anemic business men at a famous sanitarium in Battle Creek.

For raisins are rich in food-iron which promotes energy and vigor. Men need but a small bit of iron daily, yet that need is vital. Supply it through raisins.

This is a suggestion to you, madam (if you, too, are reading this). Watch your men's food for that iron content. It's important.

This breakfast-fruit is so well liked that it is welcome daily, and it is daily regularity that counts.

Try tomorrow. Learn for yourself how good stewed raisins are, and how the men folks like them.

How to Stew Them

Serve for breakfast every morning and get your daily iron in this way

Cover Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins with cold water and add a slice of lemon or orange. Place on fire; bring to a boil and allow to simmer for one hour. Sugar may be added but is not necessary, as Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins contain 75 per cent natural fruit sugar.

Raisin Bread

Add Raisins to "the staff of life" and you have a perfect food

Raisin Pie

Men are quickly refreshed at night by a dessert like this

2 cups Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins
2 cups water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon corn starch
1 teaspoon sugar

Where's the Thrill in Prize Fights? Asks Miss Tinee

By Mae Tinee.

GAZING back over the week, life seems to have been just one prize fight after another. The Dempsey-Carpentier encounter having failed to gimme my bucket of blood, I thought I'd go over to the Star and see what Jeffries and Johnson could do in the way of furnishing thrills for an amateur.

There things looked livelier. To begin with, the management was all excited. Fifty cents a throw, and everybody seemed to be throwing. A dark gentleman bustled about cackling:

"No ust to go up front, gents—lady "—(I was the lady)—" only seats in de rear. Eight rounds fought. Only seven more to go. Pay your money; wait your turn for th' great Jeffries-Johnson prize fight in fifteen rounds."

I didn't want to go up front, anyhow, so I paid my money and took a rear seat. It was like straddling the Mason and Dixon line. An attendant loudly cried the excellencies of his candies—"a article of value in every box—gentlemen's silk mufflers and ladies' crocheted tablecloths with premiums." The air was democratic with odors.

"Why," sezzi to myself, sezzi, "this must be quite like the ra-al thing, don't you know!"

On the screen Mr. Jeffries was taking a lot from Mr. Johnson and being made to like it.

Now, what editorial we know about fights might be listed in the summary of domestic news. But in our inconsequential opinion, the Jeffries-Johnson combat is more exciting than the fight pulled by Dempsey vs. Carpentier-a. (Long a.)

Of course the photography is not so good—but look when the film was made. Away back when—the year was 1910. (If you can't help being a poet, you can't help it!) But the fight is longer, of course, and then there is an element of the sensational in its history.

Know its history? I didn't until a man in the office, pitying the ignorant, told me.

Johnson won the championship by defeating the mediocre white fighter. Then "for the honor of the race" we went and dug up Jeffries, who had retired and who only asked of the world that it please go 'way and let him sleep. He had grown soft—(I sound just like a sporting writer, I think) and he was far from "standing with reluctant feet," etc. In other words, he was just about where his ideas of a regular prize fight was a story told by Jeffries about a prize fight Jeffries had been in.

But, just the same, he was game and agreed to "come back" if he could. Not having a Cagliostro near with magic drops which should instill new youth in his veins—he couldn't. And pitted against him was a sleek black—aptly called "the black panther"—who always hit first. And they tell me it's the one who hits first who always gets away with it.

So, after fifteen rounds behold the White Hope crumpling helplessly over the ropes. Before he crumples, though, if ever a man showed terror, Jeffries shows it. For about two seconds you see him in a state of abject fear of the awful pursuer, who, I bet you, looked then as big as the Woolworth building to him.

The referee in the Jeffries-Johnson fight wasn't such a buttinsky as the Dempsey-Carpentier chap. Anything went with him, a bloodthirsty cuss! All he did, so far as I could see, was to have a box seat standing up.

But—shrug—even this battle is nothing to make the most delicate lose interest in eating. Personally I advocate prize fights instead of football.

Only, why waste your money on anything so tame? Ask me, ask me, and I'll tell you about some regular pictures that will give you a thrill for your bank roll and still be "within the law."

CLOSEUPS

When Charlie Ray came loping into the lobby of the hotel that morning he had on a coat with a real fur collar. But he hasn't always worn coats with real fur collars, though the evidence shows that he always wanted to.

CHARLES RAY. [Witzel Photo.]

He told me that once when he was playing in a stock company chance gave him a small part instead of the "suping" he had done heretofore.

"I thought the part called for an overcoat with a fur collar," he said. "Besides—well—I wanted that kind of a coat. I didn't have any money. Didn't make any to speak of, and only got along by sponging off my parents. So I put the little old brain to work.

"I happened to think of this stuff that comes off a bird or something—whadda you call it? Marabout? Marabout! So I got four or five yards of it and sewed it on my coat collar. It looked fine, too."

Is Mr. Ray as wistfully sad eyed in person as on the screen? Well, yes, I believe he is. I also do him the credit of believing him to be a good business man, and seeing to it that he is.

If you're a woman and ever go to motion picture theaters alone and, in the half light, happen to look fairly passable, you've encountered the Lounger.

He takes the seat next to you. He crosses his legs so that one foot grazes your ankle. He throws his overcoat over his knees so that part of it is on you. Presently, with cause or without it, he guffaws heartily at something on the screen, and instantly turns toward you. You look straight ahead. Is he discouraged? No! The next thing you know he has his elbow on the arm of the seat almost over in your lap.

There is nothing left for you to do but change your seat or turn on him and tell him where he gets off at.

Of all public nuisances, it seems to me, the lounger is the most abominable! You can't prove anything on him, and yet you know he could be hung for what he's thinking.

White Plague Gives O'Neill Heroine Her Crowded Hour

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—[Special.]—The effects of tuberculosis were tabulated by Dumas, not by the doctors. In medical lore it is a disease which mines lungs and clamps a slow brake on life until it stops. In romantic lore it is a stimulant which excites hearts and accelerates passions to a racing pace. Without her potent germs the Lady of the Camellias were a slow and cautious mercenary not worth the flaming biography which immortalizes her. The disease lifted her from sordid ranks to shine high as a heroine.

MISS MARGALO GILLMORE. [Moffett photo.]

Eugene O'Neill uses tuberculosis to give wings to his latest play to reach the stage. He verifies its purely physical symptoms in "The Straw." These were matters of fact with which Dumas did not concern himself. But the perspicacious visitor to the Greenwich Village theater should not be deceived by the careful plausibility lent to the sickness of Eileen Carmody by O'Neill's painstaking study of the actual physical facts of her life in a sanitarium and her varying weights and temperatures. Without these appurtenances of veracity her romance could have sped as fast and with logic as good. For the purposes of dramatic fate Eileen's is simply an overquickened heart and it could have received its beat from strychnine or sorrow just as logically as from high fever.

This overlong comment on one feature of "The Straw" is made for the purpose of establishing an estimate of it as something much better than a pathological study.

Symptoms Plus One Crowded Hour.

The doctors and thermometers of "The Straw" are its most negligible items. They are decorative but not structural elements of the play. If its story were told without them it would be this:

Eileen Carmody is the daughter of an Irish workman and fiancée of a humdrum salesman. There is no strangeness nor interest attaching to her until one day an oracle reveals that she soon will die. She immediately transcends her small fate and station. The fiancé and the father are left groping among their petty worries far below her, while she is jerked away to a rarer altitude to await her fate and meanwhile do some superior thing within the abbreviated interval of her life. Here she finds Stephen, a young newspaper reporter, regretting the futility of daily records of social gossip for a small town paper and lazily hoping for a chance to write better material. She becomes inspiration and amanuensis to Stephen, personally recognizing his first fiction on a typewriter and leading the cheers when the New York newspaper sends a check folded in a compliment. The foreshortened processes of her heart discover to her her love for Stephen before his for her has begun to form. Haste is her imperative necessity. She confesses her love and frightens her author away. He does not return until the prophecy of the oracle is near its accomplishment. When he learns that a nearing date and hour have been set for Eileen's death he discovers her preciousness. And he is telling her of it in stammering sincerity as that hour strikes.

The oracle is the Carmodys' family doctor. The rare altitude is that of a Connecticut tuberculosis farm. Eileen's haste is a product of fever. A doctor might continue and analyze her passion for Stephen and the beautifully tragic moment at a country crossroads, when she rhapsodizes that passion into his unresponsive heart, as symptoms. But he would be but partly right and, in fact, wholly wrong. It is simpler and more correct to account for Eileen's romance as the compact history of a heart which had no time to prolong either its joy or its miseries. In short, Eugene O'Neill, by an expedient, brings a whole lifetime of sensation and experience within the manageable limits of a play.

Margalo Gillmore and Otto Kruger, who play the girl and the reporter, are two lucky throws in the gamble of casting. I mean by that that the very imperfections of acting with which they are both gifted are as much elements of the great illusion they create in the Greenwich Village theater as their professions. Miss Gillmore, for instance, is overpowered by the power of the fourth scene, wherein O'Neill reveals how an honest girl with puritan antecedents and no skill in speech could give away her love without any hope of return. And her very inabilities to accomplish this moment artfully put the final touch of artless perfection on it.

A Portrait of Marie Antoinette.

Grace George in the Playhouse presents us with a portrait of Marie Antoinette, queen of the French, to hang for purposes of veneration beside those of the stage Lincoln and the stage Joan of Arc. John Drinkwater, it is reported, will soon give us an Oliver Cromwell—another to venerate. Theatergoing is becoming a chronic genuflexion.

MISS GRACE GEORGE. [Moffett photo.]

That the effort in the Playhouse is simply a portrait—a half animate old master—is carefully brought to attention by a scenic device. This is an antiqued gold frame built within the proscenium of the Playhouse stage and decorated with two candelabra. These serve as some sort of justification of the play, which has the verve and snap of a dimly lit organ recital.

The actors do us a number of poses from the life of Louis the Tableau which are more than adequately described in the programmed titles of the three acts: "The Queen Dances," "The Queen Gambles," and "The Queen Pays."

The play clings conservatively to the best known phases of Marie's life, using such dramatic incidents in her hectic career as trained hedges, Versailles statuary, a canopied bedstead, the minuet, pannier gowns, and the guillotine. It gives an impression of needless and exaggerated respect, as if it had been written with the idea to avoid giving offense to the surviving members of the Bourbon family. Miss George, stately and lovely at all times in the center of six vast pictorial costumes, poses to a queen's distaste for ever being caught in an attitude which is not a picture. The rest of the cast suffers from the undramatic necessity of being constantly at attention, like privates in the presence of a general. They suggest one thought about old Versailles. The presence of a king and queen in that delightful picnic ground must once have ruined a lot of good parties.

Cleaning Up Dirty Work.

The best moments of "The Dream Maker" in the Empire theater come when the play stops, the other actors get off the stage, and William Gillette begins to put white powders in the drinks and shuffle the papers. During these momentous minutes he is again Sherlock Holmes or the northern spy. He is back at his old job—cleaning up dirty work at the crossroads.

WILLIAM GILLETTE. WILL ROGERS. [Mishkin photo.]

The crossroads in this particular bit (and it is not a very particular bit) of nineteenth century melodrama is the seaside home of a virtuous wife. Her virtue is kicked back and forth between the villain and his team and the hero and his team. At 10 o'clock on opening night it seemed utterly kicked flat. For Mrs. Bruce had been discovered negligée with a youth en shirt sleeves. At 10:02, however, Mr. Gillette had looked intently into the compromiser's compromising visage and had muttered, "Where have I seen that face before?" And it was obvious to an untrained observer that Mr. Gillette would presently deceive the appearances.

Deceive them he does, and the old Red Mike gang—for 'twas none other—slinks off without the $100,000 check, while Mr. Gillette enfolds Myrian Sears in paternal arms and soothes: "It was nothing but a bad dream, little girl, a bad dream."

If you are very ardent about Mr. Gillette you might go to his play after a very late dinner—starting on the salad, say, at curtain time, and leave promptly with the villains. In the half hour interval Mr. Gillette will gratify with all his old stuff. After all, perhaps all you want is to see Mr. Gillette juggle a stage wait for the weighted significance record once again.

Will Rogers' Harding Story.

As a feat of memory the new Midnight Frolic, now restored radiant to the New Amsterdam theater roof, is prodigious. Mr. Ziegfeld has not forgotten his old audience, and his old audience has not forgotten Mr. Ziegfeld. I dare to assert that Mr. Ziegfeld and his associate, Leon Errol, forgot not so much as one telephone number during the lorn period of frolic's cloistering. Edna, Lillian, Madge, Irene, Mine, Avone—the whole of Broadway's multiplex darlings, in short—were all there, crisp and dainty, again the Melba toast of the town.

The famous first night list, perhaps yellowed and sere, but still legible, had been deciphered correctly. People you talk or even whisper about sat among the tables, an audience as carefully hand picked as the roof chorus

Versatile Miss Garden Adds Salesmanship to Her Duties

By Edward Moore.

MISS GARDEN, having gone through most of the other phases of operatic activity, and made a success of them, artistic and managerial, is now about to try her hand at salesmanship.

Seeing what has happened in the last two weeks—namely: twelve performances of opera to crowded houses, something that has never before happened in the history of the Chicago Opera association—she conceived the idea that it might be a good plan to reopen the subscription books.

There were a good many people who put off securing their subscriptions until too late. There were some others who preferred to wait until they could see how the season was going to shape up under the Garden management. There was still a third class, most important of all, in Miss Garden's opinion, who were financially unable to come in for the entire series of ten weeks.

All three of these categories have been persistent purchasers of tickets for single performances. Therefore, beginning tomorrow, there will be a chance to secure tickets for the last half of the season, the half that will be ushered in Dec. 19. Those who want permanent locations for five weeks can get them by this means, and the price will be just one-half of the full season subscription price.

Coming at this time, it looks like a shrewd bit of merchandising. There is no question that Miss Garden has convinced Chicago. She has delivered what she promised—the best opera company that Chicago, or, for that matter, the country, knows—and the public has responded with great enthusiasm. Never were there performances with so many brilliant points and so few blemishes upon them; never were there such crowded houses to greet them. Opera is in the air this year as it has never been before, and the head and front of the whole proceeding is named Mary Garden.

The one bit of grave doubt that has been permitted to creep into the considerations is the important question as to whether Miss Garden will continue as general director of the organization. She herself up to date has maintained a massive silence on the point. She agreed to stay for the present season, to do what she could, without compensation, to get the company under operation in its new, or civic, phase. Beyond that, as to what will happen next year and the seasons following, no sphinx could be more mysterious.

It is no particular secret that enormous pressure has been put upon her to induce her to promise to stay longer, to agree to a five years' term of directorship. Personally, I hope that the pressure will be successful. There is little question that her own electric, vital personality has been the greatest factor in making Chicago interested in its own opera company. Unfortunately, for the company and for Chicago, if she should decide to withdraw, there is not another similar personality in the world to take her place.

In the meantime the company is safe for this year.

She has made errors of judgment, as has every one else, whether as operatic director or in any other employment in life. Some of her artists are liked better in other lands than they are here. That is also to be expected. Each country, each city, even, has its own preferences among singers, and its own way of expressing the same.

But in one respect she proved herself in possession of the shrewd brain that every director of opera must have to continue in the position. That was in her choice of lieutenants. In engaging Giorgio Polacco as chief conductor and Jacques Coini as chief of stage, meanwhile retaining the superb stage force already there, she took the best possible means to put good performances into effect.

Both these artists have pronounced ideas about their spheres of action and, the intelligent energy to make their ideas function. It has been told frequently, but the telling loses no importance by repetition, that Mr. Polacco is a bit of a wizard with the baton. He revivifies old scores; he has an uncanny insight into new ones; he rejoices in the laborious campaign of preparing a season; and the audiences are incalculably the beneficiaries.

As he is with the aural side of opera, so is Mr. Coini with the visual. He creates effects with color and lighting and massed grouping as Mr. Polacco does with tone and melody and rhythm. Unfortunately, Mr. Coini is under one handicap. There is no way by which ancient scene painting can be rejuvenated offhand, though by a skilled use of colored lights even this is at times almost accomplished. But in time the handicap will be overcome.

In past years there was a theory that the standard operas of the répertoire, the body and bones of the season, upon which its earnings depended, needed no new scenic equipment. They could get along as they were. Only the novelties, those that were hoped to be successes and usually turned out to be dismal failures, were given costly dress, a proceeding that aroused rage or derision, depending upon from what angle one regarded the company.

That, however, is slowly being changed. The operas that people always go to see are by degrees being taken care of, as they should have been long ago. The new setting of "Madama Butterfly," a lovely thing, is one of the steps along the new path. There will be others.

Symphony to Give "Ilia Mourometz."

Mr. Stock promises another performance this week of the symphony, "Ilia Mourometz," by Reinhold Moritzovich Glière. This is the work that was brought back from Russia by Cyrus H. McCormick at the time of the Elihu Root mission to that distracted country. At the time he presented Mr. Stock with the score and orchestration of the symphony he conferred the same courtesy upon the symphony orchestras of New York and Minneapolis.

So far as is known, neither of these organizations ever played the work. This week's performance by Mr. Stock will be the third within four years.

The symphony is partially program music, dealing with ancient Russian folklore of a giant so great that "the humid earth could scarcely bear his weight"; of a horse that galloped as the falcon flies, bestriding lakes and streams, while his tail swept away cities; of a brigand who whistled like a nightingale and bowed to earth thick forests; of the hero, Ilia Mourometz, who smote his opponent such an energetic blow that it knocked him above the great trees of the forest.

Quite sizable heroes, these. When they were first introduced to the Chicago public they aroused a wonder whether one of them, chancing to meet a hippogriff or a minotaur of a milder mythology, would not feel impelled to rub it behind the ears and give it a saucer of milk.

Young Korngold's Lyric Gift.

The Metropolitan Opera company is early in the field with the first of its novelties. "Die Tote Stadt," by the young composer, Erich Wolfgang Korngold, was brought out a week ago yesterday, the occasion marking at the same time the first appearance of Marie Jeritza, Viennese soprano.

From the New York Herald the following remarks concerning her and it are taken:

"There may have been some question about the popular success of the opera, but Mme. Jeritza smiled, danced, and sang her sinuous way into the hearts of her auditors and spectators. They seemed hardly to know just what to make of this darling of the gods, divinely tall, who flooded the auditorium with glittering tone, personal magnetism, and the magic of true comedy.

"The mastery of materials is surpassed only by the astonishing maturity of the boy's grasp of the psychology of the story.

"But as there is too much book, so there is too much music. It is too long, too wide, and too thick. It is too much made. It is heavily orchestrated. Some of it is admirable, some of it is actually moving, and yet other is moving. But most of it is from the brain and the trained technic. Young Korngold's lyric gift is not yet wholly freed from the influences which oppressed his mind in early youth, but it has made much progress toward liberation. He writes badly for voices most of the time. He conceives awkward phrases, and opposes them with incongruous orchestration. But he occasionally rises to a level of really dramatic utterance, dramatic in energy and strenuousness rather than in melodic eloquence."

Programs, Prizes, and Engagements.

They planned renditions of some thirty-five different operas at the Auditorium before the season began. In order to place them all in a season of ten weeks, more performances are going to be necessary. Some of them will be put into a custom of former years and given on Sunday afternoons. Just when they will begin, or what they will be, has not been announced, but they are coming.

The Flonzaley quartet, creators of abiding joy to the patrons of chamber music, will be back this afternoon for the first of three programs of this season. Two ancient quartets and one modern work will be on today's list. The old ones will be Haydn's Opus 64, No. 5, and the third from Beethoven's Opus 18. The

Miss Varesi at Home; Theater Prices Again

By Sheppard Butler.

THE most impressive line spoken during the first Chicago performance of "Enter Madame" last week was not in the manuscript of the play. It came at the end of the second act, when Miss Gilda Varesi, struggling with her tears, turned a sob into a twisted smile and flung her arms wide in a gesture of dramatic appeal. A moment's silence and then, brokenly——

"I am home!"

It was pleasantly theatrical, and it was utterly in the character of the rôle she had been playing. Under other circumstances you might have thought the emotion assumed (the players sometimes do these things) in graceful tribute to the plaudits of her audience. But this, unmistakably, was genuine. You knew that Miss Varesi was deeply moved, and you saw her denote the fact precisely in the manner of the temperamental Italian whom, a moment before, she had been portraying. Quite unconsciously and unintentionally, she remained in the picture.

MISS GILDA VARESI. [Standiford Photo.]

This, I suspect, explains Miss Varesi's achievement in making believable the extravagant rôle which is the play's reason for being. Her greeting to her fellow Chicagoans carried more significance than she intended. Miss Varesi, emphatically, is "home" in "Enter Madame." She helped write the comedy, and to a considerable extent she has dramatized herself. She was born in Italy ten years before she came to Chicago; her mother was a prima donna, and her grandfather was Verdi's favorite baritone. She knows the volatile folk of the opera, and their ways are her ways.

Thus she gives you a Mme. Della Robbia of the most erratic impulses, cabling flowery thoughts anent the moon and stars to a husband who is drifting away from her, forgetting her most passionate outburst of heartbreak in pleased contemplation of a new gown, starting for the ends of the earth a moment after she has promised to stay by her fireside forever.

Here is a creature altogether alien to the Anglo-Saxon temperament and understanding. How many actresses could have made her intelligible—or, indeed, anything more than a caricature—to an American audience? In Miss Varesi's hands she is authentic and convincing. We may not quite understand, but we believe and sympathize, and that, for Miss Varesi, is no small triumph.

Hope Springs Eternal; This May Cheer You.

Signs and portents observable here and there would seem to offer some small crumbs of comfort to playgoers who think they have been paying too much for theater tickets. Consider these items of evidence:

MISS MARJORIE SWEET in "Take It from Me" at the Great Northern. [Lewis-Smith Photo.]

"Take it from Me," which comes to the Great Northern tonight, may be seen from the best seats in the house for $2. This will be the first musical entertainment to return, in Chicago, to the familiar pre-war figure.

George White, who charged $4 for his "Scandals" in New York and has been getting $3.50 for the best seats at the Illinois, will reduce the price to $3 when he moves, next week, to the Colonial.

In New York the management of "The Circle," one of the few sound financial successes of the season, has virtually decided to reduce its top price from $3 to $2.50. William Gillette's return to the stage in "The Dream Maker" was effected there last week at the latter figure.

Oliver Morosco, making ready a new piece for Miss Charlotte Greenwood, announces that it will be submitted in New York at what is known as a "$1.50 top." This proposed move, of course, is the most drastic of all.

"The public will return to the theaters at $1.50," says Mr. Morosco. "To bring back patronage the producers and managers must make it possible for a young fellow to take his sweetheart. The present prices make that prohibitive. Young couples are the backbone of theater patronage. At present they are barred from seeing good shows because the average youth now earns between $30 and $40 a week, and he cannot spend two days' pay for one evening's amusement."

It is hardly to be expected that Mr. Morosco's ideas will be subscribed to generally by the overlords of the theater, but they are beginning to see the light. Almost without exception, the entertainments that are prospering hereabouts are dramatic attractions whose sponsors have tagged their wares at a moderate price. The musical shows, at higher prices, are having hard sledding—a decided reversal of form, since song-and-dance diversion, ordinarily, has been depended on to lure the greater patronage. The showmen are pondering the matter and going over their balance sheets. So perhaps there is hope.

Cohan Comes Back, But Only to Say Farewell.

The puissant George M. Cohan has decided at last what he is going to do, and some authentic tidings concerning his plans and purposes may now be given to a waiting world. He will return to the United States today, if the Carmania arrives, but will not stay long, for he is to transfer his activities as an actor-manager to London.

GEORGE M. COHAN.

In the British capital he has effected a partnership with Charles B. Cochran, known to Americans for his productions of "The Better 'Ole," "In the Night Watch," "Deburau," "As You Were," and "Afgar." Cohan's first play in London will be "The Tavern," in which he will appear himself, acting the rôle played in Chicago by Lowell Sherman. Early in February he will stage a musical revue, probably with a judicious mixture of American and English characteristics.

When the last of his American productions, "The O'Brien Girl," is through with its New York engagement the company will be taken intact to London for a run there. The piece will serve as a link between Cohan and the United States, however, for after their London visit the players are to be sent to Chicago, and, in addition, "The O'Brien Girl" will be played by a second American company.

Cohan will not own an American baseball club, nor will he direct the destinies of the Ringling circus, which he wanted, but which the Ringlings would not sell. According to J. J. Rosenthal, erstwhile Chicagoan and now the Cohan representative in this country, he proposes a genuine American invasion of England.

"London will be his producing center," writes Mr. Rosenthal, "although he will retain his rights as an American citizen. He has 173 American actors and actresses under a three year contract, and he is picking out the people best fitted to be taken abroad. He has laid his plans so far ahead that he knows just whom he wants and what he wants."

News and Views (Mostly News) of the Stage and Its People.

Out of the past comes Bessie McCoy Davis, seldom seen hereabouts since the time, fourteen years ago, when she played in "Three Twins" at the Whitney Opera house (now the Central theater) and won the sobriquet that has clung to her ever since.

BESSIE McCOY DAVIS at the Apollo. [Apeda Photo.]

Pajamas were deemed sensational garb for the stage in that period of its development, and Gus Soehlke, who was staging "Three Twins," wanted a "pajama number." One day the manager of the theater bought a grotesquely clad doll in a shop near by. When he reached the playhouse he showed it to Soehlke and suggested that the idea be worked out in costumes for the chorus.

"Fine!" said Soehlke, whose English was not of the best. "Ve use dot for de payama number."

"Payama!" jeered the manager good-naturedly. "All right then; call it the 'Yama-Yama Man.'"

They did. The number was led by Miss McCoy—that was before her marriage to the late Richard Harding Davis—and since 1908 she has been known as the Yama-Yama girl because the man who staged "Three Twins" couldn't pronounce "pajama."

"The Bat" continues to make records. The play is in its sixty-ninth week in New York and its forty-ninth in Chicago, with no end in sight in either case. Altogether, seven companies are now acting the thriller in the United States, each turning in weekly profits ranging from $1,400 to $8,000.

And this is only a starter. London will see "The Bat" in January, and the English rights will enrich the American producers by $50,000 or more. Arrangements have been made to produce the play in Australia and various other corners of the globe, and eight bona fide offers for the film rights, each accompanied by a check, have already been received by Wagenhals & Kemper. Probably the motion pictures eventually will pay more than $100,000 for the privilege of photographing the play.

All in all, it is likely that by the time "The Bat" has traveled the way of the stock companies and wound up its career, it will have brought in profits of between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

The Shuberts' revival of "The Chocolate Soldier" will start its career on Dec. 12—sooner than was planned—at the spacious Century theater in New York. Meanwhile "The Rose of Stamboul," which was to have been the Century's next production, is deferred, and Mlle. Alice Delysia, who probably will be its chief player, continues on her way in "Afgar." The latter extravaganza no longer has Lupino Lane in it. He is off for a visit to London, whence he will return shortly to act in the movies.

"Two Blocks Away" expired last night in Louisville, and the show will be sent to the storehouse, leaving Barney Bernard, for the time being, with nothing to do.

Miss Laurette Taylor has a new play, by J. Hartley Manners, which she proposes to reveal late in December. It is said to be entirely different in character from any of its predecessors in the Manners repertory.

There is no longer any mystery as to the authorship of "Marie Antoinette," Miss Grace George's new play. The caballistic "Edymar" which has been used as the playwright's pseudonym conceals the identities of Aubrey M. Kennedy and Margaret Mayo—the last three letters of Kennedy's name and the first three of Miss Mayo's.

This department was in error last Sunday in saying that Miss Vera Berliner had taken the rôle of the young musician in "The Woman of Bronze." Miss Berliner does contribute a violin solo, but she acts in one of the smaller parts, and that of the girl musician is still played by the vivid Miss Mary Fowler, whose performance is one of the high lights of the production.

During the first twelve weeks of its Chicago engagement, "Lightnin'," at the Blackstone, has played to 133,290 citizens from Chicago and elsewhere. This far exceeds the attendance in New York during the corresponding period of the play's run in that metropolis.

Miss Gilda Leary, for many months the player, in Chicago, of the sorely beset heroine in "The Bat," will be among those present with H. B. Warner in Cosmo Hamilton's new play, "Danger."

An impressive cast is being recruited for "Little Miss Raffles," a new musical comedy by Guy Bolton, Clifford Grey, and Ivan Caryll. Those engaged include Miss Vivienne Segal, Lawrence Grossmith, Henry E. Dixey, and Miss Fay Marbe.

Wallace Eddinger will be seen soon in "Captain Applejack," a play now running in London under the title of "Ambrose Applejohn's Adventure." Walter Hackett, a former Chicagoan, is the author.

The Victoria Players are tackling a sizable task on the north side this week. They are staging Langdon McCormick's "The Storm," with all the fixings, and if you remember the melodrama's mechanical effects at the Olympic, you know that reproducing them in a day or two is no insignificant job. At the Victoria, however, they build all their own scenery, and Manager Gazzolo assures his patrons that the blizzard, the fire, and the falling trees are all guaranteed.

The Hull House players will present St. John Ervine's "John Ferguson" on Wednesday night and every night thereafter for the remainder of the week, with a matinée on Saturday. The play was one of the New York Theater guild's more notable productions in 1919.

A new winter edition of the Benson Marigold revue will come into being at the Marigold tomorrow. Miss Virginia Fissinger, the dancer, is the chief performer.

section. If not—that's a shame, since you're so interested. He is rather a wonder, isn't he? Thanks for your pleasant letter.

MABEL: You are thinking of Hugh Thompson. He was born in St. Louis in 1887. Good looking, isn't he?

O'RIEN ADMIRER: Shure! Address Constance Talmadge, 318 East 48th street, New York City. O. "The Frame of Public Favor" went out of existance long ago. Yeppy, I liked it, too. T'wekkum.

LOST CHORD: Still lost, are you? Why doesn't somebody find you? Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the cast you wish. It's a long one, and I haven't room here for it. Wallace Reid is 31; Douglas Fairbanks, 38; Kathlyn Williams, Flora Finch, Kitty Gordon—dunno; Virginia Pearson, 33.

CARRIE: Yes, the tall dark gentleman in a dress suit "who was not a member of the reception committee" was Tom Gallery. They tell me he was introduced and made a little speech. Where were you at that time, Carrie?

X. Y. Z.: Yes, I've heard the rumor that Jack Dempsey is to marry Bebe Daniels—and have taken it with the usual little grain of salt. If he does—all right. If he doesn't—well, there'll probably be another rumor to set us guessing. 'Fall right, anyhow—yes?

PASADENA: Seems to me you come a long way for information. Hast never been to Hollywood? Agnes Ayres was married to Capt. Frank Shucker. Divorced, I understand. And they say now she's back in the courts seeking the right to drop his name. O shuck-ers!

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

modern piece is the andante' movement from a quartet in E flat by Georges Enesco, the Roumanian-Parisian composer. It will be played from manuscript.

Leon Marx, violinist, and a former member of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, has made an affiliation with the Sherwood Music school.

Claire Dux will make a trip from the Chicago Opera association to New York to appear in a special concert at the Metropolitan Opera house. Richard Strauss will direct the Philharmonic orchestra of that city, and Miss Dux will be the soloist. It will take place Tuesday.

Two additional prizes for aspiring composers were offered at the board meeting of the National Federation of Music Clubs at St. Louis recently. One is for a "lyric dance drama," a performance of music and action upon a musical theme, intended to be of less dimensions than a pageant. The best example submitted upon this idea will be entitled to a prize of $1,000.

The other is a $500 competition for a chamber music work written for violin, flute, oboe, and two voices. These are added to the prizes of $100 each for cello and organ offered by the St. Cecelia club of Grand Rapids, Mich.; a violin prize of $100 by the Musicians' Club of Chicago, and another of the same value for a chorus competition for children's voices.

Herbert Gould, Chicago basso, has been engaged to sing in Rachmaninoff's work for orchestra and voices, "The Bells," which Rudolph Ganz plans for the St. Louis Symphony orchestra in the spring.

At first it was difficult to rejoice. The occasion was so manifestly one for some devout ceremony, such as a chorale—"Thank God for Ziegfeld. He keeps us out at night." But rusty capacities for foolish glee were presently limbered.

Will Rogers had something to do with this. Take your troubles to Mr. Rogers, who makes light of them, as, on opening night, he made light of the quandaries of Mr. Harding. Mr. Rogers saw Mr. Harding lately in Washington, at a moment when the President's brow must have been furrowed with the cares of conference. And—let Rogers tell it:

"Mr. Harding told me one of my own old stories.

"'Where did you hear that story, Mr. President?' I asked. And he came back:

"'Where did you tell it, Mr. Rogers?'"

And, "take it from me," quoth Rogers from the midst of his lariat, "if any one thinks Harding went straight from a small town to the presidency without any stops on the way they're coo-coo. That bird's been around."

The new Frolic is fleet and light, sometimes as fleet and light as Mr. Rogers' lariat. It takes you over a brisk rapids of dance. Including Leon Errol, who commits one of his inebriate takeoffs of a spreeing tumblebug, there are no less than ten dance numbers out of a possible sixteen.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Wonder What the Pilgrims Would Think About Us

By Mme. X.

OUR customs and manners have changed a great deal since that first dinner party given by the pilgrim fathers in the—was it the sixteenth or seventeenth century—when they celebrated the timely arrival of that ship from England laden with turkeys, cranberry sauce, and pumpkin pie. What would our New England ancestors have thought of paying nearly 60 cents a pound for our national bird, I wonder, as Chicagoans are doing this year?

But there are so many other things, more or less connected with the celebrating of this purely American festival which have changed that the price of turkey would sink into insignificance in comparison. Every feature of our homes and housekeeping is so different that the housewife of that time would find herself utterly at loss in a modern kitchen.

Instead of the great open fire with a smoke blackened pot hanging over the blaze, instead of the brick oven, the herbs hanging from the rafters, the copper and earthenware cooking vessels, and the other concomitants of a pioneer kitchen, she would probably poison her family with canned vegetables left too long in the cans after the cans were opened, and finally suffocate herself by inadvertently blowing out the flames of the gas range, so far have living conditions altered since the pilgrims landed on our stern and rock bound shores.

Has the race weakened with the invention of labor saving, comfort making devices? Could the descendants of those sturdy folk cope with and endure the hardships, discomforts, and privations which met their forefathers? I doubt it.

Light in a Dark World.

Not that all is beer and skittles for those who come to this country nowadays to found families. Somewhat of the nature of this problem is suggested to any one who visits the Red, White, and Blue club at 1338 Wade street, near Milwaukee avenue.

An average of 600 children, of all ages and many races, congregate there daily for the friendly warmth and kindly care which its presiding genius, Mrs. Edelstadt, and her pretty daughter, Miss Vera Edelstadt, shed on this swarming, noisy, enthusiastic outpouring of youth. It is one of the impressive sights of the city. Situated in one of the poorest neighborhoods, it is a splendid beacon of light in a world that would otherwise be pretty dark to the folk thereabouts.

To these hundreds of children this club is the great fact of their lives. They are invited to come without any question, without any restrictions, with no open attempt to instruct or enlighten them. They are simply made welcome as the good Samaritan would have welcomed them. Their dirty little faces glow with happiness and contentment as they doff their poor garments and settle themselves down to their games, or their books, or to whatever employment their fancy selects. Little girls can learn cooking or sewing, but it is as a game, a delightful recreation that this instruction comes to them.

As most of the children have come there from public schools it is not thought advisable to make them think that more instruction awaits them at the club. It is to them their own territory, a land of delight, warm and radiant, where diversion, sympathy, joy are to be found for the asking.

The Joy in Children's Faces.

Such freedom arouses in them a chivalry and sense of responsibility, a desire for decency which is to the mere onlooker a miracle. Although hundreds of books are lent to the children not one has been lost. Although many of them come from the most poverty stricken homes in the northwest side of the city there is seldom or never anything taken from the clubrooms. The many games are carefully lifted from the shelves and put back by grimy little hands.

The visitor enters directly from the street into the main playroom, a large, light apartment on the ground floor of an ancient building. There is no bell to ring. The door has no key to turn. It stands, except in cold weather, open to one and all. A constant stream of little boys and girls comes and goes. In spite of the commotion and noise, many of the youngsters sit unnoticing in little groups, either playing some game together, or reading.

A small billiard table is always surrounded by lads of varying ages, playing with battered cues and lopsided balls on a much the worse for wear green surface. But O, the joy and absorbed attention in their faces! A good sized room off this main hall is devoted to larger boys with a less exhausted billiard table, around which there is always a fluctuating crowd of lads from 16 years up.

Upstairs there is a fine large dance hall with a raised place all around it for chairs and a platform for musicians. It looks as if at some time it might have been a lodge hall. Here there are dances two or three evenings a week where the young people provide their own music. Mouth organs, "the squeeze box" (accordion), and a drum usually make the dance music.

Raising Necessary Funds.

Nearby there are a dainty kitchen, a pretty sewing room, and a tiny office for Mrs. Edelstadt, where she can keep her records and accounts. How the little girls love the kitchen and sewing room! They make dresses for themselves or baby clothes for the baby at home, or they learn to concoct savory dishes.

This account of the Red, White, and Blue club is not out of place in a social column, because it is a social club much more enjoyed, much more important, much more far-reaching in its influence than the Casino, or the Saddle and Cycle, or the South Shore Country club. What its members get there will make in the long run much more difference to you and me and the rest of the world than anything the members of those other social clubs get at their reunions. It is one of the best mills for grinding out good Americans from the grain and chaff of Europe and Asia.

To provide the needed support for this important institution the Christmas festival at the Coliseum is being organized and run by the woman's board of the Red, White, and Blue club. Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman is president, Mrs. F. C. Letts is vice president, and others on the board are the Mmes. Arthur Cable, Morris Johnston, W. R. Odell, Howard Gillette, Robert G. McGann, E. S. Beck, Julian Mason, Edward Fifield, Kay Wood, Orville Babcock, and Charles Frankenthal, and the Misses Helen Gilbert and Muriel McCormick.

Christmas Fête at Coliseum.

The Coliseum fête is not alone for the benefit of the children of the Red, White, and Blue club but is a municipal festival to which all the youngsters of the city are welcome. There will be a giant Christmas tree; Santa Claus will come daily down a chimney with presents for every child there. There will be innumerable side shows of varied possibilities of delight. Last year tickets were given out through the public schools. This year there will be other avenues by which the children of the city can gain tickets admitting them to the cheerful scene. It is going to be "some party, believe me," a social affair of the widest moment.

The two Assembly balls, Dec. 2 and Jan. 13, in the Blackstone hotel's crystal ballroom may be the winter's most fashionable social gatherings, but they won't be so intensely dramatic and full of possibilities to those who attend them as the afternoons of the Christmas festival in the Coliseum, both for the children who visit that famous convention hall and those who haunt the Red, White, and Blue club rooms in Wade street.

Always gay are the Bachelor and Benedict balls, and the one last Wednesday evening at the Blackstone was no exception. The week was unusually full of balls. The following evening was the dance at the Casino given by Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Letts for their daughter, Miss Hollis Letts. The night after was the ball at the Blackstone which Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Field gave for their daughter, Miss Katherine Field, while last evening was the debut of the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Higginson, Miss Lee Higginson, at a dance given by her parents at the Casino. Dancing slippers are already getting a little worn at the toes and down at the heels with the more than usually heavy wear they've had to stand so early in the season.

Offsprings of Suffrage.

Two million strong is the League of Women Voters with 27,000 members in Illinois. Tomorrow there is a six day regional conference opening here at the Congress hotel in which seven western states are represented. The national chairman, Mrs. Maud Wood Park, is coming, also the vice chairman, Miss Elizabeth Hauser. Both are remarkable women and both will speak to the assembled members of the league. Although it is a regional conference, women from all over the country are gathering to discuss such subjects as child welfare, women in industry, food supply and demand, social hygiene, etc.

This league is the offspring of the old suffrage associations. Its object is to make intelligent citizens of the newly enfranchised women, and help them to use the power conveyed to them by the nineteenth amendment for the benefit of the country at large.

The passage of the Sheppard-Towner bill in the last session of congress was largely due to the efforts of the members of this league. This bill aims to reduce the enormous waste of life which our birth statistics report.

Do you realize that we, enlightened, free people that we are, stand next to the bottom on a list of fifteen civilized nations in the matter of successful births? In 1918, the first year we collected those statistics, 250,000 babies and 28,000 mothers died in childbirth. Only one other country has a worse record. This is what is called an "ignorance death rate"; that is, it is a mortality which might have been avoided by more enlightenment. This enlightenment the bill proposes to spread throughout the land. The combined death rate of mothers and babies was larger that year than our entire casualty list in the great war.

Social Side of Conference.

The conference will open tomorrow with reports and committee meetings. In the evening there will be a meeting, at which Will Irwin will speak on "The Next War"—cheerful subject! Tuesday there will be further reports and discussion, followed by a banquet in the evening, when Mrs. Park will be the principal speaker. Wednesday there will be a luncheon, at which Miss Hauser will be the special guest of honor.

The hospitality committee, of which Miss M. J. Rozet is chairman, includes the Mmes. Watson Blair, Tiffany Blake, Jacob Baur, Joseph T. Bowen, J. V. Farwell, Kellogg Fairbank, James Keeley, Charles Hamill, George Higginson, W. Prescott Hunt, James Morrison, George Packard, A. S. Peabody, J. M. Patterson, Arthur Ryerson, and Russell Tyson, and the Misses Jane Addams, Cornelia Conger, and Mary Rozet Smith.

This committee, beside getting up the banquet and the luncheon, is giving a tea tomorrow at the Casino for Mrs. Park, while on Monday Mrs. Watson Blair is entertaining Mrs. Park at luncheon. Her other guests will be the Mmes. Harold McCormick, James W. Morrison, J. Lewis Cochran, Frederick Countiss, Edward Swift, George A. McClintock, Harry Pratt Judson, Hugh J. McBirney, Stanley Field, Robert G. McGann, J. M. Patterson, and D. Mark Cummings.

The final three days of the conference will be given up to instruction in efficient government, when a half dozen eminent speakers will be heard on the various subjects which come under this head. When the women scatter to return to their homes they will take back many things on which they will undoubtedly ponder and reflect. It is worthy of note that some of the women most enthusiastic and active in the league were among the strenuous opponents to suffrage. They now argue that since the ballot was thrust on them they must make the best of it and prepare to throw their influence in the right direction. This sort of woman is both hated and feared by the machine politician. God speed her on her way!

Actors' Equity Ball Here.

There is no gayer ball in the New York social season than the annual Actors' Equity association ball at the Astor hotel. This year this association is going to give such a ball in Chicago on Dec. 17 at the Congress hotel, in the famous gold room, where one of the best floors in this part of the country invites the enthusiastic to dance.

There will be a vaudeville show running through the whole evening, part of the time in the Pompeiian room and part in the ballroom. Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank heads the advisory committee and the list of patrons and patronesses, which will have on its roster 100 of the most prominent names of the city.

This is a hard year for the dramatic profession, and before the winter is over many a troupe is likely to be stranded far from Broadway. Can you imagine a more dismal fate than to be thus cast on an alien, unfriendly shore sans money and sans friends? Some of the money it is hoped to raise by this ball will be devoted to returning these hapless ones to their own place. Some of it will be set aside for the old and outworn of the profession. A career on the stage does not allow a large margin for provision for that nightmare of actors and actresses, old age. Yet you never have a direct appeal from the followers of this calling for money. When they turn to the public for help they always give it its money's worth and more.

No other folk are more generous in donating their time and strength to assist in raising money for local charities. Especially during the war their generosity was unbounded in the way of performances and cooperation in campaigns for raising the great war funds. It is, therefore, certainly up to us to see that their ball is a great success socially and financially.

Something Different in Plays.

Among those most interested in getting up the ball are Bruce McRae, who is Miss Ethel Barrymore's representative here, she being head of the Actors' Equity association, and Frank Bacon, who is delighting Chicago audiences in "Lightnin'." Also Harry Powers, Evan Evans, and Guy Hardy are actively working for the success of the affair, while Mrs. Joseph Fish is the treasurer for it.

Apropos of matters dramatic, one of the best pieces that has come this way in a long time is "Enter Madame," at the Playhouse. Not since we saw Wallace Eddinger and Miss Irene Bordoni in "Sleeping Partners" (which was translated from the French), two or three years ago, have we seen anything quite so delightful. It is real, grownup comedy, such as the Latins know how to evolve and produce. We Anglo-Saxons can't compete with them in this high and especial art. We are either, as with Bernard Shaw, using the stage as a medium for propaganda or we are boisterously inane in our gayety. Even Hattonian epigrams cannot make a play. Nor can the average American actor attain the subtle perfection of technique so often evident in the work of Italian and French players.

National Bridge Tourney Arranged.

There is a great time coming for bridge players. Their favorite pastime is to be linked up with the north and south poles and the east and west meridians. All over the country a sort of cosmic tournament is being organized at which all the women sitting on the north sides of the tables will play the same hands, while all the players on the south sides and those on the other two sides will be likewise playing the same relative combination of cards. Such violent synchronous brain work, it might well be feared, would be strong enough to disturb some of the earth currents which run up and down and round and round the earth.

It is called "par auction." It is being organized under the auspices of the New York Whist club, and its ramifications extend from New England to California and include all the intervening territory.

From Nov. 28 to Dec. 10 thousands of bridge players, presumably women, as it is afternoon bridge which is being organized, will be tackling the same problems at approximately the same time. The scores are sent to headquarters, the play is criticized, the player is told how he might have improved on it, and the winners at each table become possessed of the cards which have been used. As these are a new and choice invention of peculiar merit from the point of view of the card player, this in itself is incentive to careful play.

Milton C. Work, author of a work on cards entitled "Auction Methods," and other authoritative books on the same subject, has originated this plan of a national tournament. In Chicago Mrs. George Dixon is chairman of a committee to organize a Chicago contingent of this nation-wide game.

On Dec. 1, which is next Thursday, there will be a great gathering of bridge players at the Drake hotel at 2 o'clock to play this par game. Tables may be engaged through Mrs. Dixon, 1250 Lake Shore drive, or some member of her committee. She has a group of twenty-five women helping her, with Mrs. Milan Hulbert and Mrs. Ogden Armour as vice chairmen.

France's Need Still Urgent.

The funds derived from this cosmic and national bridge game will be devoted to helping the work of the women working under Miss Anne Morgan for devastated France. This organization is accomplishing wonders in that haggard, ravaged district in northeast France in the way of supplying homes for the returning population, organizing dispensary service supplying the farmers with agricultural equipment and their families with clothing.

Old Kipling knew his kind when he invoked the Lord God of Kings with the words "Lest we forget, lest we forget." It is only three years since that pillaged, blasted part of France was one of the incentives which set this country on fire with martial zeal. Yet today it is hard to attract attention to the work of the few to whom that part of France is still a vivid reality.

In answer to those who say that this work should be left to the German reparations committee, Miss Morgan and her cohorts reply: "It's all very well to say, 'Wait for the Germans,' but what will the inhabitants of those farms and villages do in the meanwhile with no roofs over their heads, no clothes on their backs, no care for their worn out bodies?"

The Influence of Good Cooking.

There is nothing that so ministers to a calm and sane state of mind as good, nourishing, appetizing home cooking. What Emerson said about clothes—that to be well dressed gives a satisfaction which religion itself does not impart—might be equally accurately said about being well fed. To this end the School of Domestic Arts and Science devotes its energies. It was incorporated in June, 1901, as an institution not for profit. Since that time it has taught cooking, sewing, home economics, serving, dressmaking, and millinery.

Among its founders were the late Mrs. Edmund Burke, the late Mrs. H. M. Wilmarth, the late Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, the late Mrs. H. G. Selfridge, the late Mrs. George S. Isham, and the late Mrs. A. C. McClurg, besides many other women still active, we are glad to say, in benefactions.

A year or two before her death the late Mrs. Potter Palmer, as an endowment, gave to the school the residue of the money left in the coffers of the board of lady managers of the World's Columbian exposition, which amounted at that time to $96,000. The interest on this sum is to be devoted to a school for homemaking in Chicago.

Last year the north side branch of the society moved into a fine new home, the old George E. Adams house at Belden avenue and Clark street. This has been fitted up to make it the most complete shrine for all domestic arts to be found anywhere today. Last winter over 1,000 women attended their night school. Think what that means in the spread of the benign influence of good cooking! The opening reception of this branch takes place next Thursday afternoon at 350 Belden avenue.

Mrs. Lynden Evans is president, Mrs. Charles F. Pietsch is vice president, Mrs. C. Bal Lihme is second vice president, Mrs. Alfred Granger is third vice president, Mrs. Jessie C. Barnes is recording secretary, Mrs. John L. Shortall is corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Sarah Powers is treasurer.

Marcia Dear—

Bill came home from college and he's the same old Bill. Say Sis, he said, do you know where I can get some good looking Christmas cards? Come with me, I said and we headed straight for Hall's.

They now have their stock Christmas cards on display and my word—I never saw such a marvelous selection.

There is every kind of a card from the most rigidly formal to the most comically informal.

There's a card that carries a hearty slap on the back for the hale fellow well met—there's a card with a big laugh for the jovial person—there's a sincere handclasp for just that kind of a friend and—Oh, I couldn't begin to describe them all—but there's a card for every person and every purpose you can imagine at Hall's, the Social Stationers and Engravers, Eight Michigan Avenue, South.

As ever

Y. W. C. A. Opens Centers to Public Hospitality Week

By Kate Webber.

A BRAND new sort of campaign—one for friends and not for funds—will be launched tomorrow by the Y. W. C. A., which announces a "Come and See" week Nov. 28 to Dec. 4, during which time the public, long accustomed to giving generously to Chicago girlhood through the association, is cordially invited, not to give more money, but to visit the Y. W. C. A. centers in the city, see the gymnasiums, swimming pools, clubs, classrooms, boarding homes, and cafeterias in action, and find out just how its past contributions are being spent.

MRS. COCHRAN SUPPLEE. [Moffett photo.]

"Our sole object is to strengthen old friendships and pledge new ones to the Y. W. C. A.," says Mrs. Carl C. Bullock, president of the Chicago association. "It will simply be a special hospitality week, when hostesses and guides will be ready at any time of the afternoon or evening to show visitors through the various centers, and let them see the work going on. The regular program will, as far as possible, be carried on throughout the week, with a few special events scheduled from time to time."

Among these special events will be a talk by Miss Helen M. Bennett to the industrial club girls of central branch, and to the "Come and See" visitors on "The Girl and the Job," tomorrow night at 7:30, and health night the same evening at west side branch, when there will be a gymnasium and swimming exhibition, and a health talk by Dr. Sarah Hobson, illustrated with Y. W. C. A. motion pictures. Dr. Hobson will speak at central branch on the same subject Tuesday night. Thursday night will be membership night at central branch, with Miss Jane Addams as principal speaker. On Saturday afternoon invitations have been issued for teas at the National Foreign Student foyer at 1320 East 57th street, and the Industrial Service center, 432 South Peoria street. "Come and See" week will end next Sunday with special vesper services at central, west side, and Indiana avenue branches.

A series of bird's eye motor trips have been organized to take the visitors on a tour of several of the important association centers. These tours have been arranged by Mrs. Cochran Supplee, who has formed a volunteer motor corps to supply cars leaving the central and west side branches and the south side centers on morning, afternoon, and evening tours.

The committee is made up of Mrs. Carl C. Bullock, Mrs. William H. Hubbard, chairman of invitations; Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe, chairman of hostesses; Mrs. Cochran Supplee, conducted tours; Mrs. Clifford W. Barnes, independent tours; Mrs. N. W. Campbell, and Mrs. James L. Houghteling.

Y. W. C. A. centers taking part in the activities will be central and west side branches, the Indiana avenue branch (colored), the Industrial Service center, central and west side residences, Englewood and Hyde Park Girl Reserve centers, the cafeteria at 1612 West Van Buren street, and the National Foreign Student foyer.

NEWS OF THE MEN'S CLUBS

The Sunday Tribune starts a new department today—news of the men's clubs. Much space always has been given to the activities of women's organizations, and as the original clubs were composed of men they would seem to be entitled to consideration. Secretaries are invited to send notices of meetings and news of their clubs for publication in this department. These should reach the office not later than Thursday of each week and should be addressed to the Club Editor of The Tribune.

Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, will address the Rotary club at its luncheon on Tuesday at the Hotel Sherman. His subject will be "The Open and Closed Shop from the Trades Union Point of View." The Rotary club is composed of 400 business men, one from each classification in a business. Paul A. Westburg of the Westburg will preside.

The Business Men's Luncheon club which started with the Rotary club of Chicago in 1905, has grown to 250,000 members in eighteen countries. Its influence, which is directed toward fellowship in business, with the object of developing the individual member's capacity in service in his daily relations—personal, civic, and otherwise—has grown to mean the life of many a business community. These organizations back the Chamber of Commerce; if they haven't one, they start it, as in Cicero, Ill. They organize boys' clubs; they help crippled children, and they help in hundreds of different ways in which the individual member is expected to give and does give personal service, in his church, local men's club, his own business, and his trade association.

Plans have been completed for the seventy-seventh annual convention of the D. K. E. fraternity, which is to be held from Wednesday until Friday of this week at the Drake. All the chapters in the country will be represented at the convention, which is the first assembling of the "Dekes" since 1911. The program includes a reception on Wednesday evening, business sessions at the Drake on Thursday, with the convention photograph to be taken at luncheon, and theater party followed by a smoker and entertainment that evening at the Blackstone. The third business session will be held on Friday morning, and Friday noon the entire convention will motor to the stockyards, where they will be luncheon guests of Harold Swift. A reception Friday afternoon and a banquet that evening will close the festivities. George W. Graha, vice president of the national organization, is general chairman of arrangements. The committee chairmen for the convention are Harry A. Dow, Charles A. Munroe, Hamilton Gibson, Henry A. Cooper Jr., John H. Stevens, Eugene E. Ford, W. Roy Carney, Jacques de la Chapelle, and Tracy C. Drake.

Frederic N. Withey, vice president of the National Surety company of New York, will speak on "The Personal Equation in Business" at the meeting of the Kiwanis club Thursday noon at the Hamilton club.

The Executives' club of Chicago will meet for luncheon on Friday at the Hotel Sherman. Mr. Burkholder of the Art institute will give a talk on "Art."

The Traffic club meetings for this week include a dinner tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock, when the Chicago Wholesale Conference association will discuss shipping problems. On Tuesday the street traffic committee of the Association of Commerce will hold a luncheon at 12:30 o'clock.

Prof Richard Burton of the University of Minnesota will lecture on "The Movies and the Multitudes" tomorrow evening at 8:15 o'clock at Binai center.

The Woodlawn Men's club, which was organized on Oct. 8, will have its next meeting the second Tuesday in December. Though there was an organization of Woodlawn men before the war, no definite work has been started until this autumn. The ultimate hope of the organization is to build a community center, where work and play may be carried on under ideal conditions. The club is non-partisan and nonsectarian, and is working to promote the best interests of Woodlawn along civic, social, and recreational lines. The University of Chicago will coöperate with the club in creating a community spirit which will work for the best interests of that section of the city. For the present the meetings are held in the parish house of Christ Episcopal church on 65th street.

The advertising council of the Association of Commerce, of which W. Frank McClure is chairman, will meet for luncheon on Monday, Dec. 5, at 12:30 o'clock at the Morrison hotel. Roger W. At a meeting of the financial department of the advertising council on Tuesday, Dec. 13, Joseph Neede will speak on "Making Art Talk Business." The speaker for the luncheon on Dec. 20 will be Dr. Arthur Holmes, president of Drake university.

An exhibition of small paintings by the art committee of the Hamilton club, in coöperation with the Chicago Society of Artists, will be held from Nov. 30 to Dec. 14. An interesting program has been arranged for the opening on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Enoch Vognild is chairman of the art committee of the club and Gerald Frank of the exhibition committee of the Chicago Society of Artists.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound tonight and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

THE BOHEMIANS, INC., PRESENT

ART AND ARCHITECTURE

"The Appian Way" Is Highlight of Lachman Exhibit

By Eleanor Jewett.

There are shadows on the highway
Where the stately cypress grow—
Shades of Rome that marched to music
Played two thousand years ago.

There are shadows in the moonlight
On the age old Appian way—
What will stretch before the footfalls
Of tomorrow as today.

Shades and shadows on the highroad,
Loves that die and wars that pass—
Mirrored where the cypress whisper
Dust to dust—sands in a glass.

ONE of the most successful one-man shows that has been staged in any Chicago gallery for a good many months was that held this last week by Harry B. Lachman in the Drake hotel. Under the kindly guidance of Mary Garden, the exhibition of pictures took on all the friendly aspects that should belong, but usually do not, to a show of this kind. There were pleasantly decorated rooms, flowers, excellent lighting, and a wealth of paintings, each, in turn, worth study and capable of giving great pleasure to those who delight in the presentation of beautiful subjects beautifully.

As has been noted before, Mr. Lachman was, before the war, a student in Paris, practicing photography in order to make money enough to paint. Miss Garden discovered him through a mutual friend, and, going to his studio, fell so in love with several of his paintings that she purchased two canvases, thereby enabling the young artist to follow art alone for some time. The result of this uninterrupted period of work was an exhibit in Paris, from which exhibit the French government bought three pictures.

In the present Chicago exhibition one of the pictures, "The Valley of Grand Andely," belongs to the permanent collection of the Luxembourg. Three other paintings by Mr. Lachman are also owned by the Luxembourg, which makes a total of four canvases—more than any other foreign painter can boast in that museum.

One of the loveliest paintings is that to which the verses at the head of this discussion bear reference. It is called "The Appian Way," and the feeling of old Rome is strong in every detail of it. The eternal qualities of this highroad are evidenced. Between the files of somber trees the shades of yesterday mix with the passing faces of today, and under the sun warmed blue Italian sky the past and the present and the future are as but the sands in the hourglass of time, which fall forever, and forever are caught up again in his palm, to slip anew through the trembling glass of today.

"Woman's Head," by Henri Matisse, a typical painting in the exhibition of modern French and American pictures which is now arousing enthusiastic interest in the galleries of the Arts club.

Among the other paintings characterized by beauty of composition and warmness of treatment are the "Path at Eze," "Villa Muratore," "Columns of St. Peter's," "Santa Saba, Rome," "Via San Teodoro, Rome," "L'Hotel du Commerce," "Paris from Bellevue," "The Bridge, Semur," "The Chateau Gaillard," "Piazza del Popolo," and "My Studio in Normandy."

A group of modern French and American paintings, selected by Forbes Watson, is now on view at the Arts club. Possibly the most piquant among them is "La Poudreuse," by Georges Seurat, a canvas that shows a matron posed reflectively before a delicate dressing table, a powder puff lifted in one determined hand. Were the lady in question to be slightly more efficiently garbed, something of the night life effect of the composition would undoubtedly be lost—but, O, the gain in refinement to the tout ensemble! As it is, one gazes with appreciation at the quality of the work and goes from the quaint perfection traced there to the as quaint, though different, perfection of the landscape by Picasso on the opposite wall.

The landscape is an adorable bit of painting. It is in the mood of an old French song. It is both quaint and charming. A more absolute contrast could not have been devised to play foil to the masterpiece of Van Gogh, "The Plow," that is shown in the next room. This is a powerful piece of realism, painted strongly and with feeling. Van Gogh's power in romancing the unromanceable is shown here, as in his other canvas, "The Chair," across the way.

Among the other paintings are works by Mary Cassatt, Arthur B. Davies, André Derain, William Glackens, Manet, Henri Matisse, Odilon Redon, Renoir, Joseph Stella, Maurice Utrillo, and Vlaminck.

The exhibition will remain open through Dec. 12.

The annual exhibition of work by Swedish-American artists opened yesterday in the Swedish club.

The twenty-ninth annual exhibition of the Atlan Ceramic Art club, which has had a great success in its showing in Gunsaulus hall of the Art institute, closes today. Among those who made the exhibit as attractive as it is are Mrs. Le Roy T. Steward, Mrs. S. T. Mosser, Mrs. Frank Letz, Mrs. Frances M. Lowes, Mrs. Anna Senge, and Mrs. George R. Warner.

Sulphur Clears Rough, Red Skin

Face, Neck and Arms Easily Made Smooth, Says Specialist

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation begins at once to soothe irritated skin and heal eruptions such as rash, pimples and ringworm.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

Tabloid Book Review

By Fanny Butcher.

SHERWOOD ANDERSON has written his new book of short stories, "The Triumph of the Egg," in the manner of the French impressionists. It is either a great book—like "Leaves of Grass," which also came before its time, or it is a brilliant failure to fictionize the body of the mind and the soul. Mr. Anderson has in these sketches and in the one longer story, "Out of Nowhere Into Nothing," sung in prose the glories of the mental functions of his characters as Walt Whitman hailed the glories of the body of man. He has, as it were, taken the minds out of the bodies of his men and women and written the stories of their gropings toward expression. One has a distinct sense of the disassociation of spirit from body. I hasten to say that they are in no sense "spiritualistic."

SHERWOOD ANDERSON.

They are psychic in the unmarred sense of the word.

They are dramas of psyches. On the other hand, they have none of the complications, the knots and unwindings which we are accustomed to in descriptions of mental processes. They have none of the so-called modernism, that method inaugurated in English by James Joyce of emptying in one gaudy splash the entire contents of the mind. They are as simple as the most amateurish story of action. They make the minds which wander about in their pages as unaffected as the simple bodies in which they dwell.

Mr. Anderson has certainly done something new.

Whether that accomplishment will take its place among the great things that America has produced or will be merely the forerunner of a new school of writing I cannot say. Time the verifier will say. I must admit that I do not—honestly—like the way Mr. Anderson writes. He has not a sense of the music of words. His words are not in themselves vivid, colorful, pulsing. He is a poet of ideas, but not of words. But perhaps his power lies in his unadornedness. . . .

Anyway, as he says himself, he . . . made their minds flee out of them.

Their minds came out of them as clear and straight as anything could be.

There is a rumor that the Dial prize of $2,000, which is to make it possible for the most promising young American writer to have a year of leisure for his work, is to go to Sherwood Anderson.

Dost Read Them Before or After Seeing?

Plays in book form? So many, H. C., as you'd never guess. Of those here now there are "Enter Madame," by Gilda Varesi and Mrs. Dolly Byrne (which is a delight); "The Skin Game," by John Galsworthy, and "The White Headed Boy," by Lennox Robinson, all of them with a literary quality. "Swords," by Sidney Howard, and "The Wandering Jew," by E. Temple Thurston, two New York offerings which are not yet booked for Chicago; "Lilliom," by Frans Molnar, that poignant, curious drama which is promised to us this winter; "Dulcy," by George F. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, which made itself so popular here last year and is now delighting New York; "Miss Lulu Bett," by Zona Gale, which has only just left these parts; "Emperor Jones," by Eugene O'Neill, which we remember with shivers and respect, and, in the same volume, "The Straw," which is to be produced this winter in New York; Mr. O'Neill's "Gold," which is also promised soon; John Drinkwater's "Oliver Cromwell," which isn't—and other older ones.

The play's certainly the thing these days.

And here is a profitable question, from answers to which a woman's club might whittle a confab:

Do you prefer to read a play before or after seeing it?

Much is to be said for each preference.

Our Latter-Day Anthony Trollope.

"Peter Binney" is the latest volume of Archibald Marshall's to be available to American readers, although it was one of the first books which Mr. Marshall wrote. It is the story of a middle aged man, financially a success, who envies his son's college life and who, after some difficulties, enters Cambridge and is a fellow student of his own son.

ARCHIBALD MARSHALL.

It is more obviously amusing than Mr. Marshall's other novels.

Very Interesting—and a Good Cause.

"My Maiden Effort" is a collection of the personal confessions of 125 well known American authors, describing their first literary experiences, which was made by the Authors' league for the benefit of their fund for needy authors. It is so full of quotable gossip that I breathe a suggestion to you to read it and provide yourself with dinner table conversation for the hectic holiday essenfests.

But One Can't Know Everything.

"The Red Mark," a volume of perfectly gorgeous short stories—most of them macabre, all of them thrilling—was published a couple of years ago in this country and, despite the good words of the few critics who read them, was promptly forgotten and the name of John Russell, their author, with them. The book came out in England under the title "Where the Pavement Ends" and aroused such interest that the American publisher made a new edition this year, with the English title.

Now the book is achieving some of the popularity it deserves. An amusing situation, it seems to me, and a comment on American popular judgment.

But one can't know everything, can one?

For the Play Hour.

"Producing Amateur Entertainments" is a book which so completely elaborates its title as to require little comment. Helen Ferris has set down all of the things that everybody forgets. She has made a little cyclopedia of ideas, of elaborations of phrases into monologues and pantomimes. The entertainments are the simplest and most amateurish imaginable, and for that reason they are valuable, where more esoteric information might be useless.

Onward and Upward With the Pirates.

Howard Pyle's "Book of Pirates" is the de luxe gift book of the year for boys. It is a collection of the pirate stories which Howard Pyle wrote and illustrated during his many years' association with Harpers' magazine. It is a large volume, rich with gay pictures.

An Awful Threat Ends This.

George H. Doran has published two series of children's books for Christmas, the Jack in the Box series, by Marion Ames Taggart, consisting of four books, "Poppy's Pluck," "The Bottle Imp," "At Greenacres," and "The Queer Little Man," and the Nancy and Nick series, by Olive Roberts Barton, consisting of five volumes, "In Scrubland," "In the Land of Near-By," "In Topsy-Turvy Land," "In the Land of Dear Knows Where," and "In Helter Skelter Land." This fecundity makes me think that now, when every one is saying "buy a book a week" and "read a book a week," they suggested that the authors would have to write a book a week to keep up with the procession.

A Plodder in the Trudge Market.

Mitchell Kennerley has stepped forth again as a publisher of fiction with "The Great Way," a first novel by Horace Fish, a novel which he thinks "will establish Horace Fish as a stylist as no American has succeeded in establishing himself since Hawthorne. It comes as a whiff of lilac spray, after years of heavily perfumed American sex novels and of pungent quick-lunch counter stories such as popularized O. Henry."

There is much, as Sir Roger once remarked, to be said on both sides.

Anyway, "The Great Way" is a thriller, a splashing melodrama with a conversion thorough and vivid enough to do credit to Florence Barclay, and the long arm of coincidence creaking in every chapter. It concerns the life of one Dulce (but not far niente), who, as a plodder in what she calls the Trudge market, as a worm in the muck of life, feels the urge—as the popular novelists say—to higher things, feels the flutter of butterfly wings in her grubby heart.

Dulce, a great believer in fate, is probably the most fate-nurtured heroine you ever met.

That she emerges from the mud as the world's greatest opera singer, finds her lover the husband of her best friend, and renounces him even while her heart is calling, caning to him, proves that, although "The Great Way" isn't a Sunday school story, it is, in the truest sense, a moral story.

"The Great Way" has the stunningest jacket to proclaim its charms that I have seen this year. Also it declares loudly on the back of its title page, "All rights, including dramatic and moving picture rights, reserved," a canny declaration, for it is a perfect melodrama, an organ for a moving picture with all the stops open.

"Gaudy Jousts with Fate" Is Good.

The surge of historical novels seems to be upon us, as Jean Richepin, in the Paris Figaro, predicted a while ago. Two of the most popular books of the last few weeks have been Raphael Sabatini's "Scaramouche," a novel of the French Revolution, and "Torchlight," by Leonie Aminoff, a tale with the Revolution as background and Bonaparte as one of the characters. Napoleon is heard of early in the book and toward the end of the story his career begins.

The author intends to write a series of novels carrying Napoleon through his gaudy jousts with fate.

"Kind Captain, I've Important Information."

Two people in one day told me the news that "The Gentleman with the Duster" is none other than John St. Loe Strachey, brother of Lytton. The elder Strachey is editor and proprietor of The Spectator. The Brothers Strachey have a sister, Marjorie, who is also litt'ry. In America she is obtainable in a little book called "Savitri," a sort of half folkloreish volume about women, written with something of the brilliance of her brother Lytton's style.

American Problems in Fiction and Fact

Ernest Poole Comes Forth with a Vivid Tale of American Opportunity as Used and Misused—Prof. Robert E. Park in "Old World Traits Transplanted" Assembles Poignant Human Documents—In a Fascinating Vade-Mecum Dean Clark ("Tommy Arkle") Makes a Certain Duty Seem a Pleasure.

By Eye Witness

IN the new tale called "Beggars' Gold," by Ernest Poole, a man whom his parents happily named, there is Roosevelt "looking up with a flash of sympathy" and saying, "All right—bully—this is a start. You haven't got it yet—as you say. But keep at it—and write me. . . . Good-by, and good luck to the book. And write me—write me!" There is Debs, "the tall, bald-headed leader who was loved by millions," crying amid "amazing silences that followed roaring waves of sound," "Workers of the world, unite! You have nothing to lose but your chains." There is a little group of Russian boys of a New York tenement district watching a play of their own staging called "The Candle"—a play in which scene after scene of a man's life from birth to death was roughly sketched while "the candle kept burning lower, lower." And "it was as though from all over the narrow, stifling room came a whisper, 'Go on! Go on! Go on! Can't you see how fast it's burning? And it's your life! It's all you have! Stop waiting, wasting, holding back!'" And there are Jews, paying a hard-earned six bits for special tutoring at night, of whom one had thought that "Jews wanted nothing but money" but one finds that "what they want is to gather in everything that has ever been learned everything that has ever been seen—or heard or felt—since time began! . . . They'll earn the whole city before they get through; and, my God, what a cultured town it'll be!"

ERNEST POOLE.

And there is a Chinese boy—learning from an American blundering through thirty laborious years to real service in the world—who carries the lesson to a far country and makes it radiantly to bloom.

Roosevelt, voluble but expeditious and decisive; Debs, inflammatory but aching with excess of tenderness; Russians, fanciful and dreamy but terribly insistent; Jews, acquisitive but laying acquisitions upon the high altar of a new culture, Americans, groping their way toward the light and stumbling; Chinese, catching swiftly the slowly defined visions of the occident and leaping to a goal; young soldiers, hymning themselves into a crusade and, the battle won, turning boorish in the face of an argument—such the men, the types, the races, the clash, the conflict Mr. Poole has crowded into his book.

And yet his scene, as to the essential conflict fought out and the essential problem solved, is a two room apartment in Stuyvesant square. In upon a man and his wife living there "those thousands of days and nights" of thirty years flows that current of influences racial, personal, social, and spiritual, which shapes and directs their lives and makes those lives a source of influences which travel to the other side of the world.

Beggars' gold—what is it? 'Tis that treasury of potentialities within us, of opportunities all around us, of work to do that is not remote but in the dooryard. And for each man the finding of his work and the joyous doing of it—that is the sole happiness, and that is Mr. Poole's tale.

It is a novel of ideas—their recession, return and clash, and their promise of triumph. The note of the book is its great humanity. It neither demands too much nor expects too little of races—ours included—that still are groping.

Though "Beggars' Gold" is a piece of spacious symbolism—of peculiar timeliness in view of the new China now expressing itself in Washington—its characterization is definite, its movement exhilarating, and its style vigorous. A passage of extraordinary beauty brings the volume to a close. It is the vision of the death of "the Beggar Days" and the birth of "the Age of Gold." Outside the pages of Jean Paul Richter one does not often encounter in the prose literature of rhapsody a strain at once so exultant and so nobly visioned as Mr. Poole here releases.

The Newcomers and What They Face.

It would be a pity if any reader allowed the professorial authorship of "Old World Traits Transplanted" to frighten him from one of the humanest and most absorbing books about American life and problems that have appeared since Jacob Riis died. Robert E. Park, professorial lecturer on sociology at the University of Chicago, put this book together in collaboration with Herbert A. Miller, professor of sociology at Oberlin college.

Prof. Park, as he has proved before, has a genius for the assembling and ordering of vast masses of data from which he makes deductions as substantial and safe as they are spacious. The present volume is a masterly specimen of his skill. If it were only a compilation one would thank the authors for a convenient manual and pass on. But it is more than that. It is an intensely pathetic, vivid, and varied panorama of the rebuffs, trials, disillusions, opportunities, and advantages encountered by those coming among us from foreign parts. A special value of the Park method of presentation is that the testimonies of these newcomers, though often ingeniously compacted, are not deprived of their native flavor. The result is testimonies so alive that they throb with drama. There are seldom three consecutive pages without a plot worthy of Ernest Poole. The comments and conclusions which bind together and elucidate these human documents are in no strain of sentimental pity. They are philosophic, generous, sobering. Much of the elucidation and many of the testimonies will bring Americans long established on these shores face to face with certain cultural limitations of their own, with certain of our restricted sympathies which have become the parent of arrogance, and with an amount of downright ignorance on our part that will make us ashamed. That reaction to the book will do us a great deal of good.

Much of the evidence here assembled is of the utmost poignancy, and all of it is provocative of earnest thought.

A more interesting volume to take up in connection with "Beggars' Gold" could not be suggested. "Old World Traits Transplanted" ought to be in the hands of all American journalists, not because they are more benighted than most men, but because their utterances travel farther.

A Book Most of Us Need.

If we were asked to select from the literature of business a model specimen of a business letter, I think most of us would be quite at a loss.

Dean Thomas Arkle Clark selects one for us. It is Abraham Lincoln's letter to Mrs. Clarissa Bishop with reference to the settlement of her deceased husband's estate. It reads:

"A friend of yours, Dr. Cheney, has been consulting me in your behalf about the estate of your late husband. It is not improbable that I shall pass through Le Roy next Sunday; and if I do, I will call to see you.

"I understand your husband died without making a will, and without any child; and if this is so, there is no doubt that you, as his widow, are entitled to half of his real estate and all of his personal property, after the debts of the estate are paid. Give yourself no uneasiness about this whatever; and be tempted into no bargains or agreements, with interested parties about this matter."

Those few score words (112, I make it) are worth particular examination.

They are grouped in four easy moving sentences. The first presents without any laborious preamble the matter in hand; the second tells what the next move in this matter is to be; the third gives the law in the case; the fourth is gently reassuring and firmly admonitory.

In other words, this letter is simple, informing, definitive—and kindly. That attribute of kindliness is infused with the subtlety of a delicate fragrance. One hardly knows how it is brought in. But it is there. Mrs. Bishop must have sensed it, and, sensing it, must have been comforted amid obligations and bewilderments which are singularly vexatious to a woman when she is confronted with legal matters.

I wish I could write pieces like that 112 word letter. [Voice from the rear of the hall: "No, you couldn't turn around in 112 words!"]

What everybody has to do, and almost everybody does badly, is worth a book. Everybody has to write letters; almost everybody "hates" to, and somehow makes a kind of merit of the hating—the inference we are to draw being, I suppose, that the genius of the person so vocal in hating is superior to the detail and drudgery of correspondence.

The truth is that persons of genius have not infrequently bestowed no small amount of genius on their letters. Indeed, the greater the genius the better the letters. Napoleon's crackle with vitality and precision; Johnson's, to the Thrale girls, are charming—like a patriarch's, yet like a lover's; Thackeray's to Mrs. Brookfield, in their combined tenderness, gayety, and courtliness, are almost incomparable; Sterne's, to a multitude of persons, are in a multitude of moods and styles—and invariably it is the appropriate mood and style; Dickens' are numerous, and, considered in connection with his heavy tasks of book writing and magazine editing, are amazing in their vivacity; Scott's are substantial, but full of gusto and good fellowship; Carlyle's—are all Carlyle, now truculent, now piteous, now dreadfully venemous, now fond and solicitous, and always vivid and pungent. And Goethe's and Mrs. Montagu's and Mme. Waddington's (especially those about her husband's mission to Russia), and Harriet Martineau's, and Dorothy Osborne's and Horace Walpole's, and dear Fanny Burney's, and Ibsen's, and——

But a merely casual running over of this most alluring form of the belles-lettres (no pun planned) would soon make an article, and it would be a pretty good one, too.

Letter writing is not the best thing this age does. It is almost the worst.

That is why Dean Clark wrote this book—a sedate little volume, bound in black, admirably printed, good paper, generous margins, and easy to slip in the pocket.

The dean of men of the University of Illinois wrote the book because he was—well, not appalled by, for most human dereliction have lost the power to appall him—but sort of disgusted by the dilatoriness, the ineptitude, the tastelessness, the uncourtliness, the dullness, the diffuseness, and the downright ignorance which the letters of most persons betray.

He minds him of a time when it came in his way to help an Italian fruit vender to whom a student had given a worthless check. The swindler was quickly brought to time and the honest peddler made happy. The dean, having set the matter right, forgot about it. Not so the Italian. In a few days came a letter dated "Urbanana" ("Probably," says the dean, "an echo of his favorite morning announcement at our back door"), and the letter said:

I droped you this few lines to let you know that Mr Devine paid me today so I have get my money from him. I am thank you very much, and I remain your very sincery freind SAM.

* *

Cavalleria Rusticana.

The dean's comment:

"I held the letter in my hand a long time, thinking. I do business mostly with cultivated, educated people; I wish they were all as thoughtful and courteous as this Italian fruit vender. He had already learned something of the personal touch in business through letter writing."

Thus the point is that this book is not based on horrible examples culled from the correspondence of the confessedly illiterate, but deals with the lapses of men of large affairs, of university students, of women supposed to have been schooled in the amenities, of—as the dean puts it in his comment on the rightness of the peddler's intention—"cultivated, educated people."

The most flagrant of the horrible examples appears on page 58. It comprises thirteen lines. It contains seven kinds of gaucheries. It was written by a university student in his junior year.

The dean's style and method are captivating. The scheme of his book is in effect a series of gently ironic little narratives on phases of human frailty and sloth as they betray themselves in letters. Among academic writers the dean's style is almost unique. He can admonish without either boring or patronizing. He never employs the "my dear young friends" strain.

CHARLES G. NORRIS has written a "big" novel
"the sort of novel a man will stay home from the theatre to read."

BRASS

GERTRUDE ATHERTON considers it "of a very high order. It is so well composed, so direct, so free from unnecessary writing, in spite of its length, and so indisputably true to life. . . . I do not think there is a doubt of the enormous success of the book."

FANNY HURST writes: "I think it rides Norris into the rank of foremost American novelists . . . "His convictions ring and his characters live. In fact they lean out of the printed page. I find myself wondering whether I've met them. "I am glad 'Brass' has been said."

WALLACE IRWIN writes: "I consider 'Brass' the finest thing I have read for a long time and if anything to equal it is written by an American during the coming year it will be a marvel indeed."

ZONA GALE declares that "his work is magnificent, and it has this great power . . . it handles its human beings—and they are human—with that directness, and honesty, which more than any one quality the American novel has lacked."

RUPERT HUGHES writes: "It is even bigger and better than 'Salt,' and, like that masterpiece, takes a place at once among the big books of America. It is a 'criticism of life' of amazing truth, bravery, and vividness."

ARTHUR T. VANCE, Editor of The Pictorial Review, wrote: "I sat up until after one o'clock last night to finish 'Brass.' Man, man, do you know you have written a great big book. I am proud of you. It is fine work."

F. P. A. in the Conning Tower of the New York Tribune: "Not counting road-maps, our vacation's most engrossing reading was that of Charles G. Norris's 'Brass.'"

EDNA FERBER

Percy Hammond: "Miss Ferber takes you so closely into the lives of her characters that you are almost abashed."

H. L. Mencken (the Baltimore Evening Sun): "In brief, a novel that stands out brilliantly from the everyday stream of American fiction."

Harry Hansen (the Chicago Daily News): "We are confident that in 'The Girls' Miss Ferber has done her best and most effective work."

Fanny Butcher (the Chicago Tribune): "It is, in the most honest sense of the word, human. It is the human you, the human me."

New York Times: "Congratulations to Edna Ferber!"

F. P. A. (the New York Tribune): "This bard a wreath of laurel hurls at Edna Ferber's book, 'The Girls'."

Heywood Broun (the New York Tribune): "She does achieve an intimacy and fondness for some of her characters which sets them apart as individuals similar. These are not molded, but created."

The Girls
A Novel

"This story is about great-aunt Charlotte Thrift, spinster, aged seventy-four; her niece and namesake, Lottie Payson, spinster, aged thirty-two; and Lottie's niece and namesake, Charley Kemp, spinster, aged eighteen and a half. If you are led by this to exclaim, aghast, 'A story about old maids!' you are right; it is. Perhaps, though, after all, one couldn't call great-aunt Charlotte an old maid . . . perhaps, too, the term is inappropriate for vigorous, alert, and fun-loving Lottie. For that matter, a glimpse of Charley in her white, woolly sweater and gym pants might cause you to demand a complete retraction of the term!"

By the author of 'Firebrand' Trevison, The Boss of the Lazy Y, etc.
Read this swift-speeding and heart-moving tale of a man much maligned, haunted by an evil reputation, who made matters worse whenever he tried to clear himself. It is one of Charles Alden Seltzer's best.

The Well-Dressed Man

What's What, Who's Who, When, Where's Where

By Alfred Stephen B...

NEW YORK—[Special correspondence.]—Much first rate and second rate humor has been put out in print to hold many persons up to ridicule. They have been the shining target of the quipster with a major opinion of himself. Unquestionably, there is a little about contemporaneous attitude one's risibilities, but not so true of fashion, as of other actions of fashion.

It has been well said that there is simply good form carried to extremes and vulgar extremes. For instance, it is mannerly to bow to a woman, it is unmannerly to execute a sweeping and flamboyant a bow that partakes of mockery, rather than courtesy. Similarly, a preposterous fashion may become preposterous because it is overdone.

The well dressed man practices restraint and selective judgment. It follows that admirable advice of Alexander Pope—"Be not the first by which the new is tried, nor yet the last to lay the old aside." He dresses for his own satisfaction, not for others' admiration. He knows what's what, when and where's where as a matter of course, not as a matter of bother. He feels that correct dress is an important thing, to be sure, but that it is far from being the most important thing.

The WELL-DRESSED MAN

What's What, When's When, Where's Where

By Alfred Stephen Bryan.

NEW YORK—[Special correspondence.]—Much first rate and second rate humor has been poured out in print to hold men's fashions up to ridicule. They have long been the shining target of the minor quipster with a major opinion of himself. Unquestionably, there is not a little about contemporaneous dress to titillate one's risibilities, but this is not so true of fashion, as of exaggerations of fashion.

It has been well said that bad form is simply good form carried to vapid and vulgar extremes. For example, it is mannerly to bow to a woman, but it is unmannerly to execute so flourishing and flamboyant a bow that it partakes of mockery, rather than of courtesy. Similarly, a prepossessing fashion may become preposterous because it is overdone.

The well dressed man practices restraint and selective judgment. He follows that admirable advice of Alexander Pope—"Be not the first by whom the new is tried, nor yet the last to lay the old aside." He dresses for his own satisfaction, not for others' admiration. He knows what's what, when's when, and where's where as a matter of course, not as a matter of boast. He feels that correct dress is an important thing, to be sure, but that it is far from being the most important thing.

A Military Survival.

The buckled belt, which marched in some years ago with the all-conquering furore for fashions à la militaire, has stayed, and perhaps overstayed, but it is yet to be seen and, therefore, to be considered. The two button, double breasted overgarment, portrayed, is confessedly a young mannish type, with its belt buckling in front; its shortish full-spread, outcurved skirts; its slash side pockets, peaked lapels, and low gorge. One glimpses such a coat at most games and sport meets, and collegians are partial to it for country and knockabout, particularly to pair off with cap and muffler.

Striking a Match.

Utility has made man's handkerchief a colorless and practical affair, but fashion has made it colorful and picturesque. Indeed, today there are almost as many cheerful patterns and combinations to be met in one's handkerchief as in one's cravat. Aside from linen, and batiste, sumptuous silks and silk-and-linens are also employed with white centers and colored borders or with colored centers and white-and-colored borders. Hence, it is easy to have the suit, scarf, and shirt perfectly matched in the handkerchief, rather than that staring splotch of white which formerly peeped from the breast pocket. The handkerchief pictured is one of the plaidest squares of linen, showing a checked design executed in a contrasting color, as blue, green, primrose, or purple, upon a white background. The monogram is embroidered, also in contrast, within a triangle at the corner.

Certified Checks.

Vari-colored waistcoats, popularly termed "fancy waistcoats," are in no sense a general mode. They are rather for the man who has enough changes of clothes to assure that a waistcoat of this sort does not become conspicuous and tiresome. As illustrated, the vari-colored waistcoat is of cashmere, flannel, and like stuffs, striped or checked. It is five button, single breasted, and collarless. For morning or business dress, it may be worn with the turn down collar and the four-in-hand scarf. For formal afternoon dress, it may accompany the wing collar and the throw-over scarf (English square), as sketched.

Much of the spruce look of evening neckdress is lost by the choice of the wrong tie. The drawing illustrates a very smart effect of the season. The collar is of sufficient height and the bowknot tie is of proper length—snug of center and spreading of ends.

QUALITY AND PRICE

The basic selling elements of successful merchandising are quality and price.

When an advertisement persuades the reader he can get something he wants that is good at a price that fits his pocketbook, the advertiser has hit the bull's eye.

The merchant is only "training an army to kill a mosquito" when he concludes that price and quality must yield to some other inducement. He does not always offer such inducement with malice aforethought. Too often it is done thoughtlessly, perhaps because it reads or sounds well.

Advertising is merely a help in trade. In normal, as well as dull, times, it enables a firm with the right goods and prices to keep in the front rank. But if a firm is to be a continuous success instead of a continuous vaudeville, camouflage must be cut out; first principles must be resorted to.

Merit always has something back of it, as well as in front, and merit tells. Come up (not down) to these fundamentals, namely: quality and price, the needs of the consuming public, their capacity to purchase, and the advertiser's ability to inform and supply.

Too many want to put business on the same basis as a six day war bond drive—a day to buy sweets—a day to save a little money—a day to consume meat, eggs or milk—a tag day. These are all well enough in their time and place. Make no mistake, it cannot be done in business.

Good quality and apt price—the handmaidens of good business—must go hand in hand every day of every year.

PROLOGUE.

A Page from Mamie Potter's Diary.

Dear, dear Diary: You know what a perfectly dreadful mess I made of everything the night I had my party and how I quarreled with HIM. And how unhappy I was for days and days and days. O, I shall never forget that perfectly awful, awful time; but now it is all over. We have made up, and, O, Diary, how gorgeous he is to me now. He's just the most wonderful man! When he said to me in that bluff, manly way of his that I just love, "C'mon, kid, stop your crabbing; let's make up," I could have thrown my arms around his neck and kissed . . . O, Diary, I shouldn't have said that, should I? Well, I don't care. That's just the way I felt. And listen, Diary, while I whisper this to you—I am going to the big game of the year and watch him play the game of his life—he said so himself. It's his last game, as he is going to graduate next June if he can make up a few courses, which I know he can, because I know he can do anything he sets his mind on, and, let me see, where was I? O, yes, and this is the nicest secret of all, Diary, so you'd better listen close . . . He is going to take me to the Gym Dance the night of the Big Game. Won't those snippy college girls be peeved, though? I'll say. I'll get a new dress that will knock them for a row of Chinese pagodas. Well, I must say "Good-night," Diary, but I could write like this for hours and hours, it seems to me, I'm so happy. O, yes, Diary, today I found the loveliest little poem in a paper. I think it was written by that wonderful poet, Charles H. Nesbit. I must write it here for you, Diary. It is for our eyes alone.

LOVE'S PRISONER.

Sweet love has twined his fingers in my hair,
And laid his hand across my wondering eyes.
I cannot move save in the narrow space
Of his strong arms' embrace,
Nor see but only in my own heart where
His image lies.
How can I tell,
Emprisoned so well,
If in the outer world be sunset or sunrise?
Sweet Love has laid his hand across my eyes.

Scene I.—The Big Game, First Half.

For every school there is one game on the schedule that overshadows all the others . . . victory in it will atone for defeat all season . . . defeat in it will blight the laurels of all previous triumphs. . . . Mamie Potter and her friend, Gladys Rankin, have come to see the big game . . . so have Bill Potter and his friend Eleanor (Elmer's sister) . . . it is a glorious day and the crowd is large, loud, and happy . . . three double jointed young men, dressed in curious attire and formidable megaphones, prance out and goad ten thousand insane youths to yell in a demoniac chorus:

INSANE YOUTHS (staccato):
Eeph-a-soph-a-loph-us,
Eeph-a-soph-a-lah,
Knock 'em for a goal, boys,
RAH! RAH! RAH!

(Certainly, nothing could be more concisely put.)

MAMIE (with a fierce little gesture):
If we don't win, it'll be a sin . . .
But gee, we must—we gotta win!

GLADYS (loyally):
Gotta win? I'll say we do;
That isn't all—we'll do it, too.

BILL (to Eleanor):
Here they come . . . say, that's some crew!

ELEANOR (suddenly):
O, there's a fellow I know . . . YOO HOO!

(Strangely enough, he cannot hear her sweet little "yoo-hoo" above the howling of the mob . . . but it is wonderful how Eleanor can be sure she recognizes him in his overstuffed condition, when even his own mother would be somewhat graveled.)

BARBARIC CHANT FROM STANDS (as Red Miller, the demon full back, stalks out majestically):
Red . . . Red . . . Knock . . . 'em . . . dead!
Red . . . Red . . . Stand 'em on their head . . .
Smite 'em on the coco,
Swat 'em on the craw,
Have we not amusement?
RAH! RAH! RAH!

(With which encouragement Miller—after a few necessary preliminaries—kicks off.)

MATH. PROF. (exclaiming rapturously, as he follows flight of ball):
Ah-h-h-h! a perfect hyperbola!

(Which baffles the student sitting next to him . . . a math student, probably, who prefers the comic supplement to the conic section and the co-ed to the co-sine . . . who doesn't.)

MAMIE (as opposing quarter back carries ball back through Miller's team . . . a brilliant open field run.)
I bet that fellow thinks he's smart.
I hope Red takes him all apart.

BILL (in his excitement, slapping Eleanor on back, which jars loose practically all her teeth):
The son-of-a-gun!
Watch him run.
Stop 'im, Red . . .
Knock 'im dead.

(Red dives for him and misses . . . groans from stands . . . moan of anguish from Mamie . . . everybody in vicinity, knowing she is Red's girl, gazes on her with understanding sympathy . . . speeding quarter back finally stopped within 15 yards of Miller's goal line . . . groans from Mamie . . . moans from the stands.)

IMPASSIONED CHANT BY DESPERATE COLLEGIANS:
Hooooooold 'em! Hooooooold 'em!
Hooooooold 'em! Hooooooold 'em!

(Miller's cohorts stiffen and hooooold 'em "in the shadow of their goal post," as it is technically described.)

BILL (ecstatically):
Didya see Red Miller, how he stood 'im on his bun,
When he tried to sneak around there,
And make an end run!

(Meanwhile Mamie is suffering the most exquisite pangs of terror and rapture . . . agonies made still more delectable and romantic by the consciousness that she is the object of so much attention from all the other girls, who immediately 'ook to see how she is taking it when anything happens to her beloved Red.)

Red Fights Like a Demon.

GLADYS: Isn't he a wonder?
Isn't he THERE!
BILL: Gee, he's a curly wolf,
Golly, he's a bear!

(Respite between quarters . . . players all guzzle drink from the community sponge . . . if anything is taking a chance it's the germs . . . the lad who has just picked that sponge off the ground and pressed it to his ruby lips is the same one who always hollers his head off in the Pullmans when he can't find a sanitary cup.)

ABORIGINAL BLEAT FROM SCHOLASTIC TROGLODYTES (as game resumes):
Treat 'em rough,
Treat 'em raw,
Raw, raw raw,
RAW! RAW! RAW!
ZOWIE!

MAMIE (to Gladys):
Isn't he marvelous,
Isn't he wonderful,
Isn't he simply divine!
Lookit him tackle and run and kick!

BILL (disgustedly):
Ah, forget it, you make me sick.

MAMIE (majestically):
I didn't know I was talking to you;
No wonder you're jealous . . . say, what can you do?

BILL (with true brotherly repartee):
I can shut up and watch the game,
I wish some others could do the same.

(Eleanor gives Bill a severe look, and Bill mumbles something about "these sisters get a guy's goat. I don't see what these other guys see in 'em" . . . and the game goes on, with varying fortunes . . . Intermission between halves . . . the coach tells Red what he thinks about him for missing that first tackle . . . tells everybody else what he thinks about 'em . . . gets 'em all fighting mad . . . which is just what he wants. . . . Second half, they commit everything but mayhem . . . Red fights like a demon . . . mob goes plumb crazy as the score piles up . . . Mamie screams, squeaks, and gurgles . . . it's wonderful to be young . . . it's wonderful to be in love . . . but to be young and in love, too . . . that's glorious.)

EPILOGUE.

Darling Diary, IT has happened! It has come—the most wonderful moment of my life, darling Diary—it has come . . . I can hardly write about it! You know, Diary, I went to the game this afternoon and watched HIM play. How wonderful he was! O, I must tell you about Bill and his girl, while I think of it. They went to the game with us. I guess she is all right, but—— She is just the kind of a girl Bill would pick out . . . you know what a dumbbell he can be in such things as that. I wouldn't go so far as to say that she is really dizzy, but then—O, well, I don't need to go into details, do I, Diary? . . . But to continue—tonight HE took me to the dance. I looked swell, if I do say so myself. I had on that little canton crêpe—just like one he admired, and he just loved it. He didn't say so, but I could see how it affected him. He never was so attentive and so GRAND! But it wasn't until after the ninth dance that he suggested an auto ride, and, of course, I was listening. O, I am too excited to tell you all about it! . . . but—we became engaged! And when we came back we didn't dance any more—we just sat back in the cozy corner and planned and he told me all the wonderful things he is going to do and gave me his pin. And now we are engaged! But we promised to keep it secret until he graduates. Good-night, Diary! I am too excited to sleep and too excited even to write any more . . . but I know you will understand.

GEORGE WASHINGTON ESSAYS BY BOYS AND GIRLS

Here is the first installment of essays on George Washington written by school boys and girls. Others will be printed in The Daily and Sunday Tribune every day until the contest closes:

Most Beloved Leader.

George Washington was born Feb. 22, 1732, and became a sturdy lad. His father taught him how to ride a horse well.

Washington was the greatest American. Lincoln, our second greatest American, was a leader in the world for liberty, square dealing, and love toward every man, woman, boy, and girl. Washington fought for liberty, love, and square dealing when the world did not know the goodness of it.

As centuries go on Washington's name will live as soldier, statesman, and most beloved leader of millions of American people; maybe millions of people everywhere will love him.

As a boy he was honest and truthful; as a young man a hard worker, good engineer, and army officer; in middle age a great military leader, successful in spite of betrayals of his plans by Arnold and Lee. In later life he became the first president of our country. He declined to be king and started us on our way toward the great nation that we are.

Lincoln kept up the great work, and it is up to every American boy to try to be as good as the grand, great, and good father of our country.

I love his name and everything I hear about him. We have his picture at the head of our stairs at home.

Tried and True.

Perhaps there is not one among all of America's noted men who has planted in the hearts of all civilized mankind such love as George Washington. Where is or was there ever another character like his?

"First in war," giving the best he had to his people, displaying the greatest tact and ability, fearless and firm; "first in peace," showing his love for home and liberty; "first in the hearts of his countrymen," when at the conclusion of a victorious war with England, brought about by his untiring efforts, skill, and energy, he was elected unanimously for the highest honor his people could bestow upon him, President of the United States, the land he so valiantly defended.

The highest type of a man, a citizen, a shining light of "truth," an open door of "love." So through all ages the name of Washington, "tried and true," shall remain to all posterity emblematical of his wonderful characteristics, honestry, truth, loyalty.

Square and Courageous.

Every American should be proud to speak of Washington as the "father of his country."

When he was a boy of 7 his father bought him a hatchet. With it he chopped down a cherry tree.

When his father saw that one of his beautiful cherry trees was gone, he said sternly, "Did or did you not chop down that tree, George?"

Many boys in his place would not have hesitated in telling a lie. Little George saw that his father was fearfully angry, but he said bravely, trying to keep his voice from trembling, "I did, father."

The stern look vanished from the man's face as he said, "My son, I am proud of you for having resisted temptation."

And George grew up, never forgetting his father's words. He was so fair that he often acted as judge in settling his friends' disputes.

His bravery and patriotism in the last French war led to his being chosen commander in chief of the American troops during the Revolutionary war. Throughout this war he fought hard and bitterly and won many battles. Washington suffered with his men. Many times they were without clothing and food.

If not for Washington and a few other skilled generals, we would still be English subjects, ruled by a king. It was natural then that the people should want him to be first president. He was unanimously elected and served two terms.

Even after he died nobody forgot the kind, noble hearted, courageous man who was everybody's friend.

Ideal of Superman.

Think of some one who is your ideal of a superman. Imagine him.

There would be a dignified and noble bearing to him. He would have the poise of a man.

He would be pure of character, with a warm heart and a cool head, ready to do something for his fellow men.

Undoubtedly he would have accomplished deeds which you and I appreciate and admire, things which uplifted the world, which set a lofty example.

He would be human, capable of the same emotions we are capable of. He would bear himself modestly and Godfearingly at all times.

Now think of George Washington and you have the superman embodying all these qualifications.

Many Sided Character.

To speak of Washington as the "father of his country" is rather to express the affection and veneration in which his memory is held than to denote the qualities and services that have raised him to the first place among the great ones of the nation. The first thought of him is always as the commander of that little army of continentals by which American independence was mainly achieved. But Washington as the general of the Revolution is not the only Washington we know, nor the greatest, if we are to consider him only in that character.

The same eulogy that pronounced him "first in war" pronounced him also "first in peace," and if that denotes the soldier it also denotes the statesman. Great soldiers and statesmen there have beeen, some of them combining the two characters in one person, on whom no such eulogy could be pronounced as that upon Washington—"first in the hearts of his countrymen." Nothing less than a distinguishing love of his country could evoke for a man such a love of his countrymen for him, and here we know the fact to confirm the proposition; for if ever one man above others stood by his country, and for his country without regarding his own interest or feeling, that one man was surely Washington.

Possessed Finest Qualities.

When I think of George Washington, my mind begins to stir, stimulate, and think if there ever will be many more great men like him. Washington was called the father of our country; Lincoln, its saviour. The question is who is the greater man. In my own heart and mind I think they are equal, although it is hard to tell, for they lived in different periods.

George Washington was born Feb. 22, 1732, near the Potomac river in Virginia. His father was rather wealthy, owning five thousand acres of land. At the age of seven, he was sent to a small school. He became a good writer and good at arithmetic. At the age of eleven, his father died. After that his mother was his teacher. When a boy he was manly, stout-hearted, honest truthful, obedient, and kind to everybody he knew. He was called to settle disputes among his playmates, because he was fair minded and square. All the same he could not be regarded as a perfect boy. He had a quick temper which was hard to control.

Washington's qualities and character were the finest and best a man could wish to possess. He believed you should keep your promise, but do not undertake what you cannot preform. He did not believe in speaking evil of the absent, for he thought it unjust. When he did a thing he did it well or not at all. He labored to keep alive that thing called conscience in his heart and mind.

This essay tells you what I think of Washington, but I think he was greater than what I have told you in my essay.

Age 15. Racine High School, Second Year, English Teacher, Miss Kammerer.

Patient and Courageous.

George Washington was the greatest man in every way that America, as yet, has produced. There are no uncalled-for stains upon his memory and his character was that of a true knight brave, mentally awake, and with the spirit of chivalry always foremost in his mind.

It was more than Providence that caused Gov. Dinwiddie of Virginia to trust him, when hardly more than a boy with orders for the French to evacuate the forts along the Ohio river. Washington's power over men was the reason. Gov. Dinwiddie thought that Washington, with his good judgment and power, could carry out his plans better than any one else. Yet Washington did not brag and, with all the honor of his commission, did not acquire what is generally known as a "swelled head."

In later years it was the patience and courage he had shown during that trial that was one of the main things that influenced the leaders of national affairs at the time of the revolution to formally give him command of the American army under the tree that has since been known as the Washington elm.

His courage stood him in good stead when he undertook to establish a new government. With his patience and judgment in handling this new form of government, he has made it possible for us to live in peace and comfort—free people! MARCELLA JOHNSON, Patient and Firm.

Among the greatest of America's noble statesmen George Washington stands first. He was born of wealthy parentage in Virginia, on the banks of a beautiful river. He was well educated and was gifted with high and noble understanding.

The fame of Washington stands apart from any other in history. Faithfulness and justice toward those under him never failed. He had patience and firmness, which every other man who is a leader in political affairs must have to succeed.

It is a duty of every man in America to pay honor to this illustrious man.

After his administration as president he could look back with pride on the progress of the country. And also, before our country became an independent nation, it was through his commanding, his patience, his perseverance that it became so.

After his administration he retired to his beautiful home on Mount Vernon, declining the third office. He died after a short but severe illness 1799, loved and respected by all.

When he died he was worth about $600,000. He was one of the wealthiest men of the time. It was a fortune honestly acquired and deserved. He had no children.

George Washington was always called and will always be called "the father of his country."

Gave Best Years to Country.

George Washington, the father of our country, was born in Westmoreland, Va., Feb. 22, 1732; died 1799. He began to show in his youth a natural born tendency to lead. He was always chosen leader and always proved his courage by doing the most difficult feats.

He developed into a strong, upright man of good character, honest, and religious. He was sent at an early age to do messenger duty for the English. Washington took command of the Continental armies July 3 1775. After many bitter and a few successes, he finally, in one grand piece of strategy, succeeded in capturing Cornwallis.

After this great success the colonies had formed their constitution. He was elected unanimously as the first president of what was to become one of the greatest countries in the world.

He spent the best part of his life in trying to win for America the freedom and independence which we, as citizens of the United States enjoy. He proved his love and patriotism for his country by trying to persevere and make America stand out as the most independent of nations.

From his life we have learned to become loyal boys and girls and to serve humanity and to be honest, upright Americans like Washington, whose memory still stands as one of the greatest men of the nation.

Jewel Among Men.

Great is the man who for his country toils, for he toils not for himself but for God.—Gen. Henry Lee.

A jewel among men, George Washington stood head and shoulders above the crowd, and shone out into the world like a great beacon of light, to guide the weary and to protect the suffering.

As the spider struggles with courage and patience to spin his web, so Washington struggled through his campaigns, both military and political.

After he graduated from school, he took up surveying, and the world soon found that he had much determination, always accomplishing what he set out to do. This was proved to be true during the time he was a soldier.

One of the incidents took place after his defeat at White Plains, Oct. 28, 1776, when, instead of losing hope, he retreated through New Jersey and surprised the Hessians at Trenton, December 26.

His popularity with the people was proved when he was reelected unanimously by them.

He was always dignified, firm, truthful, courageous, and patient. These qualities helped him all through life, not only in making friends, but in being the great man he was.

Although he has joined the immortals, he will always be enshrined in the hearts of his people.

Father of thy country, thy fame will never die!

Loved His People.

He was willing to give up his own comfort for the sake of trying to bring new life and prosperity to his countrymen. George Washington was a man of honesty and loved his people. His people were so eager to show their love for him and their trust in him they thronged to meet and welcome him. He helped us to liberty and peace. He gave us our Old Gory, our own American flag, the most beautiful flag of all nations. The best of men was George Washington, a loyal man to his country.

Was Always Good.

George Washington was a good and loyal President. He loved all his people. He was always good, even when he was a little boy. He could not tell a lie. He wrote in one of his copy books, "Always keep your promises," "Always do your best," and "Always speak the truth." He did not go to a big school. But he liked to read and study. And when he grew up he was first in war, and the best President we ever had. We will never forget George Washington and what he did to help his people.

Noble Figure of History.

Washington was a noble figure to stand in the beginning of a great nation's history. Full of passion and enthusiastic fervor, he so thoroughly learned the lesson of self-control in the school of experience that we think of him only as a self-possessed, calm general and statesman.

His patriotism was boundless. The way he succeeded in overcoming the obstacles that confronted him in the Revolutionary war remains the marvel of mankind.

But the greatest power lies in his character. He met the responsibilities thrust upon him with honesty of purpose and unselfishness of spirit.

All Loved Him.

George Washington, the great general and the first President of the United States, was a very thoughtful man. His efforts to make this country "the land of the free and the home of the brave" were enormous. He put all his energy in this work to make it the best, and therefore he succeeded.

All the people loved him for his kindness and honesty. After being President eight years he was quite old and decided to retire. He soon died and a memorial has been held each year on Feb. 22 for him.

The people after much sorrowing soon felt the loss of his death. No other President did they love so well as he. He is honored to this day and will continue to be for centuries to come.

The most brave, honest, and loving man that ever lived was George Washington, the first President of the United States. His bravery, patriotism, and military skill in the last French war was one of the most heroic deeds done in his life. His name was known far and wide, and it stood apart from all others for the brave and noble deeds he did.

Noble of heart and with a character unmarred, he went through life, not living for himself alone but for those he loved. His word was as the word of God, and his commands and appeals were carried out by the people faithfully and gladly. Day by day he helped the suffering, cheered the sick and needy in their troubles. The small children loved him and he in return loved them, while men and women honored him.

But a good thing does not last long, so on the dismal day of Dec. 14, 1799, this noble man died among his friends and relatives. He had always been true to his friends and had served his country faithfully and gladly to the end. Thousands mourned for him, for the truthfulness with which he had lived never can be copied by mankind. Gone but not forgotten is "the father of our country." His place never has and never can be filled.

MOTORDOM

Important Highways to Be Built by Cook County Program for 1922

By J. L. Jenkins

COOK county's famous good roads board of commissioners does not propose that international competition shall steal from Chicago its highly prized leadership in paved highway mileage. In 1921 the board, recognizing the contention of leading engineers that poor roads cost more than improvements under any building condition, went ahead with a program which has laid thirty-six miles of concrete highways, bringing the county's total to nearly 300 miles. Now announcement is made that in 1922 the board will build 86.48 miles of paving and will put a half million dollars into new bridge work, all because the results in 1921 make the record breaking achievement possible.

The board met no little criticism this year, but, like the Michigan builders, it proceeded with its program and silenced criticism by opening a half dozen new arteries of transportation. It beat prices down while building the needed roads and has taken advantage now of the fall low cost levels to signal full speed ahead to the construction organization already on the ground.

Twenty Miles Awarded.

Bids were received last week for immediate contracts on 20.35 miles of next year's program. These contracts will build 8.23 miles on the 147th street road into Tinley Park, 3.20 miles on the Northwest highway to connect Park Ridge with the north county highway system, 2.73 miles of the Arlington Heights road to connect all of the main highways in the far northwest, 2.83 miles of Lake avenue to connect Wilmette and Glen View, 2.15 miles of the 95th avenue connection, a half mile stretch on Main street, and another half mile on Cemetery avenue in Barrington.

Railroad underpass construction will be a feature of the 1922 program. Among the work planned are new viaducts to carry the traffic under dangerous crossings at Dundee, Orland, on the Lincoln highway west of Chicago Heights, and on 147th street east of Harvey.

Bridge improvements include new work on Sheridan road north of Glencoe, where three bridges have been battered to pieces by heavy traffic; a new structure over the Des Plaines river at River View, and bridges near Summitt, Brookfield, Spring Forest, and Burnham.

Plans are complete but no bids have yet been accepted on the following mileage of concrete pavements: 143d street, 5.36 miles; 95th street, 1.50 miles connecting with Archer avenue, 1.10 miles of Northwest highway and 1 mile of unfinished work on Western avenue.

Is Your Road Here?

Surveys have been made by the county highway department under Supt. George A. Quinlan for 57.15 miles of additional work. Plans will be drawn at once and the bids advertised for in order to get the work started at the earliest moment next spring. This mileage is divided as follows:

Road—	Miles.	Road—	Miles.
95th street	1.25	Sheridan road	.50
Northwest highway	4.20	St. Charles road	1.00
Palatine road	5.50	Halsted street	3.00
Mannheim road	5.50	147th street	4.70
17th avenue	2.00	47th street	2.50
Touhy road	2.00	Touhy avenue	1.50
Bartlett road	1.00	Grand avenue	4.00
Elmhurst road	1.50	Palatine road	3.50
Dundee road	4.00	Cumberland road	1.00
Emilworth road	.25	Vermont road	2.00
Grunspelat road	2.25

In considering this great county program the commissioners have found that the county highway department has completed every important improvement delayed by the war and the building seasons directly following. Supt. Quinlan and his department aids are credited by the commissioners for the marked success of the county organization and for the engineering plans and actual construction of the entire system.

This Year's Contracts.

The thirty-six miles of new pavements completed this year were for the most part laid on contracts let last spring and through the summer. But twelve miles of the improvement was constructed on unfinished contracts of 1920 and 1919. President Daniel Ryan and other members of the board have taken full advantage of the opportunity offered this year by falling prices, abundant labor, free railroad transportation, and available materials.

State work during the same banner building year has completed less than 100 miles of construction on 1921 contracts, while work on the unfinished Lowden contracts has linked up some 200 miles of the through routes planned several years ago by the state highway department.

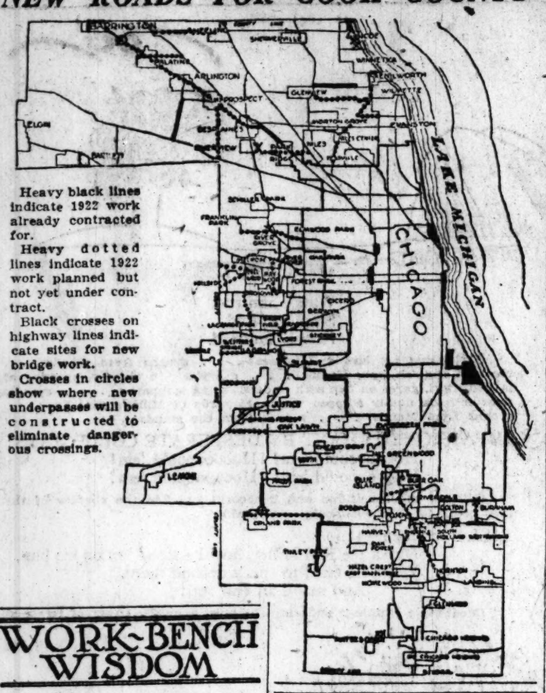
Signal Lights.

The adoption of a uniform danger color system on highways, as used on railroads, is gaining rapidly throughout the country, for the purpose of notifying motorists of various degrees of danger. Red lights and standards are put up to show first degree danger, such as railroad crossings, dead ends of roads, and life bridges. Yellow lights and markers show second degree danger at curves and grades. Green indicates moving or traffic danger, to be used at road intersections.

Huge Survey.

America's far flung net of roadways is soon to be measured accurately in terms of mileage, cost, character of construction, improvement work, and general condition by the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture. The survey, which is the most extensive ever undertaken and the first in seven years, is to be made with the aid of state and local officials and individuals the country over, and is comparable only to the great task of taking the national census.

NEW ROADS FOR COOK COUNTY



Heavy black lines indicate 1922 work already contracted for.

Heavy dotted lines indicate 1922 work planned but not yet under contract.

Crosses in circles show where new underpasses will be constructed to eliminate dangerous crossings.

WORK-BENCH WISDOM

BY H. J. COOK.

Anti Freeze Solution.

Not far off is the time of year when the radiator will shoot a stream of steam into the frosty atmosphere and the motor will heat up and knock as if every bearing had let go. I'll let you in on a little secret that will offset this bugbear of the winter for the motorist.

This solution is known as the "1-2-3 solution." It consists of one part glycerine, two parts alcohol, and three parts water. During the first part of the cold weather this solution can be thinned with water to meet the atmospheric condition.

The glycerine tends to eliminate the evaporation of the alcohol, the alcohol contains the anti-freezing qualities, and the water contains the cooling qualities.

As the radiator requires replenishing, use a quantity of this solution. If you are skeptical of this suggestion, try it out in a pail by letting it stand outside overnight.

Shackle Bolts.

Bang! Bang! Bang! as you cross over the railroad crossing and over rough roads. In most instances this is caused by worn shackles and bolts, the bolts that go through the end of the springs and the little brackets that hold them. Take one out and look it over; if it is worn you will not need any further enlightening. The same may be applied to the shackle holes; when they are worn the hole becomes elongated. Put in a new set; keep them well oiled and tightened.

Equalizing Brakes.

Ever notice how your car will swerve to one side when you apply the brakes quickly? This occurs when the brakes are unevenly adjusted or when one brake is not working properly. Here is the way to try them out: Jack up the rear end so both wheels are off the ground. Have some one apply the brakes slightly, then try both wheels. You can feel when the brake is taking hold on one wheel. Have the one applying the brake hold that position until you try the other brake. The idea is to have both brakes take hold at the same time. Next have your assistant apply the brakes fully and hold them in that position until you try both by standing on the spokes, endeavoring to turn the wheels. Both wheels should be rigid. After the brakes are adjusted the wheels should turn freely. Oil brake rods and pins and be sure you put the cotter pins back in their places.

Indiana Adopts Through Route Highway Policy

THE skip-stop method of road building, which has been such an annoyance to travelers in Indiana, is to be abandoned, according to Lawrence Lyons, the recently appointed director of the state highway commission.

In the past roads in Indiana have been built short sections at a time, leaving gaps between the portions improved. According to Mr. Lyons, the policy hereafter will be to start the improvement of a main road and carry it through to completion, concentrating the available funds on linking up the most important through routes first.

The Indiana state highway system comprises 3,600 miles, of which, at the present time, 414.7 are of concrete, with a total of about 600 miles of hard surfaced pavement of all kinds. During the fiscal year ending Sept. 30 the department laid seventy miles of pavement, largely in scattered contracts let for the purpose of linking up previously existing pavement in which gaps had been allowed to remain. Of this seventy miles completed during the last year, twelve are on the Lincoln highway, west of Valparaiso, and serve to complete the paving of that route from Valparaiso to the Illinois state line, with the exception of that small gap which the Lincoln Highway association proposes to construct as its "ideal section."

In line with the policy announced by Mr. Lyons additional contracts for the pavement of the Lincoln highway east of Valparaiso will be let for the coming year. Attention will also be given to the completion of the Old National road east and west across the state through Indianapolis.

Indiana's annual revenue from motor license fees approximates $2,000,000, which is not quite sufficient to take care of the yearly bill for maintenance.

MISSING PLUG.

In cases where a spark plug is missing because of its sooted condition and no replacement is available, the condition may be overcome by disconnecting the spark plug and installing an auxiliary gap of an eighth or a quarter of an inch between it and the plug terminal.

MOTORDOM

Rear Axle Repays Small Attentions in Service Coin

Proper Lubrication Best Insurance Against Short Life

BY HIGH SPEED.

AMONG the hardest working units in the mechanism of the modern motor car is the rear axle. The function of this part is not only to help carry the weight of the car, but also to transmit the power. Whenever the car is in motion the rear axle is the scene of intense mechanical activity. It will be obvious, then, that this part of the mechanism should have the most scrupulous care. It does not always get it, as we shall point out in the course of this article.

Rear axles fall readily into two distinct classifications—dead axles and live ones. It is live axles which are used on all modern passenger cars. The term "live" simply means that the axle turns. Dead axles do not turn, and they are only used on vehicles having double chain drive.

When we come to examine live axles we find it necessary to classify them still further into three minor classes, known respectively as floating, semi-floating, and three-quarter floating. A further classification comes later, according to the type of gearing used to transmit the power.

The live axle consists principally of a hollow spheroid, from which project on either side two tubes. In the central spheroid is located the differential unit, embodying a number of gears. From the differential project two shafts, which occupy the tubes projecting from the central spheroid of the rear axle. At the ends of these shafts the wheels are attached.

The classifications of floating, semi-floating, and three-quarter floating are derived from the method used in attaching the wheels to the shafts.

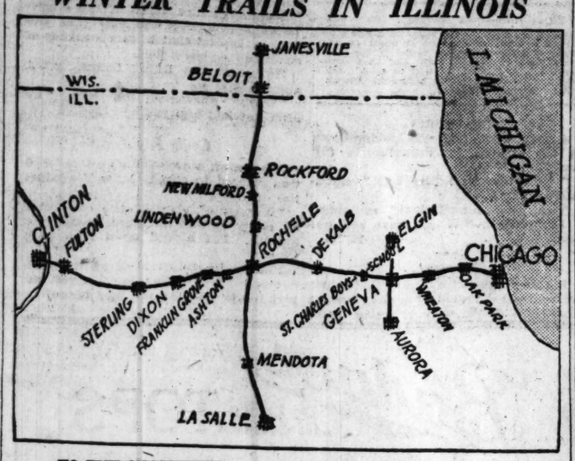
The car owner who has experienced that most tenacious trouble commonly known as "rear axle trouble" will not need the advice to do everything possible to guard against it. Many serious troubles may develop in this unit and only the utmost care will obviate some of them. Axle shafts sometimes break or are twisted out of their proper shape. Bearings are sometimes crushed. The differential gears are peculiarly liable to chipping, which may very probably result in the ruin of the whole unit.

As is generally the case, the principal item in the proper care of the rear axle is lubrication. Never make the mistake of using grease in this part, as used to be the rule. Oil is the proper lubricant for the rear axle. Once or twice during the running season the rear axle should be drained, and after being flushed out with kerosene fresh oil should be put in. Note also that while the part should be kept well filled with oil all the time, an excess is not desirable, for the extra quantity is likely to work down and into the braking system, with the functioning of which it interferes. Sometimes it is necessary to place felt washers in the axle tubes to prevent the excess oil working out in this way.

But lubrication is not all in the case of the rear axle. As we noted above, the function of this part involves the taking of torque or twisting stresses, which involve heavy strains. If the shafts or other parts are not heavy enough breakage occurs. In case a part of the rear axle mechanism breaks, the proper thing to do is to find out the fundamental cause of the trouble. Mere replacement may not be enough, because it is quite likely that there may be a misalignment, that will quickly cause another breakage after the new part is in place. The only thing to do in a case of this kind is to have the offending part lined up and that is a job for the service station or an expert mechanic. When an intermittent hum comes from the rear axle, it may be accepted as a sign that the gears are running out of alignment and the proper steps should at once be taken. Chipping of the gear teeth is a common ailment, and in this case the pieces of metal that have been broken off get down into the mechanism and cause further trouble.

In conclusion let us say that when any noise of a peculiar or unusual character emanates from the rear axle it should be taken as a danger signal and the unit should be got to the service station without delay.

WINTER TRAILS IN ILLINOIS



TO THE MISSISSIPPI.

LAST and best of the four great trans-state highways planned years ago as the first through routes to serve at least half of the population in Illinois is the Lincoln highway, which stretches now without a break in the running from Chicago due west to the Mississippi river and into Iowa.

A final report on the pet transportation line of northern Illinois, made by government engineers supervising federal aid work, shows that the last bad barrier has been removed from the lake front in Chicago to the big toll bridge at Fulton and that traffic can proceed unhindered across the state for the first time this winter.

The route begins with either Washington or Jackson boulevards in Chicago and runs west to Oak Park, where it turns south on either Oak Park avenue or Des Plaines avenue to Roosevelt road. Straight west through Wheaton to Geneva, Roosevelt road is completely payed, with the exception of a few yards of gravel in Wheaton, passable all year. In Geneva Roosevelt road becomes the Lincoln highway, and here the last barrier has been lifted from the new pavement laid to the north and west past the St. Charles Boys' school. Another few yards of gravel at the western edge of Geneva will carry traffic to the new paving.

In De Kalb several blocks of new paving border the trolley line, but traffic is kept moving on half of the road. From this point through Rochelle, Dixon, and Stirling to Fulton the road is open, with but two short stretches of gravel or macadam surfacing.

Wisconsin bound motorists will find an all winter road by running west to Rochelle and turning north over a gravel road which leads through Lindenwood to connect with the ten miles of concrete which takes the Meridian trail into Rockford. Opening a week ago of the new concrete paving on the Meridian trail from Rockford to Beloit offers a continuous paved route from the southern limits of Camp Grant to Janesville.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Question.

How much does it cost per day to run your car?

Where Asked.

Monroe street and Michigan boulevard.

The Answers.

Calvin R. Johnston, 1023 Railroad avenue, Wilmette, chauffeur—I drive our car about thirty miles a day every day except Sunday. We have a seven passenger sedan—a 1912 model—and it is only driven six months of the year. I think the cost of it for gas and oil and tires is about $1.50 a day.

John M. Burns, 4721 North Maplewood avenue, salesman—I have from time to time kept a record on my car, but it got monotonous. I figure it costs me about 10 cents a mile to run my car. That, of course, covers oil, gas, tires, garage, and wear and tear. I drive close to fifty or sixty miles a day. The largest cost is parking in Grant park, as I have to take my car in and out several times a day.

H. J. Clark, 4230 State street, executive—The nearest estimate I can make is that it costs me about $3 a day. That includes gas, oil, tires, and garage rent. I drive about seventy miles a day and my car is a seven passenger touring.

J. E. Schaefer, 947 Leland avenue, executive—I never have figured it out completely. This year it cost me about $1,000. That includes everything. I drive about 12,00 miles. My touring car is out, rain or shine.

J. D. Waldman, Ottawa, Ill., jeweler—I never have tried to find out how much it really costs me. But whatever it is won't break me. It cost me $4.13 to and from Ottawa. That is for gas, oil, alcohol, and storage.

CHECKERBOARD PUZZLES by P. H. Ketchum

Squares on the checkboard are numbered from 1 to 32, beginning at the upper left hand corner and running from left to right, as shown in the diagram. It will be necessary to refer to this for the solution to the puzzle. The white squares are used so the checkers will show.

13	14	15	16

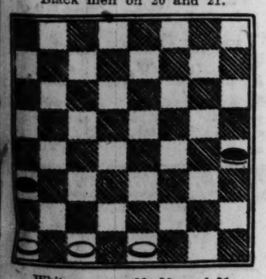
Black men on 20 and 21.



White men on 29, 30, and 2[illegible].

Black to move and white to keep him from making a king out of the man he moves first. You want to pay particular attention to the terms of this puzzle, for there is where the catch lies. Some checker players would be willing to bet that this puzzle could not be done.

SOLUTION TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE.

Black kings on 10, 15, and 19.
White kings on 9 and 27.
Black to move and trade off one of the white kings in not more than six moves.

15 18 9 5 32 28 5 1-A 1 5
27 32 10 14 27 24 14 9 27 23
19 24 Black wins.

A—If 28 32 then 27 23 forces a trade. Of course if white starts out by moving the other king first you win by the same plan.

AVIATION

Marten Shoots from Shoulder in Aviation Talk

Seven Hour New York-Chicago Service Coming

By Morrow Krum

A PROPHECY of great things in the future was made last Wednesday noon at the regular weekly luncheon of the Rotary club in the Hotel Sherman by Glen L. Martin, president of the Glen L. Martin Airplane company, Cleveland, O.

Mr. Martin's subject was "The Truth About Aviation."

"We are beginning a new era of transportation and business," he said. "People say that the automobile is responsible for the wonderful development of outlying territories to big cities particularly in Chicago. Millions of dollars' worth of factories have sprung up merely because the motor truck was able to furnish them with cheap transportation of their automobiles to the city. The airplane will do more than this. It will extend the territory by hundreds of miles.

"It will be within a few short months that an aerial transportation system will be operating between Chicago and New York. I am not speaking of the air mail service. This system will carry passengers between the two cities in seven hours. It cannot be stopped. It is coming just as sure as the sun is coming up tomorrow morning.

"The airplane itself is a small factor in the development of the industry. It corresponds to the rolling stock on a railroad. The big problem for aviators is the establishment of terminal facilities, pilot lights, and emergency landing fields. Once these problems have been overcome, the question has been solved."

LEADER

Walter Smith, veteran air mail pilot, has recently completed a long trip at the helm of the leading ship in an air mail formation that toured the west and did much to advertise the aerial postal service. The formation consisted of six De Haviland mail ships, and when they passed over the towns of the west the citizens were considerably startled at the roar. The mail service has done much to instill confidence in airplanes in the minds of the people. Smith has been flying mail for two and a half years.

In Mexico.

Three Lincoln Standard planes have recently been set up, and it is reported that they are intended for mail service and the transportation of passengers between Mexico City and Tampico. These planes will be used by the Mexican Company of Aerial Transportation.

Pilotless Ship Soon to Wing Way Through Air

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—After the foolproof airplane, the pilotless airplane. That the advent of the latter is not far off is evident from the successful trip of a passenger plane belonging to the Compagnie des Messageries Aériennes from Paris to Amsterdam and return, without the pilot once touching the controls.

The pilot in this machine is relegated to a secondary position, so much so that he can leave his seat at any time without in any way endangering the safe progress of the craft. This effect is achieved by an automatic stabilizer, which proved its efficacy during the long trip.

The stabilizer, besides making flying safer, also makes possible flying at night and in a fog. It is the invention of Georges Aveline, an aviator, who made the round trip as pilot.

AVIATION QUERIES

Law.

"Is there a law prohibiting flying over the business district of Chicago?
"J. L. G."

A city ordinance makes it unlawful to fly over the business and residential districts at less than 4,000 feet. This is an extremely hard law to enforce, due to the lack of aerial policemen and the lack of aeronautical education of other law enforcing officers. However, wise aviators fly high enough to be within gliding distance of a field, so their sense of personal safety makes it quite safe for everybody.

Carriers.

"Has the United States any airplane carriers? K. F. R."

No. Congress has appropriated money for one that is now being built. The Shawmut is an airplane tender.

Insurance.

"Is it possible to have an airplane insured? L. S."

Yes. There is only one airplane in the United States that is registered with the Underwriters' Laboratories, but within a few months all insurance companies will refuse to insure ships that are not registered. Registration insures a complete inspection of both pilot and airplane. Several companies have in the past granted insurance, but the rate has been high. Under the new system the rate is considerably lower.

An Old Question.

"What do aviators do when the motor stops? K. J."

This is the oldest question in the aviation world. Aviators always land when their motors stop.

Air Mail.

"Does the air mail service operate every day? L. L."

Yes, unless there is a cloudburst or a hurricane. During the summer months the air mail service made a record of completing 99 per cent of the scheduled trips on scheduled time.

Down South.

A recent newspaper dispatch reports that the Mexican aviator Jorge Pufiea made a flight from Ciudad Juarez to Tampico in an Italian Ansaldo plane, carrying six passengers.

Kill Him While He's Happy

By Guy Lee

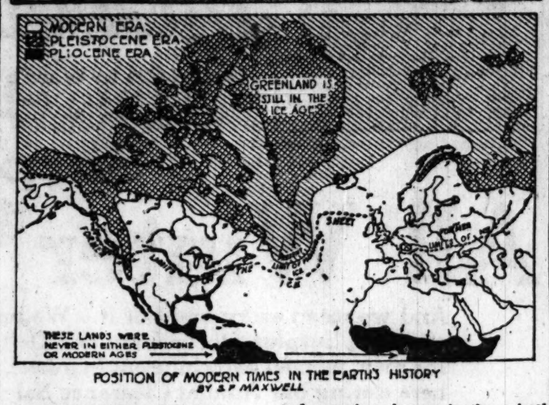
(Dedicated to a particularly atrocious brand of amateur humorist.)

"My job," the Lift Boy said, "is tough,
It's up and mostly downs;
I'm daily met with treatment rough,
With censure and with frowns.
It's killing, what I hear and view,
But worst of all of it
Is that I've got to listen to
The elevator wit.

"He and his gal step on my car
And, talking at his honey,
He hastens to be popular
With stuff he thinks is funny.
He laughs at what he says, the nut,
And then repeats the "hit";
Yet no one has a giggle but
The elevator wit.

"I wish he'd wait until he gets
The gate ere he turns clever;
I care not for the gags he pets,
They nearly choke my lever.
Like all his jests, he is a joke
The point of which is nit.
It would be charity to croak
The elevator wit."

ASTRONOMY



POSITION OF MODERN TIMES IN THE EARTH'S HISTORY
BY S. P. MAXWELL

THE EARTH AND TIME.

THERE was a time not so long ago when men believed that the earth was only four or five thousand years old. Then there came a school of thought that taught it was considerably older and had once been a sphere of molten rock and flaming air. We are only dimly beginning to fathom the depths of past time, and the view is like that of some western scenery, near to the eye but far to traverse.

Scientists now generally doubt whether the earth was ever a globe of flame, in the strict sense of the word. The igneous, twisted rocks which look like the original crust of the earth, turn out to be on more extensive examination great upweldings of lava from local pockets, flows which overran and partly melted and remelted the solid crust of the ground.

They now believe that the earth was built up from "planetesimals," or meteors, as we would call them, by the slow process of gathering them in, grain by grain, which we see going on every night. The tremendous internal fires found deep in the earth they explain as the energy slowly released from the great aggregate of particles by chemical and perhaps radioactive causes, and by compression due to the earth's weight on itself.

The earth is not cooling off to any noticeable degree. Geology teaches us this if nothing else. The normal climate of the earth is a balmy semi-tropical one, punctuated now and then at regular intervals by "revolutions," or geological cycles like sun spots. At such eras the mountains rise, cut up the atmosphere strata, eject large masses of land into the air, and so bring extremes of winter and summer. Sometimes these revolutions bring only a gentle cooling; at other times they are violent, like violent periods on the the sun, and produce deserts, ice ages, and sweeping changes in the animal and vegetable life of the world.

We are in the midst of such a revolution right now. Over half of North America the signs of the ice age are not yet obliterated. Geologically our present weather is an interglacial period. The Pleiocene age has retreated into our southern states and southward, the Pleistocene northward into Canada, and between the two as they pulled apart the modern has appeared.

This is not only true of America, it is true of the whole world. A clinching argument proving that the earth is not changing temperature lies in the discovery of former ice ages whose glaciers overrode, in some cases, tropical forests.

The Permian age was an age of ice and deserts. It was in the Permian age that reptiles and dinosaurs had their rise. This was many millions of years ago. But the Permian age is practically yesterday compared with the Huronian, a dim age in the past when ice a mile deep swept over Canada and to the site of what is now Lake Huron. In those days there was little or no life on the dry land, but the land was here, exactly as it is today. Certain it is, in time man's life is but a small instant in eternity.

Astronomers assure us that if the earth has changed its period of rotation within geological time the change has been small. The rocks bear no evidence of the grinding and fracturing that would inevitably result if the length of the day were to vary. The sun, too, is constant to a degree that staggers human comprehension. There was a time when it was believed to be shrinking, only a few miles a year, true, but enough to count in thousands of years. But we now know that it was the same sun that shone on the earliest known earth that shines today and what we previously considered as centuries in its evolution are little more than seconds.

FARM AND GARDEN

Alfalfa Pests and Blight in West Threaten Honey Crop

By Frank Ridgway.

CARLOADS of alfalfa honey that roll into Chicago every fall from the west may soon be seriously cut short unless something is done to stop ravages of the alfalfa weevil and blight and American foul brood. Chicago's sweet tooth has depended on the honey producing states of the of the alfalfa fields threatened in Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Oregon, and Montana, western ranchmen may have to change to other crops which will automatically drive hundreds of beekeepers out of business and cut down the production of many hundred tons of honey every year, according to Grove A. Koger, a beekeeper near Meridian, Idaho.

For twenty years western bee men have depended on alfalfa to furnish most of the nectar for their bees, producing from 60 to 100 pounds to the colony. While the honey flow was abundant in the middle west this season, the honey crop in the western states was generally short. Idaho beekeepers dropped to an average of thirty pounds to the colony this year, the shortest crop they have had in fifteen years.

The Advance of the Weevil.

In Palmer, Idaho, apiarists were feeding their bees in July. Ordinarily they would have had half of the crop gathered by that time. In the honey producing district of Idaho around Meridian there is a strip fifty or sixty miles wide where the alfalfa weevil has not yet caused any serious trouble. It is on both sides of this region, and is advancing rapidly from the east and west. Mr. Koger predicts that within three or four years the alfalfa fields of the bee districts of the west will be covered with the weevil unless more strenuous efforts are made to keep it in check.

Blight of the alfalfa blossoms was the principal cause of the short honey crop in Idaho this year. With blight and alfalfa weevil and difficulty in fighting the American foul brood, beekeepers in Idaho are becoming discouraged, and some are going out of the business. They are not allowed to move their bees from states or districts infested with the weevil to other parts of the country where the farmers are not troubled with this pest.

It is estimated that Idaho produced only about ten carloads of honey this year, while more than forty cars were gathered in that state last season.

Beekeeping has been a profitable business in the west since ranchmen began growing alfalfa extensively. Like mushrooms bee yards sprang up all over the honey producing states, keeping pace with alfalfa, as more and more acres were seeded every year.

Had Modest Beginning.

Ten years ago Mr. Koger borrowed enough money to pay his way from Rogersville, Tenn., to Meridian, Idaho, where he started into the beekeeping business with six swarms of bees given to him by one of his new neighbors. Today he has 525 colonies of Italian bees and ranks as one of the biggest beekeepers in the west. Last year he produced twenty-four tons of honey, but this year his crop was cut to about seven and a half tons as a result of the blight. He is not troubled with the alfalfa weevil in his particular section, but expects to find the pest in the alfalfa fields around his bee yards next year.

This master apiarist keeps about 70,000 bees in a hive, or a total of 36,750,000 bees in the 525 colonies. Some of his hives were seven stories high last year, filled from top to bottom with honey. A few of his hives yielded as much as 400 pounds. He has thirty acres of land, but never keeps more than 100 to 125 colonies in one location. One hundred colonies are kept in his home yard and from fifty to seventy-five in each one of his outer yards, located five to sixteen miles from home. This allows plenty of territory for the bees.

One of the most important tasks of the beekeeper, Mr. Koger thinks, is to see that the bees are in good condition and are supplied with plenty of feed before they go into the winter. "I go around to all of my hives and make my last extraction about the first of September, and leave enough to feed the bees all winter. In my district where the temperature drops several degrees below zero I find that from forty to fifty pounds of honey are needed to carry the bees through the winter. I always try to leave enough so I will not have to feed them in the spring. I do but little feeding. About the only time is during the period after the fruit blossoms fall and the alfalfa blooms. This does not last more than four or five weeks. We feed mostly to stimulate brood raising."

GROVE A. KOGER.

Grove A. Koger runs a "bee ranch" out in Idaho, the land of honey, and ships carloads of alfalfa honey to Chicago every year. Within ten years he has become a master beekeeper, starting with six colonies in 1912; he now has 525, a total of more than 36,000,000 Italian bees. Last year he produced twenty-four tons of honey.

Iowa Apiarists Meet.

The Iowa Beekeepers' association will hold its annual meeting at Waterloo Dec. 15 and 16.

Farm Bureaus in All but Seven Illinois Counties

There are only seven counties in Illinois without farm bureau organizations. Farmers in ninety-five out of the 102 counties have them, according to Dr. George N. Coffey, state leader of farm advisory work, University of Illinois, and there is a movement on to organize bureaus in the seven remaining counties.

The ninety-five counties have been organized within a period of less than ten years, Dr. Coffey says. In June, 1912, the work started in De Kalb and Kankakee counties.

Dr. Coffey says the farm bureau is seeking to combine the results of practical experience and scientific investigation for the benefit of the business of agriculture.

"Farmers were never in greater need of the assistance which the farm bureau and agricultural extension service can render them than at the present time," is the opinion of the state leader.

"Only those farmers who take advantage of every practical means of increasing the officiency of production and of reducing its cost to the lowest possible limit will be able, according to present indications, to make much profit during the next few weeks, even with all the benefits that may result from present efforts to improve marketing conditions. We cannot have general prosperity unless agriculture is reasonably profitable."

Straw Helps to Keep Poultry Houses Warm

Poultrymen who winter their chickens in old fashioned roomy poultry houses find it a good scheme to put in a loft of straw to fill up all of the excess space overhead, allowing plenty of room for the caretaker to stand up straight. This eliminates an enormous amount of space that must be warmed by the birds, and since hot air is light and goes up the straw will aid materially in keeping the house at a comfortable temperature in cold weather.

The movement of the warm air must be considered in providing ventilation in winter weather. The opening should be made on the south side and near the bottom of the house, rather than at the top, in order that the warm air that comes from the birds on the roosts will not pass up and out so easily.

Experts make the opening on the south large enough to equal about one-tenth of the total floor space.

Fall and Winter Best Time to Test Cows

Dairymen who are just starting in the business and want to eliminate the poor producers in their herd will find fall and winter months the best time to start testing their cows. Cows always produce the richest milk in winter.

An extensive investigation has shown that no matter when a cow freshens, her milk will always be richer in butter fat in winter than in summer, according to C. W. Turner, a Missouri dairy specialist. And it is his conclusion that if a cow calves in the fall of the year she will be at her maximum flow of milk during the time when the milk tests highest.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Exchange Pulpits in Presbyterian Churches Today

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

ONE hundred and eleven Presbyterian pastors have agreed to exchange pulpits today in the various churches of the Chicago presbytery. Only eight pastors have decided it was best for them to occupy their own pulpits. It is church extension day and every phase of church and relief work will be presented. A goal of $200,000 for the year's work, beginning April 1, has been set.

This, it is said, is the amount needed to keep the work going without any plans for expansion.

There are forty-five churches, missions, and settlements and eighty-five paid workers dependent on the board. Many volunteer workers who receive no salaries must have equipment and opportunities for service.

THE REV. W. C. GODDEN.

For a year past the board has systematically sought to make the lay membership acquainted with the various phases of church work. A series of luncheons at the Union League club has entertained 1,000 different laymen. Automobile tours of investigation of institutions have been made. The children of churches being helped have spoken and sang in costume in other congregations. Charts, maps, and industrial work pictures have been exhibited.

Friday, yesterday, and today fifty boys and young men have been entertained in Oak Park families and will be present this morning at a service in First church, Oak Park, and this afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock. The industrial league, economy clubs, neighborhood houses, boy scouts, girl guides, employment bureaus, infant welfare, daily vacation Bible schools, fresh air work, playgrounds, Americanization programs, Sunday schools, church work, and evangelism are some of the many activities carried on by the board. The Rev. William Chalmers Covert is president, the Rev. Henry Seymour Brown superintendent, and the Rev. H. Clyde Smith associate superintendent of the board.

Improvements, some completed, others in process of making, are fitting the Church of the Ascension (Episcopal), Elm street near North La Salle street, for a larger service. The second floor of the parish house has been remodeled into a convent for the reverend mother and four sisters of the Order of St. Anne. The alterations under way provide for a small chapel and a large parish hall. A new dining room and kitchen have been opened. The parish bazaar will be held this week Tuesday to Thursday, part of the proceeds of which will be devoted to the improvements. The Rev. W. B. Stoakopf is rector of the church.

The Rev. Mr. Godden, who is pastor of the Calvary Methodist Episcopal church, Morgan and 78th streets, is the director of a pageant, "The Spirit of the Fathers," which is enlisting the active work of twelve Chicago churches and the interest of all Methodist churches of Chicago and as far down state as the Champaign-Danville district. Mr. Godden two years ago was president of the Chicago ministers' meeting and has been for several years a leader in young people's work. The pageant will be given in Orchestra hall the evenings of Dec. 6 and 7. There will be 450 persons in the various episodes and historical tableaux. The costumes were designed by Raymond Sovey and cost $4,000. The Metropolitan opera company offered $200 for one of the costumes, it is said. The Thoburn church orchestra, assisted by other artists, will furnish the music. The churches which are rehearsing for participation in the pageant are: Berry Memorial, Berwyn, Englewood First, Oak Park First, Oakland, St. Paul's, Auburn Park, Evanston First, Avondale, Austin, Grace, and Woodlawn Park.

A concert will be given in the Immanuel Presbyterian church, 31st and Bonfield streets, next Tuesday evening for the benefit of the improvement fund of the church. The Welsh male chorus has given its services. The Rev. David H. Jones, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Evanston, will preside.

Dr. Charles F. Wishart, president of Wooster college, Ohio, former pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, Chicago, will speak this evening at the Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall, on the subject, "The Palms of Christ." At 7 o'clock Clifford W. Barnes will speak on "The Tales of a Traveler."

A union ministers' meeting will be held tomorrow at 10:30 in the Association auditorium, 19 South La Salle street. The speakers will be the Rev. Howard Agnew Johnson, the Rev. Henry Hepburn, the Rev. Robert Clements, and the Rev. George R. Stair. The Rev. C. K. Carenter will preside.

The Rev. Claude J. Pernin, S. J., and the Rev. William A. Padberg, S. J., will debate the subject of "Divorce" at St. Ignatius church, Glen View and Loyola avenues, this evening at 8 o'clock. Father Pernin will defend the position of the Roman Catholic church and Father Padberg will bring the objections offered by others.

W. D. Boone of Shantung, China, will speak this evening at 8 o'clock in the Lake View Presbyterian church, Broadway and Addison street, on "What Is the Real Yellow Peril?"

The South Congregational church, 40th street and Drexel boulevard, the Rev. T. Y. Williams, pastor, will celebrate today and this week the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the church.

The Billy Sunday choir organized in Boston in 1916 continues to sing at various religious gatherings, and will hold its sixth annual reunion this winter.

The Northern Baptist convention will send a ship of clothing and supplies to the needy in Europe. Chicago Baptists furnished a carload.

Statistics of the Seventh Day Adventists state that last year their gifts to foreign missions were $5,682,972, an increase over gifts in 1914 of $3,573,138. They sold denominational literature amounting to $5,768,972. Their literature is published in ninety-nine languages and in 144 periodicals. They have forty-five publishing houses and maintain thirty-three sanitariums.

Bishop W. F. Oldham, South America, will preach today at 11 a. m. in the St. James Methodist Episcopal church, Forty-sixth street and Ellis avenue.

The Rev. Dr. E. L. Eaton will speak morning and evening today in the Chicago Lawn Methodist Episcopal church. He will also speak each evening this week at a win-my-chum campaign.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

AN EARNEST PLEA TO A THREE YEAR OLD SON.

There's a mercenary essence
In your newest attitude
And I long for recrudescence
Of your former loving mood;
Now a sly sophistication,
Now a caveat emptor flaire
Taints your filial relation
With a sleek and sinful air.

Once you used to run and greet me
With a simple childish kiss;
Now you slowly walk to meet me
With a question such as this:
"Wha yu bing me, wha yu bing me,
Wha you bing me home tonight?"
That's the loving song you sing me;
Do you think that this is right?

And but recently, remember,
When I asked you pleasantly—
(Ah, the memory is an ember
That will burn the heart of me),
"Try," said I, "to be more handy,
Do not break up all your things . . .
And you said, "Dough det some tandy,
All you for is buy me tings!"

Yes, I long for recrudescence
Of your former loving mood,
With no mercenary essence
In your filial attitude,
For I'd have you know and love me
In your future scheme of things,
As a pal—not just a father
Who exists to "buy yu tings."

New Remedy For Constipation

Here is a new reason for all people who are constipated to laugh at the old saying, "There is nothing new under the sun." Here is something entirely new. A product that will combat constipation is a mighty important and useful adition to civilization's necessities. Realising this condition was the real reason for the production of Dilaxin tablets, which are made in exact conformity with the original formula of a prominent chemist for the cure of constipation.

You must understand that Dilaxin gives natural action and is a remedy and not a purge, and contains the necessary elements to correct this human ailment and adjust the intestinal tract to a normal and healthy state. If you have a dark brown taste, bad breath, bilious, torpid liver, Dilaxin is just exactly what you need. By following directions your system will be thoroughly cleansed in a short time and your intestinal tract will be healthy and normal.

Dilaxin is now for sale at all good drug stores the world over at fifty cents per box. The sole distributor is the Marmola Co., 57 Garfield Bldg., Detroit, Mich. Many newspapers and billboards are now publishing advertisements of Dilaxin, but to prove the effectiveness of Dilaxin for yourself you should not hesitate a moment, but get a box from your druggist as early as possible and test them for yourself.

MARMOLA CO., Detroit, Michigan.

New U. S. Government Ships to South America offer comforts and accommodations heretofore unknown in South American travel. In all first-class staterooms the old fashioned berths have given way to specially constructed modern beds, delightfully comfortable and designed to conform to the same good taste which is evident in the furnishing of all staterooms. All staterooms have running hot and cold water, private toilets, electric fans, electric radiators, bed reading lamps. Nearly all have private baths.

The ships are decorated in soft beautiful grays. The furniture is of the finest woods, in the Adam style.

Next sailings are:

RESORTS AND HOTELS

Visitors this week will find the beautiful new Rogers Park Apartment Hotel practically completed. Numerous and unexpected touches of refinement have been added. Tipping of employees has been practically eliminated through such convenient features as artificial refrigeration, circulating filtered ice water and Service Doors. Disappearing portable beds, built-in ironing boards and unusually ample drawer and closet space are features of unusual merit.

The "Rogers Park" plan affords such comprehensive service that the usual high rental might be reasonably expected. However, it is possible to secure suitable accommodations amidst delightful surroundings for as little as $125.00 monthly.

Plan to inspect this delightful new hotel soon.

M-S Anti-Freeze

Non-Evaporating. Prevents Freezing

A Harmless Solution Prevents Freezing at 20° Below

READ

what prominent automotive experts say about POLAR-PROOF M. S. Anti-Freeze. These experts and owners would not think of recommending anything unless they knew absolutely that what they are recommending is far better than the claims made for it. Read what a few of these authorities say:

Your Anti-Freeze solution is the best I have ever used in my 20 years in the racing and selling of cars. It can be depended upon not to freeze, and best of all, it will not evaporate or corrode.
LOUIS DISBROW,
2118 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The tests made on M. S. Anti-Freeze have proved highly satisfactory. . . . The great objection to anti-freeze solutions is they either rot the rubber hose or rust the metals very rapidly. I am unable to say your solution rots rubber or rusts metal.

Gentlemen: We take this opportunity of informing you that after using the M. S. Anti-Freeze in one of our demonstrating cars throughout the entire winter, we are in a position to recommend this solution since we find that the radiator shows no signs of corrosion and that the circulation was not hindered in any way. Yours very truly, McSHANE-HILL.

Gentlemen: Received your letter of the 21st and also the other one which I am sorry to say I mislaid and when I intended to write you I could not locate your letter.

I will say, though, that M. S. Anti-Freeze is the best anti-freeze I have ever used and am filling the SAME radiator with it again this winter, as this winter I will need far more than last year, as the garage I have my car in now has no heat whatever.

Hoping that I will be able to purchase it again at the same garage that had it when I bought it last year, and wishing you success, I am
Very truly yours,
A. N. BUEHLER.

3143 N. Racine Ave., Chicago, Ill., Sept. 16, 1921.

Dear Sirs: I have used M. S. Anti-Freeze in my car from the middle of December, 1920, until the end of May, 1921, during which time the solution showed no signs of corrosion, freezing or evaporation. It is by far the best anti-freeze solution that I know of, because the original cost is also the last one. It does not evaporate, and it never boils.

I intend to use M. S. Anti-Freeze this winter and every other winter when I have a car.
Yours truly,
CARL G. TIETZ.

In the fall of last year I had my Ford car radiator filled with your Anti-Freeze, which I kept in car during the winter, until the spring of this year.

I can only recommend this Anti-Freeze from my own actual experience as a very good thing, as I had no trouble whatever—had no work of putting in alcohol or water, and most of all, had no worry of having radiator frozen up perhaps at a time when I most needed my car. I recommend your Anti-Freeze very highly and intend to clean out the radiator and fill it up again with your Anti-Freeze.
Yours very truly,
AUG. PETERSON, Treas.

Non-Corrosive POLAR-PROOF M. S. Anti-Freeze is a safe solution to use. It positively has no effect on metal, rubber or cotton fabrics. This wonderful solution contains nothing that could possibly harm any radiator, rubber connection, water jacket or pump packings. It is absolutely harmless.

Test Made by Armour Institute of Technology, Chicago

During the past three years POLAR-PROOF M. S. Anti-Freeze has been tested and pronounced 100% perfect by the most prominent chemical laboratories and leading manufacturers of automobiles, trucks and gas engines. A recent test made by the Armour Institute discloses the following:

"At 20 degrees below zero POLAR-PROOF M. S. Anti-Freeze becomes thick—not frozen. Boiling point, 222 degrees. (The boiling point of water is 212 degrees.) No effect on metal, rubber or cotton fabrics. Practically no evaporation." POLAR-PROOF M. S. Anti-Freeze is non-inflammable.

Non-Evaporating When your radiator is filled with POLAR-PROOF M. S. Anti-Freeze you are sure that your radiator cannot freeze, whereas with alcohol or other solutions to prevent freezing you are never sure because evaporation takes place quickly, and in a short time there is not enough non-freezing solution left in the water to prevent freezing. POLAR-PROOF M. S. Anti-Freeze is ALL anti-freeze solution.

Think of it! No more worries about your radiator freezing up—no more hesitancy in taking your car out in the coldest weather. Let it stand anywhere—a few minutes or all night—in the unheated garage or at the curb— your car is protected absolutely from freezing. Draining the radiator is unnecessary. From the time you shut off the engine until you start it again, if there are no leaks, you can KNOW positively that the radiator will not freeze up; that there will be no cracked cylinders, with big repair bills to pay. Your motor will perform with much greater efficiency, because POLAR-PROOF M. S. Anti-Freeze assures uniform operating temperature in the hottest summer or the coldest winter.

One Filling Guaranteed to Last Six Months

FILL YOUR RADIATOR ONCE FOR ALL WINTER—then forget all your worries about the radiator freezing up, and get some real pleasure out of winter driving. Besides the peace of mind, think of the money you save by eliminating the necessity of refilling your radiator over and over again with temporary non-freezing solutions, which usually require repeated replenishing. POLAR-PROOF M. S. Anti-Freeze is absolutely the cheapest—the one safe radiator solution.

Same Density as Water

POLAR-PROOF is a liquid as thin as water. When you use POLAR-PROOF M. S. Anti-Freeze you can be sure that it will not clog the most delicately adjusted thermostat, or leave any sediment anywhere in the cooling system. First it is necessary to drain the radiator, and clean the radiator with a special cleaning powder furnished free of cost to POLAR-PROOF users. Then fill the radiator just as you always do, excepting that you use POLAR-PROOF M. S. Anti-Freeze—and your worries are over for the winter.

Comes Mixed, Ready to Use

POLAR-PROOF M. S. Anti-Freeze is furnished in three and five-gallon cans, each can carefully inspected, tested and sealed. When you, or the filling station, break the POLAR-PROOF seal on a POLAR-PROOF M. S. Anti-Freeze can, you KNOW that you are getting the genuine article; possibilities of substitution or diluting are entirely eliminated. The POLAR-PROOF M. S. Anti-Freeze seal protects both you and the dealer—and your car; remember that.
